"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE FOR MAN OR BEAST

The Daily Review

MONDAY, SEPT. 11, 1911.

The Farm Journal of Philadelphia, with a circulation of 750,000 says: Free trade between the two countries will inevitably follow the enactment of the present measure, and that will mean, ultimately, peaceful annexation.

BOTH WILL LOSE

The question of what reciprocity will do to the Ontario raiser of horses, and the shipper of horses to the west, can easily be settled by asking R. H. Leary, who is in the business, what he thinks about it. Mr. Leary knows from costly personal experience what it means to lose that western market.

From Ontario to the West last year, were shipped $10,000,000 worth of horses. Just think of it, you Ontario farmer, $10,000,000 worth of horses going to the west, and under reciprocity that $10,000,000 annually will go to the United States. Is that keeping Canadian money and Canadian profit at home?

When reciprocity is introduced the west will be flooded by the cheaper American horses, just as they are now beginning to capture the market in spite of the duty. This is admitted. But the Liberals say that reciprocity will enable the Ontario horseman to sell his horses in the Eastern States, instead of to the west. But will they? The price of horses in the Eastern States is lower than it is in Ontario. If the American west with its millions of cheap horses can beat the Ontario horse-shipper out of the Canadian west market, in spite of the duty, as Mr. Leary says, cannot it keep the eastern states market. The cost of freight from west to east is less than the duty now imposed by Canada.

Yet though the Ontario agriculturalists will lose trade with the west amounting to $10,000,000 in a single item, the defenders of reciprocity say that the Canadian consumer will gain enough by the reduction in duties to make it worth while. They have forgotten the farmer in Ontario for the time being.

There is a reduction in the duties imposed in canned vegetables amounting to $2,500. Condensed milk will have a reduction of $3,000 in duties. Canned fruits will have a reduction of $2,000. Edible dried beans and peas will account for a reduction of $3,000.

The taxes that will not be imposed on cattle, sheep, hogs, and other animals for slaughter will be $60,000. Here we have in a few items a wiping out of duty amounting to $77,000. The The farmers of Ontario will lose, say $1,000,000 profit on the sale of horses to the west in a year—at ten per cent.—and the consumers generally will gain amounts like those mentioned, in the removal of the duties. But while the farmer stands to lose a million in one item in Ontario, he will in fact lose many million dollars more through reciprocity, because horses are only one item, and the importations of other animals and other food stuffs will cut him out of a big part of his home market, and unless he reduces his price and profits considerably, he will have to ship to the United States—whence the cheap stuff comes—and will lose the freight, as well as getting only the lower American price.

The farmer stands to lose a lot by reciprocity, and if as the Liberals were asserting when reciprocity was announced, the welfare of the farmer means the welfare of the whole Dominion, let us defeat reciprocity and keep him more prosperous than he will be under the flood of cheap American products. The workingman will vote against reciprocity, because he knows that free trade in farm products, is but the fore-runner of efforts to secure a greater reduction of duties on manufactured articles. The workingman will vote to save himself, and the farmer should vote against it to save himself from the threatened invasion.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A vote for Strattonism is a vote for Pugleyism—and both are synonymous.

Surely no better testimony as to the evil effects of reciprocity in at least the horse trade could be furnished than Mr. Leary's trip with that last carload of horses to Winnipeg.

Ten more days until polling day. Won't those who are not interested in politics, and political questions feel somewhat lost when they pick up the newspapers after that.

R. H. Leary is in the horse business. Will some of those who say that reciprocity will increase the value of horses in Canada please tell that to him?

The reciprocity pact will bring more loss to the farmer than it will bring gain. Reciprocity threatens the prosperity of business Canada. The masses will suffer by it, not gain. Vote against it.

A defeat for J. R. Stratton will be one-twentieth of the work of turning out of power the Grit government. Will the people of Peterborough accomplish this for the cause of Canadian national preservation?

The turning over 150 Liberal votes that were cast for J. R. Stratton will probably decide this election. And there are more than 150 who will refuse to vote for the innocent victim of the Farmers' Bank prosecution.

We have asked half a dozen times of Mr Stratton to tell us who carried away the Farmers' Bank certificate from the office of Finance Minister Fielding at Ottawa. Somebody did. Who was it?

If the Ontario farmers lose a trade of $10,000,000 a year in horses alone, through reciprocity, how much will they lose when other cheaper Yankee products come in and swamp their market?

Surely the people of Peterborough have got tired of being ridden by Mr. Stratton by this time. He talks about the Protestant horse, but the horse that Mr. Stratton has been riding is the Peterborough horse. It is about time the animal bucked up, and gave the rider a toss.

If we were to believe all the fairy stories told some time ago by the Liberals about how rich the farmer would become through reciprocity, it would be necessary to float another Farmers Bank to accommodate all their wealth. And then who would get their money?

There are many good Liberals who are going to vote with the Conservatives this election. Not because they have turned Conservative, but merely because they believe in the principles of Conservatism as at present understood, as against the policy of their own party.

Arthur Hawkes, the editor of the British News of Canada, who is stumping in the cause of anti-reciprocity, will be heard in Peterborough on Tuesday, September 19, at the opera house. He will make a special appeal to the British born in Peterborough, showing them what their duty is in the campaign. Mr. Hawkes is a clever speaker, and a Britisher himself.

The Liberals are on the run all over the country. It is regarded as almost a surety that Aunty Paterson will be beaten in North Brant, and Fielding is having the fight of his life in Nova Scotia with three prominent Liberals stumping the riding against him. These Liberals were former Liberal candidates, and their Liberalism is in no doubt. The landslide is at hand, and surely Peterborough will will not be behind.

The United States sells to Canada three times as much as Canada sells to her. Under reciprocity that proportion will increase. Can we afford to go along and buy our stuff from the United States instead of raising it at home? We shall eventually become the dumping ground for the United States products as we are in some degree to-day. Let us keep Canada for the Canadians, and make the Americans come over to Canada with their branch factories to give work to Canadians, if they want the Canadian market. Free trade with the United States is a condition that can only result in the amalgamating and assimilation of Canadian business with American business.

The Canadian General workingmen are being strenuously argued with by the Examiner these days. Has Mr. Stratton found that they are solidly against reciprocity? It looks like it. As a matter of fact, industrial Peterborough is solidly against free trade in any form, and the farmers of the county are against it. Vote for Burnham and real protection to the people of Canada—protection for the masses whose welfare is more to Canada than any one man's enrichment.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000

Jumped Through Window of Train.

Brantford, Sept. 11.—John Conowski, a foreigner, hailing from Scranton, Pa., jumped through the window of a fast train pulling into Brantford early Saturday morning, under strange circumstances. He was asleep, and the conductor went to wake him up. Touching Conowski on the shoulder the latter gave a start and jumped through the closed window, clearing the tracks when he fell. He was recovered and taken to the hospital, his head being badly injured. The victim is unable to speak a word of English, and it is thought he was under the influence of a nightmare when he was awakened. He will recover.

NOT ROBBING FARMERS

A Reply to the Charge That Manufacturers are Selfish

"Manufacturers are charged with the crime of robbing the consumer and making slaves of their workmen," says Robert McLaughlin, of the McLaughlin Carriage Works, Oshawa. "Now, the reverse of this is much nearer the truth. Implements, carriages, etc., have dropped in price since the National Policy came into force. The following illustration is what I believe is the general rule: In the year 1879 I commenced business with 12 workmen. At this time the lowest figure at which a farmer could buy a reliable top buggy was $175.00. We could then purchase a good carriage horse from $90 to $100, and a general purpose horse from $80 to $90. The farmers will remember the price of beef, pork, butter and eggs in those days. Now, with a staff of over 700 skilled workmen, we are selling a better buggy for $85 than we formerly built for $175, and we pay the farmer about 100 per cent. more for his horse, pork, butter and eggs, and 80 per cent. more for his lumber and timber. At the same time our men's wages have been increased 30 to 40 per cent. Now this is our style of robbing the farmer, and these figures will apply to a considerable extent to many other industries in the country. According to the Government's own Blue Book, recently published, covering a period of ten years, the manufactured goods which the farmer purchased increased in value about 11 per cent., while the products they have sold have increased about 39 per cent."

QUESTION OF ANNEXATION

Hon. G. W. Ross Points Out What Leading Americans Desire

"We have to bear in mind another consideration," said Hon. G. W. Ross. "There still slumbers in the minds of leading Americans the idea that Canada will sooner or later, either from choice or necessity, become annexed to the United States. It is well known that the repeal of the treaty of 1854 was intended to so embarrass Canada commercially as to force us into annexation. This view was openly expressed by more than one American at the time. The Hon. G. S. Boutwell, Secretary of the Treasury in President Grant's second Administration, and a member of Congress at the time of the repeal of the reciprocity treaty, said: 'The fact of the annexation of Canada to the United States, whether the event shall occur in a time near or remote, depends probably upon our action on reciprocity. Canada needs our markets and our facilities for ocean transportation, and as long as these advantages are denied to her she can never attain to a high degree of prosperity. The body of farmers, laborers and trading people will favor annexation ultimately should the policy of non-intercourse be adhered to on our part, and they will outnumber the office-holding class, and thus the union of the two countries will be secured.'

"Non-intercourse was the policy of 1866. Canada needs our markets and our ocean ports, and without these she cannot prosper," said Secretary Boutwell. The farmer and laborers will favor annexation, and so on. Never did Secretary make a greater mistake. Canada did need markets and ocean ports and transportation in those days, but she has found all and more than she lost, notwithstanding the deliberate policy of non-intercourse, which was intended to make her a suppliant for annexation.

"Coercion having failed, annexation through commercial privileges is then announced. Mr. W. R. Hearst, proprietor of The New York American, said a few weeks ago: 'Let us have commercial union first, and political union afterwards.'"

BLIND-FOLD BARGAINING

Canadian Ministers Signed the Reciprocity Agreement Without Information or Consultation

One of the most amazing things about this bargain is the "slap dash" and unthinking manner in which our Government rushed into it. They were utterly unprepared to discuss the subject with the American representatives like business men. They consulted nobody; they took counsel with none of the experts in the various businesses affected; they dug up no detailed information; they deliberately went it blind. Months of consultation with Canadian citizens from Prince Edward Island to British Columbia are considered necessary—and rightly so—before the tariff is revised. But, without an hour's consultation with anyone except professional politicians, the Government felt capable of judging the effects of an enlargement of the free list and a cut in duties on hundreds of other articles never approached before by any revision of the Canadian tariff. The Americans were by no means so unprepared. President Taft was able to transmit to the American Senate, practically on demand, a mass of information touching the history and present position of the farm products affected by this treaty, which is astonishingly complete, even in relation to Canada. Our Government had no such information to lay before Parliament; nor could they get it during the months that the scheme has been under discussion. Their own speakers could, indeed, offer nothing but the most casual and ill-informed defence of the details of the agreement; for there was no systematic or scientific inquiry into the pertinent facts by the Government officials such as the Americans had had.

"Will Mean Annexation"

The Farm Journal, published in Philadelphia, says:—

"Free trade between the two countries will eventually follow the enactment of the present measure, and that will mean, ultimately peaceful annexation."

Seventy-two Chinese students arrived on one steamer in San Francisco to enter U.S. universities.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

He remembered all of them in the night, after he had left her. That the woodsmen would wait for him, he felt sure. He hoped they would wait without bothering the little man in the big office with inquiries over the wire. His Canadian conscientiousness told him that for a young man bent upon success his beginning for the Great Trust Co. was not one calculated to bring him congratulatory messages from headquarters.

To get those thoughts out of his head, he hurried his breakfast and hastened to the girl. They walked together in the fresh air of the August morning.

"I forget much that you told me last night of the work of the forester," said Mary. "But if I remember, I do not like that work. You should have told me more about it when you were studying in the college here."

"But you never would listen to me, if I talked about anything else than loving you," he complained.

"It would have been a waste of time to talk about anything except love," she returned, with a smile that cleared his face. "But if I had known that forestry was a work that would take you into the woods for months when you ought to be here with me, where a girl's lover should be, I certainly should have made you study something else. A girl must not be deserted. There's only a little while to be gay in, you big boy of mine, and a girl that's engaged must have eyes only for her own beau."

"Of course," he blurted, realizing that he was selfish and jealous at the same time.

"'Of course!' she mimicked. "Why should every big beau think that he must lock up the girl like a canary and carry away the key while he dances up and down the lands?"

"I'm not dancing," returned George gloomily. "I'm going away to make good for both our sakes. I ask you to wait and be patient — only that."

"And sit on the perch in my cage and chirp a lonesome little song!" She smiled brightly as she looked up at him, but there was bitterness in her tone, and something else that stirred vague uneasiness. He had hoped that his lady would pin her colors upon his breast and send him out to conflict with a hereoine's faith and courage.

"You do not seem to realize that I am doing it all for you — that I am sacrificing so much in leaving you."

"I understand, now, what you wanted me to do yesterday when you came dashing along, trying to run away from me. You wanted me to cry: Hurrah! I'm glad you are going away from me for long months. I want to be alone. I want you to go into those great woods and suffer and be in danger. I want you to do all that—and do not stop with me for one little hour out of all the long months. Hurry away!' Now, if I had said it, how would you have liked that, Beau Tortoise, with the hard shell?"

He admitted that he would not have liked it, but the admission rather added to his general discontent. It was only when he bade her good-by, that day, took his leave of her in the sanctity of the woodbine bower which their affection had consecrated, that the old faith and understanding seemed to spring into line again between them. For she wept bitterly once more the clinging, dependent little sprite whose impracticability and ellish whims had bewitched his Puritan senses. And he was again the protecting genius, loving her the more passionately the more dependent she became.

For most of his journey North, memory of that sweet abandon of her will and her loyalty to him kept him brave and shut those outer doubts out of his mind. Even her lack of perfect sympathy with his ambitions seemed a precious part of her winsome nature. And by dint of glorification of her weakness he stamped the life out of that little serpent of doubt that had hissed a hint that she might be selfish in asking him to stay — might, later be beguiled into solacing herself for his absence.

II

At Norray Junction, next day, he stepped down out of his Pullman and out of his dreams. He stopped thinking exclusively about Mary Laroche, and began to think pretty diligently about the Great Trust Company.

He had a vague idea that certain woods' gentlemen, named Smart and Niles, would be waiting eagerly and humbly at the car steps. Norray Junction had a station building, a tank on stilts, and coal sheds. Across the platform was a train, plainly ready for upcountry. He saw his trunk banged to the platform from the mainline train, and slammed into the baggage car across the platform! It had been checked through. Therefore, his course was made plain to him. But no inquiring Niles or Smart stood beckoning within range of his vision.

The smoking car, he could see, was filled with men wearing blanket coats and plaid jackets, uniforms of woodsmen. In the door of the car a burly man had braced himself, occasionally thrusting back with fist or moccasined foot men who lurched up the aisle and tried to squirm out past him.

"Another crateful for the Great Trust," said the brakeman, as George reached him. "Shipped pickled as usual."

Sudden hope sprang in George.

"That big man — is his name Niles or Smart?"

"Nope—Kyle, 'Big Bill,' they call him. Great driver for the G. T. Hurrooshes in the new crews."

The forester mounted the car steps. Here at least was a Great Trust Co. man. Kyle's great arms and sturdy legs barred the door with effective triangles. His head reached to the lintel, and a grizzled mustache, that ran down his cheeks and thrust out like horns from his jaws, seemed to bar in the upper part of the door.

He did not make way for George.

"There's a smoking place for drummers in the combination car, back," he advised the young man. "You don't want to get in here. They'll be fighting before they've gone ten miles."

The giant was bluffly good-natured.

"I'm a Great Trust Co. man, myself," George hastened to inform him. "Forestry department. I'm looking for Mr. Niles or Mr. Smart."

He stopped to kick another persistent inebriate back into the smoky interior of the car.

"But they were to meet me here—they were to wait for me here," insisted George.

"Civ Niles and Lynch Smart don't wait, not when they get started for the woods," stated the big man. "Where were you yesterday?"

"I was — was detained," stammered the young man.

"Bad for you. I saw them just before they took the train to come out here to the junction. Told me they'd been sentenced to load themselves down with a tree-college dude. They hollered their part of orders. And, to tell the truth young feller, I reckon they was glad of the excuse to give you the slip. If you've slipped up on your part of orders, you can't blame t'other fellers."

"But they could have waited," George muttered. "It was only twenty four hours."

"You couldn't expect them to roost twenty-four hours on that waterin' tank or this station platform. And they ain't the kind of chaps to go back for fresh starts." He looked George up and down. "Better give it up, hadn't you? It's a big country, north, to find men in when they're tryin' to keep away from you."

"Is that the kind of feelings the employees of the Great Trust have for each other?"

"Well," drawled Kyle, "Civ and Lunch ain't exactly the kind that will grab up a city tenderfoot and hug him hard — not reel hard!"

"I'll go into this car, if you'll let me pass," said George curtly.

"Better ride with the drummers, or the dames, back there!" Kyle was not rude; he was patronising. "Lately, the Great Trust Co. is hirin' g'rillas, mostly — I mean for the gashin'-fiddling job, and I'm takin' in forty ring-tailed ones this trip."

"Gashing fiddling!" repeated the forester.

'Why, cross-cut sawyers, man! Say, you are a tenderfoot, ain't ye?"

After that, and with that humorously tolerant grin beaming on him, George would have gone into a den of tigers rather than back into the protected peace of the rear 'coaches. Somehow, he felt that his future reputation up that way rested on a little display of independence at that moment.

The conductor had signaled a start, and Big Bill stepped back into the car, George at his heels.

The boss strode the length of the "Set down, you arrub-bahoolies!" he bawled. No one raised hand against him. The men only rubbed their smarting cheeks and simpered after him. Some held bottles toward him placatingly. But he refused roughly. "Drink your own boolah juice. Get it all into you, and get over it and ready for work!"

He met the conductor in the centre of the car, and passed to him a little package of mileage books.

"Tear out for Bill Kyle and forty!" He looked over his shoulder, and saw George. "Make it forty-one. You might as well ride on a company ticket," he broke in, when the forester demurred. "The Great Trust Co. pays for its men, and its' got more money than you or I have."

That business transacted, he tossed a man across the aisle in order to established himself alone in a seat, filled his pipe, and proceeded to solace himself with tobacco. George found a place beside a man whom he noticed now for the first time, deciding that he was the only individual in sight beside whom that ride would be endurable.

"Set in, mister," invited this person cordially. "I've been afraid one of them ring-tailers would tumble in here — and if there's anything worse than the sound of wind in a knothole it's a drunken man talkin' to you."

He was an elderly man, and his fuzzy silk hat and sun-faded, worsted suit made him a unique figure in that mob of woodsmen.

"If gents can get together in a bunch like this," he remarked, as George crowded in beside him, "gents better do it. Have a segar?"

But, before he could produce a questionable weed, George had courteously rescued himself by explaining his preference for his brier pipe.

"I smoke a pipe myself, mostly," agreed the elderly man, "but when I'm wearing my plug hat and, as you might say, attendin' to official duty, a segar seems to be more genteel. I'm on official duty, now. I'll make myself known to you. I'm Governor Harriss, of Corran-cache."

He glanced sideways at George to note how the young man took the announcement. His seatmate seemed to be puzzled rather than impressed.

Strange Man Murdered.

Emo, Ont., Sept. 11.—Seeking for a lost colt about 6 p.m. Saturday, Boland Tibbs, son of a farmer of this district, stumbled across a dead body about five miles east of here, which proved to be that of a young man. Examination by the coroner, who was immediately called, revealed the cause of death to have been a shot from a heavy calibre revolver at close range. A search by the police resulted in a letter being found in his coat pocket, bearing the address of Andrew Saman, 21 Foak street, Virginia Mine, together with a socialist emblem and a number of .38 calibre cartridges wrapped in a handkerchief. Later investigation in the vicinity showed that the dead man had been shot in a place some 50 feet from where the body had been found, and that the body had been dragged along the ground by the heels until it had become wedged between two trees, where it had been left. The trail thus made was in direct line with a nearby swamp, where it had evidently been the intention to conceal the body. Two boys of a nearby village testified to hearing two shots in rapid succession earlier in the day.

Tried to Wreck Train.

London, Ont., Sept. 11.—What was apparently a deliberate attempt at train-wrecking was discovered early Saturday morning on the Grand Trunk Railway, a short distance west of this city. The engineer of a westbound freight noticed an obstacle laid across the rails of the eastbound track, with a fast express from Chicago due in a few minutes.

The freight was stopped and the crew removed a heavy rail and reported the matter to headquarters here. The point is on a down grade and trains usually go at a good clip here. That a terrible wreck was averted seems certain.

Crook Gets Five Years.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—Sidney Goodwin, the young crook who stabbed Officer S. Downey, while the policeman was in the act of arresting him on Thursday, was on Saturday sentenced by Magistrate O'Keefe to five years in Kingston Penitentiary.

The magistrate gave Goodwin a severe lecture, declaring that he might have been sent to penitentiary for life for attempted murder. On the charge of housebreaking, Goodwin got two years, but the sentences run concurrently.

Frequent earthquake shocks occur at intervals of five to ten minutes and can be felt in all the surrounding villages, where the inhabitants are greatly alarmed.

OUR COAL WEALTH

An Estimate of the Great Deposits in Western Canada

In the Crow's Nest coal field, between the eastern summit, 4,330 feet above tide, and the valley of the Elk river, there is a coal-bearing area of 144 square miles. This district, owing to its enormous wealth, has been inspected with the utmost care. Eminent geologists and mining engineers have been through it examining it for a number of years. The report made by these men is to the effect that it contains 49.952 million tons to the square mile. Figured out, this indicates a total of 7,193,088 million tons. For various reasons it will be impossible at any time to get all this coal out of the mountains. Perhaps one-half of it may ultimately be mined for human consumption. In that case there will be available a total in this field of 3,596,544 million tons.

Although the deposits in this incredibly rich district are by far the most important yet developed in Western Canada, there are other regions from which immense shipments will in future years be made to consumers in the prairie provinces, and out of some of which large quantities of the needed fuel are being taken at the present time. Mr. Brock, of the geological survey, estimated that the maximum coal content of the coal-bearing districts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was 130,260 million tons. He said:—

In the known coal fields of the three provinces there is, according to present estimates, a total coal-bearing area of 27,136 square miles, with a maximum coal content of 130,260 million tons. This is, roughly speaking, divided as follows:—

	Tons.
Anthracite	400,000,000
Semi-anthracite	860,000,000
Bituminous and semi-anthracite	6,700,000
Coa land lignite coal	36,000,000
Lignite coal and lignite	71,000,000
Lignite	25,000,000
Total	130,260,000

Regarding the total coal supplies of Western Canada, Mr. Brock states in his report that it was impossible to give even an approximate estimate. "There are still," he said, "so many areas known as likely to cantain coal, in which as yet little geological work has been done, notably along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, in the Yukon, and also in the comparatively unexplored portions of British Columbia. In British Columbia there are the deposits on Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands, with reference to the extent of which it is impossible to speak with accuracy."

BRANDED WITH HOT IRON

Little Girl Tells That Parents Seared Her Flesh

Branding with a red-hot iron was the method of punishment Marie Rose Rousseau, Montreal, claims her parents used when she did not do as they desired. She is only ten years of age, and told the court that when she did not sweep the house and wash the dishes as she was told she was struck and beaten by both her father and mother. Not only did they beat and strike her, she said, but they used vile language whenever they had anything to say to her.

Frequently, said Marie Rose, when her parents did not think kicks and cuffs sufficient chastisement for her offences, they would roll up her sleeve and, while the step-father held her, her mother would brand her on the arm several times with a red-hot iron which she, screaming with pain, was helpless to resist.

The parents denied that they were guilty of any such outrage and said the child was very refractory and had to be scolded to make her obey, but they deny that they used more severe measures than to administer an occasional birching when they thought it needed.

The little girl, who is thin and emaciated, is under the protection of the Society for the Protection of Women and Children.

THE FLIGHT OF SEEDS

It is popularly believed that winged seeds from trees travel to great distances on the wind, but the investigations of a British scientist, who has spent much time at Singapore, indicate that winged seeds have a far narrower range of flight than have "powder" seeds and plumed seeds. The greatest distance travelled by the winged seeds of a forest tree observed by this authority was 100 yards. Under the most favorable circumstances, he calculates, it would take this plant just 100 years to spread 300 yards, and 1,500,000 years to spread from the Malay Peninsula to the Philippines if a land connection existed.—Scientific American.

Railroaders May Strike.

San Francisco, Sept. 11.—Men high in the councils of the shop employes on the Harriman System are striving to prevent the 25,000 individuals whom they represent from striking. Other men also high in the same councils are urging drastic measures as the result of the railroad's action. From the statement made by several of the labor leaders before going into the conference, it appears that the meeting probably will last well into next week. The situation would be thoroughly discussed before a decision is reached, they said.

MARKED ENTHUSIASM AT BIG CONSERVATIVE RALLY HELD BY THE CANDIDATE

Tide Has Turned and Indications Point to a Victory for Mr. Burnham on September 21.

It was a large and wildly enthusiastic rally, that was held in the interests of the conservative candidate Mr. Burnham in the central committee rooms, Saturday night. His supporters were out in large numbers, and the remarks of the various speakers pointed to a great victory for Borden and Burnham on September 21.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, as chairman, opened the meeting with the statement that from all parts of the country, came returns which went to show R. L. Borden would be premier of Canada on September 21. Old Liberals he said were coming out and were going to vote against the government because of their opposition to reciprocity, a policy which meant annexation with the United States.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, when called upon by the chairman gave a short address in which he spoke in most optimistic terms as to the result of the elections—a win for Mr. Burnham, to a position where he justly ought to be. This he held was the opinion of good intelligent workingmen and many good Liberals who would not vote for reciprocity.

"All this dirt and slander against Mr. Burnham is unjust and it is not right" said Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy, the next speaker said that everything looked very prosperous for a Conservative win. He approved of the manner in which Mr. Burnham had held himself, and the speaker was loudly applauded when he remarked that the best answer to Mr. Stratton was to overwhelm him on election day.

Mr. George Leader, gave a number of splendid arguments why the reciprocity pact should be voted down and the government turned out of power. He urged that all electors be true to their country, their home and themselves and support Mr. Burnham.

The candidate was given a rousing reception as he arose to speak. He remarked that he rather enjoyed calling a bluff such as the challenge for him to appear on the stage of the Grand Opera House, had been. He was ready and prepared to meet Mr. Stratton, as the Examiner had suggested, but he had not heard of any answer to his acceptance.

He told of the sad condition of the victims in the north country, whose savings of years, had gone with the smash of the Farmers' Bank and referred to the State Pension system which he was interested in, and which would be one of the greatest boons to the old people. The people in the north country will be grievously disappointed he said if the city does not do its duty.

In this election, there were scores of men who voted Liberal before, but who now had no hesitancy in saying they are not voting Liberal this time. It was a matter of saving Canada for Canadians and the British Empire.

NO OTHER FLAG

"We have the Union Jack imprinted on our hearts and should say to them that we do not want any other flag."

In taking reciprocity Canadians ran the risk of losing their nationality. We'd be cowards to jeopardize the old flag we hold. The Liberals were trying to make light of the annexation cry but it was the most serious of the pact. All American journals pointed to annexation. The speaker urged that all stand shoulder to shoulder and resolve like old Sir John Macdonald "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die."

LAURIER A QUITTER

Mr. R. J. Soden followed with a spirited address in which he scored Sir Wilfred Laurier for his part in trade negotiations between England and Canada, and showed conclusively that he was not fit to be the premier of Canada. He charged Laurier with being a quitter, now that he found some of his party leaders deserting him. "Did Borden ever tell you he was going to quit," asked the speaker, "No, although you have turned him down three times, on each occasion he has said they have not yet grasped the situation and I am going to lead the fight for their sakes."

"This isn't a fight for party" said Mr. Soden, "but a fight for the land you live in and the right to call your heart your own."

Other speeches were made and the meeting closed with cheers.

AGED MAN TRIED TO TAKE HIS LIFE BY HANGING?

Report Says He Was Found By His Wife and Cut Down In Time.

About five o'clock Sunday afternoon a report was circulated in the neighborhood, in which the affair is said to have occurred that an old man of about eighty six, had attempted to take his life by hanging himself, in the rear part of his residence near the corner of Bethune and Sherbrooke streets.

One of the neighbors heard cries emanating from the house, evidently coming from a woman. On investigation, the man's wife was found to be crying and appeared to be very much agitated. She refused to explain, and the husband who was walking around the room stated that he thought she was ill. Another report or rumor that was current up town this afternoon was that the man had been found hanging by a rope in the rear part of the house, and that his wife had discovered him in that position and had cut him down.

It appears that the old gentleman although well fixed financially, worries considerably over himself and his wife. Great reticence was displayed by those in the vicinity in giving any information relative to the affair, but the report was not denied.

REFUSED TO TAKE THE BET

Liberals Frightened at Anti-Reciprocity Feeling

While betting on elections is no criterion whatever, as to how they will go, because elections are more uncertain than a horse race. On Saturday night a significant incident was recorded. A prominent Conservative offered in a store to bet $50 to $40, that Burnham would be elected in this riding. And the bet was refused. Whether the refuser was doubtful about the issue or not, he refused to take the bet.

The story that a sport around town had a lot of money to put up at good odds on Stratton was a fake, because when it came to putting up to back his wild talk, all he could finance was $20 and the business was turned into a joke.

There are hundreds of good Liberal workingmen's votes that are going against reciprocity right here in Peterborough. Don't get away from that fact. All that Stratton can do or say cannot stem the tide that is setting in against the Laurier policy. It is a case of a vote for principles and country, rather than a vote for the men as men alone. The personal issue must be sunk, in spite of the Farmers Bank, and reciprocity smashed, so that Canada will not become a back yard to the United States, and tangled up with their business panics and depressions. Keep Canada safe.

CITY AQUATIC CHAMPIONS; KEEN CONTEST FOR LAURELS

W. O. Taylor Won the Lech Trophy in Life Saving Competition — Good Card of Sports.

A fairly large number of citizens went to the lift lock on Saturday afternoon to witness the City Aquatic championships events. The meet was a grand success in every way and no doubt it will be made an annual affair. Mr. J. J. Thompson to whom a great success in every way and no doubt it will be made an annual affair. Mr. J. J. Thompson, to whom a great deal of the credit is due, had charge of the proceedings, and the judges were Rev. W. C. Roddiford, and Fire Chief. Howard and Mr. H. M. Gilchrist. The Y. M. C. A. athletes nailed seven firsts and five seconds in the seven events. a most creditable showing.

Before the arrival of the judges Mr. Thompson and some of his pupils put on a fancy diving stunt from a spring board which was fastened to a pier. They were vigorously applauded by the spectators who greatly enjoyed the exhibition.

The events were well contested and some of the struggles for first place afforded much amusement. The fifty yards swimming event was the most difficult to decide, Wilfred Stratton and Ken Routley having to try it over again before it was settled. Stratton won in 46 seconds.

In the 100 yards senior, W. O Taylor went out of his course about eight yards but finished two yards ahead of C. Leek who was second. The time was 1.28 1-5. The 400 yards single canoe was done in 2.08 4-5 by Donald White with "Jimmy" McMartin a close second.

The 440 yards swim was also captured by Donald White in 9.30. There were five entries and until the last fifty yards, the winner could not be picked. The two winning crews in the 400 yards fours, were from the "Y." The finish was very exciting the winners only being about a foot to the good.

Cavanah won the 220 yards swim for boys in 4.46 4-5, Anderson getting second place. The life saving contest for the Wm. E. Lech shield elicited many ejaculations of admiration as the different stunts were performed W. O Taylor won first place and the right to keep the trophy for a year. Mr. Lech is very much interested in the aquatic events in the city and the shield donated by him is very handsome

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian workingmen.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

HAS RIGHT TO CAST VOTE

Board of Appeal Decide in Favor of J. J. Breen

Three House of Providence Boarders Remain on the List

John J. Breen, whose right to vote in the coming elections was disputed on the first night of the Court of Appeal sittings, was told Saturday night that his name will remain on the voters' list. The decision was handed out by the board after Mr. Breen had been put through a rigid questioning by the contending lawyers as to his movements during the past year. This was for the purpose of establishing the fact that Breen had been a resident of Canada for one year.

It appears that Breen had been engaged to work for Mr. Stratton in June of 1910, and since then at times has been to and fro across the border in the interests of Mr. Stratton. Mr. Breen's former place of residence was in New York, and he said that although he had been a resident of the United States for sixteen years, he had never been naturalized as an American, or ever cast a vote in U.S. elections. Mr. Ruddy put Mr. Breen through a close examination, which G. N. Gordon resented rather heatedly on the grounds that the Conservative lawyer was doing it simply because Mr. Breen happened to be J. R. Stratton's groom. Mr. Ruddy said that he was doing nothing of the sort, and that his learned friend's suggestion was abominable. Judge Huycke was compelled to request both gentlemen to confine their remarks to the court.

The Oriental hotel register was produced, where Breen registered when he came here first. New York was written after his name in the book. Mr. Ruddy contended that Breen was just as much a citizen of the United States as of Canada, but Mr. Gordon's arguments that he had been engaged by Mr. Stratton last June, and during that time had been in Canada a year, convinced the Court of Appeal.

Over half a dozen feeble inmates of the House of Providence were present. They were up before the board. John Sheehan said he had been a resident there two years. He had no property, but his board there was paid by his sister, $10 a month.

"Have you any money yourself?" he was asked.

"I keep a little in my pocket to get a drink," he volunteered.

It was shown that the two who were called before the board were boarders there and not inmates, and were therefore entitled to have their names left on the list.

Several others, whose names were called, were not present.

REV. MR. HARTLEY TO GIVE SERMON

At Harvest Festival at St. John's This Thursday

The Harvest Festival will be held in St. John's church on Thursday next. There will be a celebration of Holy Communion at 10 o'clock, and choral evensong at 8 p.m., then the special sermon will be preached by the Rev. Mr. Hartley, M. A. of Toronto. The offertories throughout the day will be in aid of the clergy Widows' and Orphan's Fund.

Contributions of fruit, vegetables, and flowers, etc., will be most acceptable and should be sent to the church on Tuesday afternoon, or early on Wednesday morning. The decorators will begin their pleasant task on Wednesday afternoon, and under their management, the building will soon assume a festal appearance.

The choir, has, for some time been preparing special music, and may be trusted to provide an attractive program. Large congregations will, no doubt, be present to join in this great act of praise and thanksgiving for mercies received during the past year.

HUSTLERS LOOK GOOD TO TAKE PENNANT ONCE AGAIN

Broke Even With the Maple Leafs in Last Series at Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—The failure of the Leafs to grab all four of the games in the series which closed at the Stadium Saturday afternoon makes it almost certain that Rochester will pin the Eastern League pennant three times in succession. The Hustlers took the opening game of the quartette by 10 to 8, and, after being shut out on Friday by 8 to 0, managed to get an even break on Saturday in games which ended 3 to 2 in favor of the champions and 6 to 3 in the Leafs' favor.

ALL SAINTS' WON FROM ST. JAMES'

Hooperites Finished on Big End of 5-2 Score

Before a small crowd on the Driving Park, St. James and All Saints Football teams battled for one hour and ten minutes in the first game of the Fall series of the Church Football League. The game started out with the blue and white pressing with the result that a corner kick was taken by Monk, who put the sphere a few yards in front of the goal, and by some clever work by Dawson and Downes, Downes scored the first goal of the game for All Saints.

St. James came back strong and in less than five minutes, evened the score by some pretty work on the part of Turner and Miller.

The Hooperites did not like to see the score stand 1 to 1 and went down the field and by some clever work by Dawson and James, Dawson scored on a pretty shot.

On starting the second half, All Saints went right in and laid the game away on ice by sinking three tallies in a row, and then St James' scored their second goal. The game ended with the score five to two in favor of All Saints.

Mr. Pagett gave good satisfaction as referee.

Goal—Hull.
Backs—Gamble and Robinson.
Half-Backs—Vickers, Hooper, capt., and Edwards.
Forwards—Monk, Gash, James, Downes and Dawson.

PARK STREET WON.

On the Patterson street grounds Knox church team was defeated on Saturday afternoon by the Park street eleven by a 4—2 score.

The game was well contested, but the Baptists were always in the lead, tallying three times during the initial period, while the Presbyterians failed to connect for a counter.

Knox has practically the same team as that which played in the spring schedule, but Park street has a few dark horses including Hitchins, one of Havelock's star Midland League performers, and Williams, of the C.G.E. champions. The water brigade is going after first place this time and they are likely to prove a formidable obstacle in the way of the Willis cup holders.

On Saturday, Sept. 23rd, Park street and St. James' come together and All Saints' and Knox clash.

JOHNSON-MILLS FIGHT

The White Man is Expected to Give the Negro a Hard Battle

"'Gene Corri told me when I met him in the city a few days ago," says a writer in London Opinion, "that he does not agree with the general opinion that the Johnson-Wells fight is nothing short of a walk-over for the big colored champion. 'I am confident,' he said, 'that Wells will put up a really great showing.' Whether or no Wells gets beaten, it strikes me that it is the last thing in unsportsmanlike feeling to tell the white man that he has no earthly chance. I hear that Johnson proposes to train for the match at Blackpool. He has changed his quarters lately, and is now living in a flat just off the Marylebone Road. Not finding his present suite of motor-cars sufficient for his needs, Johnson journeyed to Birmingham last week and purchased still another car. 'These buzz-wheels are most attractive things,' he says."

PLAYING FOR THE GATES

The Vancouver Sunset Denies a Rumor Current on the Coast

The impression has gone abroad and is entertained by not a few that the Vancouver and Westminster teams are playing for the gates by the clubs winning their home fixtures and thus keeping the interest at red heat. Nothing more far-fetched could be imagined. No doubt the fact that the clubs are serving up professional lacrosse which has lent itself to all sorts of deals and the fact that the clubs have been able to win their home games have been responsible for the impression, but the writer is of the opinion that either of the clubs would have been willing to sacrifice not a little to win one of the games so far played on the grounds of their opponents.

The one outstanding feature against such a frame-up is the more or less equality of strength of the two teams. We have heard of the Westminster team dropping some games, but very few of them in the past because they looked for bigger gates in the future, but they could not afford to take such chances this season even if the gates were not satisfactory, which they are. Neither the Westminster team nor the Vancouver team, if they had a chance to win, could afford to deliberately throw away those chances, simply for the reason that the clubs are too evenly matched. New Westminster is after all the only team which could afford to take a chance, and with such a strong team in Vancouver this year it would be folly on their part to be a party to any such arrangement.

Some people point to the fact that if the teams are tied at the end of the season there will be home and home games to decide the championship, and these are the gates that the clubs are eager to capture. It might not be amiss to state right here that if the clubs were so anxious for these extra gates they had it in their power to arrange for them by extending the schedule before the season opened.—Saturday Sunset.

YOUNG TOSSERS DOING BEST WORK

Junior Pitchers Bearing the Brunt of the Work on Most of the Winning Clubs

Young pitchers are bearing the brunt of the work on most of the winning clubs in both big leagues, says John Doe.

Youngsters have put four of the five teams in the race in the National League, and have kept two of four American League teams in the first division. The Athletics, White Sox, and Cubs are the only clubs of nine leaders in the two leagues to be successful through the work of veterans.

Lively, Lafitte, and Covington kept the Tigers in first place when Donovan, Mullin, and Summers couldn't work. They won 22 games, more than one-third of the 63 Tiger victories. Lively has won five and lost five. Lafitte has won ten and lost three, and Covington has won seven and lost one. Willett and Works also contributed well to the Tiger victories.

Ford, Fisher, and Caldwell are the newest Yankee pitchers, and have kept the team in the first division. Killilay, with three victories and no defeats, and Pape and Collins, have kept the Red Sox in fifth place or higher, and Vean Gregg alone has won more than one-third of the Nap victories.

Harmon and Salee have won more than one-half of the Cardinal victories and made the Cardinals contenders for the pennant. Ferry and Adams have won almost one-third of the Pirates' victories. Ferry has a record of four victories and two defeats, and Adams 12 victories and six defeats.

Rube Marquard alone has won nearly one-fourth of the Giants' victories. He pitched the Giants into first place three times, and won two games in three days. His record is 13 victories and four defeats. He has pitched better ball than Matthewson and Wiltse.

Alexander and Chalmers of the Phillies are the star pair of youngsters. They have won one-half of the Phillies' victories. Alexander has won 21 and lost five and Chalmers has won seven and lost two.

The Cubs have been kept up by Ritchie, Reulbach, and McIntire, all veterans. King Cole has helped with nine victories in twelve games. Walsh and White, veterans, have been the mainstays of the White Sox.

SOCCER FOOTBALL

The Game is Making Great Progress in European Countries

Soccer football is making great headway in Europe, and it has become the fashion for English teams to go touring on the continent at convenient times. During last Easter elevens from Britain visited France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Austria and even Spain. At Berlin a strong side chosen by the English football association could only draw at two goals apiece. Two years ago when an English team visited Berlin they won by three to one and when representatives of Germany visited England and played at Oxford, England won by 9 to 0. On the recent occasion the English team that went over had previously beaten Wales and Belgium. Nearly all were internationals. It is said the game has taken on wonderfully in Europe and that teams can be found in pretty well every country, not even omitting Turkey and Egypt, where some time ago a military team representing Britain in the presence of the Khedive put eleven Egyptians to rout.

Looks Like Murder.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 11.—The body of seven-year-old Annie Lemberger, who was kidnapped after going to bed at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lemberger, last Tuesday night, was found yesterday in Lake Monona, a mile from her home.

Superficial examination of the body disclosed no evidence of violence beyond a slight laceration of one ear, and a discoloration on the neck, the latter mark indicating that the child may have been strangled.

The only motive for the murder as far as the case has developed, seems to be revenge upon her parents by some person at present unidentified.

The child went to sleep with an older sister Tuesday night and in the morning the younger girl was missing from her bed. An open window in the room gave the first indication that she had been kidnapped.

Astor Is Married.

Newport, R.I., Sept. 11.—Col. John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeline T. Force were married here Saturday afternoon. The ceremony occurred at Beechwood, the summer home of Col. Astor in this city. William Force of Brooklyn, the bride's father gave her away.

The secrecy of the arrangements for the marriage was so complete, and the ceremony was performed so quietly that it was not until some time after the wedding that it was announced authoritatively by a member of the Astor household that the minister who tied the couple was Rev. Joseph Lambert, pastor of the Elmwood Temple congregation of Providence.

Reported Sale of Winnipeg Free Press.

Winnipeg, Sept. 11.—In regard to the story current in the east that Hon. Clifford Sifton has sold The Free Press, it was described here yesterday as unfounded. The report was sent abroad with the idea of creating the impression in the east that Mr. Sifton was not so much interested in politics now and was getting out of them. On the contrary, he was never so much interested as at this moment. It is a fact, however, that more than one interest has tried to buy the paper of late, and has offered big prices for it. The Free Press has sold its present building and is soon to put up a larger structure on a new site recently secured.

Wife Dead; Husband Jailed.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The police and Coroner Craig are investigating the death here on Friday of Mrs. Margaret McEvoy, wife of William McEvoy, a coachman, which occurred under peculiar circumstances.

McEvoy says he woke up and found his wife lying dead on the floor beside their bed. Both parties had been drinking.

McEvoy was arrested Saturday on a nominal charge of drunkenness.

Bruises were found on the woman's body, and according to statements of neighbors, the husband and wife had been fighting. One woman says that a couple of days ago she heard Mrs. McEvoy call "Help, he's murdering me!" during one of the family rows.

Her Head Crushed In.

Essex, Sept. 11.—Mrs. George Reid, wife of a prosperous farmer, was found by her son, Asher, dead in bed at their home in Maidstone Township, yesterday afternoon. The head and face were terribly smashed, the body lay in a pool of blood, and an axe was nearby. The husband is missing and detectives are working on the case. Reid, it is stated, had been drinking heavy recently. A jury was empanelled and after viewing the remains adjourned to meet at the call of the coroner, Dr. Bryant of Essex.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

To Help Dr. Shearer.

Orillia, Sept. 11.—Rev. D. C. MacGregor has resigned the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church here to accept the position of associate with Rev. Dr. Shearer as head of the general assembly's committee on Moral and social reform and evangelism. Rev. Mr. MacGregor had no desire to leave Orillia, but the assembly's committee was insistent, and he finally accepted the call. He will make his headquarters in Toronto, and his work will consist in presenting the problems and opportunity for social service to the congregations of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and organizing them for definite work along that line. Rev. Mr. McGregor will sever his connection with the Orillia church on September 7.

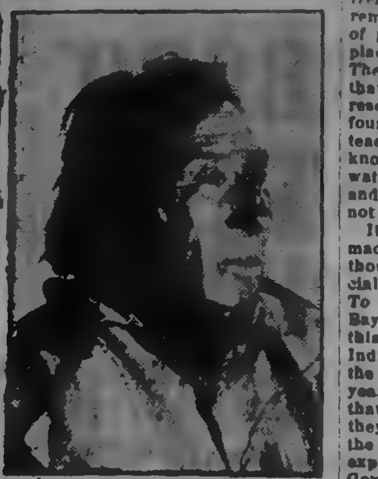
CANDA'S WEST; ITS PROGRESS SINCE FRASER

By W. D. McBride.

THE INDIAN

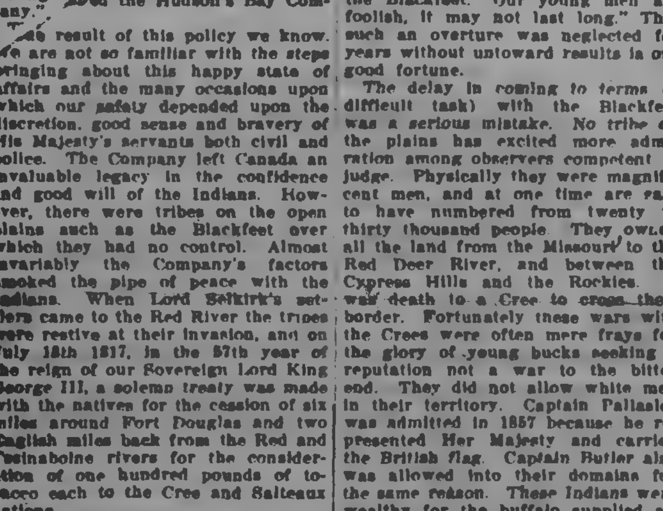
(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Lord Dufferin in the course of a tour of the north west in 1877 in a public speech said "Happily in no part of Her Majesty's Dominion are the relations existing between the white settlers and the original natives so well understood or so generously or so humanely interpreted as in Canada". The causes of this fortunate result were in the view of this eminent statesman "that honourable and generous policy which has been pursued by successive governments towards the Indians of Canada—— under which the extinction of the Indian title upon liberal terms has invariably been recognized as a necessary preliminary to the occupation of a single square yard of native territory". Justly also he gave credit to the good work as an intermediary of the half breed and the "humane, kindly and considerate attention which has ever distinguished the Hudson's Bay Company."



A BLACKFOOT INDIAN CHIEF

The result of this policy we know. We are not so familiar with the steps bringing about this happy state of affairs and the many occasions upon which our safety depended upon the discretion, good sense and bravery of His Majesty's servants both civil and police. The Company left Canada an invaluable legacy in the confidence and good will of the Indians. However, there were tribes on the open plains such as the Blackfeet over which they had no control. Almost invariably the Company's factors smoked the pipe of peace with the Indians. When Lord Selkirk's settlers came to the Red River the tribes were restive at their invasion, and on July 18th 1817, in the 57th year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord King George III, a solemn treaty was made with the natives for the cession of six miles around Fort Douglas and two English miles back from the Red and Assinaboine rivers for the consideration of one hundred pounds of tobacco each to the Cree and Salteaux nations.



AN INDIAN ENCAMPMENT

When Canada took over the West we find many evidences that the Indians desired that a treaty be made with them. They made formal application to the Governor in 1870, and it is worthy of note that Article thirteen in the Bill of Rights drawn up by the Provisional Government of Louis Riel demanded that treaties be made. Between the 25th of July 1871 and the 22nd day of September 1877 solemn leagues and covenants on behalf of her Majesty were made with seven nations for the cession of all their territory from Lake Superior westward to the Rocky mountains and north almost to the Mackenzie river waters. The work was completed in 1899 by Mr. Laird on Lesser Slave lake. Most fascinating is the record of the making of these treaties, and their consequences were far reaching. Treaty number three was made with the Ojibbeway Indians on the Lake of the Woods in September 1873. The solemn obligations assumed by Canada for all time under these treaties could not be better summed up than they were by the Ojibbeway Chief, Mewe-do-pe-nais, in the simple words of a born orator and with the vision of a statesman. He said "Now you see me stand before you all; what has been done here today has been done openly before the Great Spirit and before the Nation, and I hope I may never hear any one say that this treaty has been done secretly. Now in closing this council I take off my glove and in giving you my hand I deliver over my birthright and lands; and in taking your hand I hold fast all the promises you have made, and I hope they will last as long as the sun rises and the water flows as you have said". This statesman had no illusions. He gave up his birthright recognising that the white man would come in and possess it in any case, but the chief placed reliance upon the white man's faith and honour to keep his promises. For all time, while water runs, Canadians were pledged to observe the spirit of this treaty and others like it. It is worth remembering when in "the interests of progress" efforts are made to displace the Indians from their reserves. These Indians made notable requests, that no "fire water" be sold in the reserves, that they own any minerals found on their lands and that a teacher be sent to teach them the knowledge of the white men. Fire water has been kept from the Indian, and he has been taught many things, not all for his good.

It was 1876 before a treaty was made with the Crees about Edmonton, though such a treaty was urged officially upon the Government in 1871. To the good offices of the Hudson's Bay Company is due the credit that this neglect was not serious, for the Indians called upon Mr. W. J. Christie, the chief factor at Edmonton, in that year to demand to know if it was true that their lands had been sold, as they had been told, having heard of the other Indian treaties. Mr. Christie explained the intentions of the Government and advised them to remain quiet till they could be dealt with, but was forced to give them presents, to keep them quiet. He urged upon the Government the danger that threatened if gold were discovered, yet it was five years later before a treaty was made with these fine tribes. Sweet Grass, the chief, made Mr. Christie write down a message to the representative of the Great Mother, in which he said, "I shake hands with you, and bid you welcome. We heard our lands were sold, and did not like it, we dont want to sell our lands; it is our property and no one has a right to sell them"; and again "we want you to stop the Americans from coming to trade in our lands and giving "fire water", ammunition and arms to our enemies the Blackfeet. Our young men are foolish, it may not last long." That such an overture was neglected for years without untoward results is our good fortune.

The delay in coming to terms (a difficult task) with the Blackfeet was a serious mistake. No tribe on the plains has excited more admiration among observers competent to judge. Physically they were magnificent men, and at one time are said to have numbered from twenty to thirty thousand people. They owned all the land from the Missouri to the Red Deer River, and between the Cypress Hills and the Rockies. It was death to a Cree to cross their border. Fortunately these wars with the Crees were often mere frays for the glory of young bucks seeking a reputation not a war to the bitter end. They did not allow white men in their territory. Captain Palliser was admitted in 1857 because he represented Her Majesty and carried the British flag. Captain Butler also was allowed into their domains for the same reason. These Indians were wealthy for the buffalo supplied all their wants. They owned great bands of horses also. Rev. Father Scollen, who was the first white man to settle in Calgary, having a mission church here, says while the Crees regarded white men as brothers the Blackfeet regarded them as demi-gods, superior in intelligence and capable of doing the Indian good or ill. They were proud, haughty and numerous, there being perhaps 10,000 of them in Canada in the sixties. They had a regular politico-religious organization. In ten years their numbers decreased by half and their organization fell into decay. The reason? The Americans about 1866 crossed the line, and established ten or more trading posts, or forts, and this priest declared:—"the fiery water flowed as freely as the stream running from the Rocky mountains, and hundreds of the poor Indians fell victims to the white man's craving for money. Some poisoned, some frozen to death whilst in a state of intoxication and many shot down by American bullets". In 1870 came small pox. In 1874 he describes them as "clothed in rags without furs and without guns". It was this state of affairs that led to the Mounted Police being sent to Fort McLeod to crush out this wanton debauching and robbing under the name of trade. In a few years they had regained much of their former prosperity. Father Scollen is authority for the statement that in 1875 the Sioux Indians who were at war with the United States wanted the Blackfeet to make an alliance with them to exterminate all white men in the land. They trusted the police, but they feared they were to be dispossessed of their lands. It was high time to conclude a treaty with this tribe. At Blackfoot Crossing in September, 1877, Governor Laird concluded a solemn treaty. Crowfoot, their great chief, in his speech said "If the Police had not come where would we be now? Bad men and bad whiskey were killing us so fast that very few of us would have been left today." That Crowfoot spoke within the facts is evident. On the 7th of June, 1873, in the Cypress Hills, near a port kept by one Abe Farnell thirty four men, women and children were ruthlessly slaughtered by a party from Fort Benton, Missouri, who were in search of stolen horses. Farnell had told them he was sure the Indians did not have their horses, but advised the Indians to give up some of their own to placate these men, which they were apparently prepared to do. This is the only instance on record where Indians were massacred in the Canadian West, and this cruel, wanton outrage was one of the things which stirred up Canada to send the mounted police to bring law and order to the West. In the United States "a bloody ground" has always marked the frontier. This outrage and the work of the whiskey traders in Southern Alberta shows clearly how it came about in part at least. At the time of the treaty with the Blackfeet in 1877 the United States had over 5,000 troops fighting Indians, while there were only about 200 men and officers of the police force stationed in Southern Alberta. The American Indians also invaded Canada. In 1876 a band of nearly 3,000 with 3500 horses came to Wood Mountain and told the police they had been told by their grandfathers they would find peace in the land of the British. After General Custer's force was annihilated, Sitting Bull with 135 lodges crossed the border, and joined them. This was a time of anxiety. Sitting Bull maintained that he was a British subject and always had been, and claimed protection as such. Those warriors who had made such a stand against the United States Army were watched by a few hundred Mounted Police only, and the peace was never disturbed. Nevertheless Canada heaved a sigh of relief when in July 1881 Sitting Bull surrendered to the United States at Fort Burford. During the rebellion it was necessary to impress the Western Indians by a display of force and while this had an effect no doubt the words of such men as Father Lacombe counted with the Red Men. Crowfoot and his band who made a treaty only in 1887 were starving owing to the disappearance of the buffalo as early as 1879. Yet he kept his treaty. The disappearance of the buffalo while it was a catastrophe to the Indians made for peace in that it enabled the police to confine the Indians to their reserves. It also forced them to change their mode of life. One cannot regard it now as other than a national blessing that the West was closed to white adventurers from 1821 to 1870. Consider what would have been almost inevitably produced by a few hundred traders of the stamp of the Fort Benton marauders scattered over the country. In Canada law and order have been established on a basis of absolute equality before the law of red men and white. Fortunately also there has never been any marked prejudice of colour against the Indian. In deportment he is a gentleman, and also he has shown himself a man of honour on the whole. The savage cry "the only good Indian is a dead Indian" has never found an echo in Canada. "On the contrary" said the Commissioner of the Royal North West Mounted Police in an address before the Regina Canadian Club "we have boasted that the Indian shall receive the same treatment as ourselves. I appeal to the old timers, and they will bear me out, that an Indian never appealed to us in vain."

This is a record more creditable to our civilization than all our advance in commerce. It is also a heritage for our future in dealing with the Red Man who is trying to meet new conditions of life.

GALLANT MEN!

More Attacks on Laws That Help Women.

Following the gallant and heroic attack of a few miserly profitmongers upon the women's eight-hour law in California, notice has been given by some of the women fighters in Ohio and Missouri that they intend to test the laws enacted in those states recently establishing a maximum of 54 hours per week for female labor.

Although the best medical authorities in the world agree that modern industrial conditions are shattering the health and ruining the lives of countless thousands of the weaker sex and that shorter hours of toil are imperative as a protection to posterity and although I notice that these same greedy employers, who are everlastingly demanding that workingmen obey the laws, studiously avoid placing their own women and children on the treadmill to grind out profits, they are determined that the women and children of the working class shall not escape with an extra hour or two of freedom, so they are going to fight in the courts to quash this "special privilege."

Can a Dog Count?

If this question means, "Can a dog distinguish three things from four things?" it must undoubtedly be answered in the affirmative, as the experiments of Zellony in Russia clearly show this to be the case. It is quite possible, however, to make this distinction without counting at all in the ordinary sense of the word. Human beings do it habitually for small numbers, and some have been able to accomplish the feat in the case of quite large groups. If we see three or four dots on paper, we know the number at once without counting at all; if a clock strikes one of the "wee sma'" hours, the number is similarly recognized without counting. If the group of dots were larger — say ten or twelve or if the hour were near noon, most of us would have to count, but persons have been known to tell the number of sheep on a hillside up to forty or fifty without enumeration. It is in some such way as this, doubtless, that a dog apprehends a number.

IMPERIALISM

THE SOLUTION

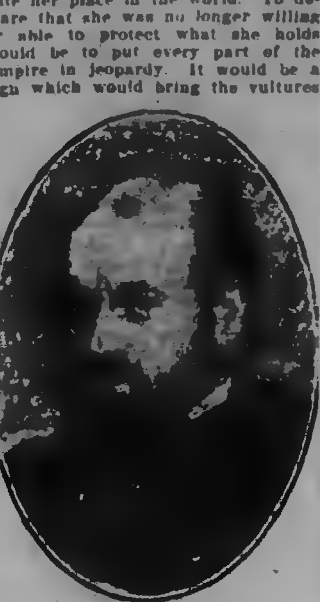
By Dr. Andrew Macphail

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

In a former article the problem involved in the term Imperialism was set forth. We are all convinced that there is a problem; and the first step towards the solution of any problem is to bring all the factors which compose it clearly under the eye.

But who are we in Canada, it may be asked, that we should take upon ourselves these high matters. The answer to that is that we are the only ones in the world who can lead the way out of the present difficulties.

England cannot make the first move, because that would be to abdicate her place in the world. To declare that she was no longer willing or able to protect what she holds would be to put every part of the Empire in jeopardy. It would be a sign which would bring the vultures hovering in the northern sky. When the old lion in the fable fell sick, there was no beast too vile to cast indignity upon him.



Dr. ANDREW MACPHAIL

Even if England did make such an appeal, it could not be answered in a moment. Swords do not leap from scabbards unless there are swords to leap. Parliaments must assemble. Debate must be had. Votes must be taken. Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Bourassa must be consulted. All this would occupy months, if not years; and in the meantime the business of the Empire was at a stand still. And what if England failed in the appeal. Her hands would be empty and her sword cast away.

A formal proposal in London that all British subjects share equally in the defence of the Empire would be regarded as a cry of distress; and when inquiry was made, it would be found that England was not in distress at all. The ground would then be shifted from necessity to contingency, and England would be placed in a false position within, and without, her own dominions.

Nor can Australia make the appeal, because the termination of the Anglo-Japanese treaty is too vividly before her eyes. She might be suspected of self interest by those who cannot see that the interests of the part are the interests of the whole. The people of Australia have determined that they shall remain a white people. They may be right or they may be wrong; but right or wrong the question is settled; and it is better that it should be settled wrong by the Australians themselves than that any other community should attempt to settle it for them. No community of white men has ever allowed any other community to decide for them what the future complexion of the people shall be.

This policy of exclusion may be obnoxious to Asiatics, but the Australians cannot help that. They propose to hold their continent even if they cannot use it, even though indeed, at the present moment, not more than one tenth is occupied and one-half unexplored. Their pursuit of this policy is deliberate, and they are undeterred by the physical difficulties which face them. Their coast line is double that of the United States. Sydney is as far from Port Darwin as it is from Japan, and that part of the country which is nearest to Asia is tropical and cannot be developed by white labour.

So resolute are the people that the inhabitants of Australia shall be white, they have adopted a system of compulsory military service for all males between the ages of eighteen and twenty-six, and a system of cadet corps and rifle clubs for boys over fourteen years of age. New Zealand has cast in her lot with Australia, and both are so impressed with the reality of danger that they have already committed themselves to a policy which is local in origin but imperial in its implication. South Africa is too young to speak, and Newfoundland is too small for impressive utterance.

We have now exhausted the list of five self-governing communities which send representatives to the Imperial Conference, and no source was found from which a plan might issue. Canada yet remains, and we are subject to none of the disabilities which induce the other partners in the business of Empire to keep silent.

A scheme of imperial organization which emanated from Canada would win approval on the ground of disinterestedness alone, because the gain to us would be moral rather than tolerant of attempts at betterment, which do not involve an expansion of territory or of trade. Unlike the people of Australia we are singularly free from external problems. For a hundred years we have been at peace with the United States, and the relations between the two countries never were better than they are at the moment. Canada is the oldest, richest, and most populous of the colonies, and on that account alone would be heard with respect. This is a work of peace and should be done in time of peace and not in a panic of fear. When danger threatens there will be a rapid running together of interests which now are content to remain apart; but when the danger is over disintegration will begin once more.

To say that nothing can be done is a counsel of despair, and a confession that the genius for organization and government has departed from the British people. To advise that nothing be done in advance of the crisis, and that nothing can be done except in the heat which danger engenders is to abandon reason for passion, and deliberation for precipitancy. Let us then reason together whilst there is yet time.

There are certain preliminary conclusions upon which we must all be agreed before we can go any further, certain questions which we must ask ourselves, and certain answers which we must find. The British Empire covers one quarter of the surface of the earth, and is responsible for the government of one fifth of its inhabitants. To carry on this task there are not more than twelve millions of white men. It does not matter for the moment by what means this inheritance has grown, or by what title it has fallen to us. What really does matter is whether or not we are to be left in peaceable possession to administer and enjoy. If there is no envy or jealousy in the world, then no defence is necessary. If covetousness has not left the heart of humanity, if nations no longer need food or room to live in, then we must be prepared to hold what we have, or say how much we shall surrender, what sized sop we shall cast to Cerberus when he snarls.

If there is to be defence, then we shall be called upon to decide what defence is adequate. There are six self-governing states in the Empire, of which only one is reasonably capable of defending itself against any probable force which might be brought to bear against it. Newfoundland, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, or Canada, acting separately or in conjunction would be free merely to accept the terms which any world-power might choose to impose. Possibly other world-powers might intervene, but the sum of all the penalties for weakness which they would exact would be no less. Of all these states England alone is capable of defending herself and sparing a surplus for the defence of the others. If the fleets of England were destroyed the Empire would dissolve and vanish like the baseless fabric of a dream. So soon as the tax-payer, who now furnishes forth those fleets, is unable, or unwilling, to endure the burden, then the Empire comes to an end automatically, or endures only upon the sufferance of the world. Accordingly, the five outlying states exist only in the mind of the English tax-payer.

A broader and a surer basis must be found in a recognition of the principle, that the interest of one state is the interest of all, that it is indivisible, and must be enforced by a mutual obligation which will not be evaded since it has been clearly defined and formally assumed. That obligation ultimately must find its expression in the terms of a contract to pay.

We are now coming to close quarters. England lost the Thirteen Colonies which eventually grew into the United States, because she insisted that the colonists should pay a part at least of the cost of defending them. The question was difficult, and England has ever since avoided similar difficulties by paying for the defence of the colonies out of the pockets of the tax-payers who dwell within the little islands, and saying nothing about it. That, of course, is a very easy solution; but it is too easy for a colonist to accept who thinks about the matter at all.

It is quite certain that England does pay something for our defence. It is equally certain that we pay something too. The question really resolves itself into this, "Does either party pay too little or too much?" Arising out of this are various subsidiary questions of which the most important is, "Are these payments made in such time and manner as to produce the best results?"

A payment which is uncertain in amount and time is only a little better than no payment at all. Any trader knows that, and if he does not know it his banker will inform him in pretty sharp terms. At present each of the six parliaments contributes according to the feeling at the moment. It does not know, still less do the other parliaments know, how much that contribution will be, when it will be paid, or how it will be spent. Unless a banker knows the amount of his bills payable, the date when they are due, and has a certainty that they will be paid when due, he can only do business out of his reserves; and England now stands as banker to the rest of the Empire in respect of defence. Such a course as we are now pursuing can end only in exhaustion of the reserves and imperial bankruptcy.

We are now in the situation of a company with unlimited liability, of which the shares have not been distributed, or the calls made. Our business is to convert the concern into a Company of which the liability shall be known, the shares distributed, the officers appointed, and the by-laws drawn up, signed, sealed, and delivered, for ourselves and all the world to read.

The shareholders in this Empire cannot very well come together into one place. They can choose the persons to whom they will grant their proxies; but as the liability is unlimited, Canada cannot say that she is entitled to send more proxy-holders than New Zealand is. The continuation of existence to a community is just as important to New Zealanders as it is to Canadians, and each community should send an equal number of representatives, for precisely the same reason that the several states of the American Union send to Congress an equal number of senators. In this concern there shall be no minority shareholders to band themselves together to sulk, and combine, and cabal.

The business of this committee then will be to concern itself alone with the fundamental problem in community life, namely to take measures to preserve the safety of that life. To each community will be assigned the obligation which it is to bear, not according to the probability of danger in which each stands but according to the ability of each to pay. We in Canada, as a separate community, are in less danger than Australia is, but we shall pay more because we are richer. England will pay still more, not because Englishmen are in greater peril from attack, but because they are richer than we are.

The problem before this committee would be extremely simple, and would differ only in degree from that which faces a board of commissioners appointed to assess property and levy taxes. It does not even imply that there would be an increase in the amount of taxes to be paid. On the contrary, it is almost certain that the amount would be less if the burden were distributed to better advantage. It would merely mean the ear-marking of the amount which should go for purposes of defence. greater. In Canada the total amount of taxes which we would pay would probably be not increased but diminished, because our attention would be drawn to the domestic burden which we now unthinkingly endure.

At the moment the Canadian is the most heavily taxed person in the British Empire. In 1910 the federal expenditure amounted to $18.67 per head of population, having risen from $8.72 in 1898. For the same year ending March 31st, the total outlay of the British government including the expenditure for the army and navy amounted to $16.45 for each person. In 1908 the taxes levied for civic or local purposes upon the people of England and Wales amounted to $7.80 per head of population, whilst in Ontario the amount levied for the same purpose was $9.34, and an additional amount of two dollars was collected for which there is no corresponding outlay in England. Most persons will agree that the protection of our manufacturers costs something, but what the amount is would be hard to determine. Mr. Harpell in his "Canadian National Economy" quotes with approval one estimate of twenty-three dollars per person, and Mr. E. C. Drury, Secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture places it at two hundred dollars a year upon each farmer, "for which he gets no return."

Once the seperate states unite to tax themselves for the purpose of mutual defence all the problems now facing the Empire begin automatically to solve themselves. First, and most important, our status in the world being defined, the full consciousness of a deserved citizenship would make itself felt in every public act. Responsibility would sober us and ennoble our character; and in the larger light of obligation we should address ourselves anew to domestic problems, and solve them better, because they were felt to be a part of an Empire and a world obligation. We should lose the sense that we were living in the eighteenth century, suspicious that some one was about to filch away our "autonomy" or some one else "annex" us, resentful, childish, as Esquimaux in the world of political thought.

We should then have done for ever with a situation which must in the end become intolerable to white men, namely, that we had no direct responsibility for the management of our foreign affairs, no voice in those decisions which lead to the issue of peace or war, in short lacking the first essential sign and reality of independance. These offices England has performed for us all these years, not because she was exclusively desirous of doing so, but because we not having volunteered to assume our full responsibility could not be left in the world with our business undone. That is why the Indian or the Egyptian has his business done for him, because he will not do it for himself. And when we see a sturdy young Phillipino smoking a cigar, and occasionally pausing to refresh himself, with a draught from his mother's breast we will detect the analogy which existed in a political condition out of which we will have happily emerged.

Money is the easiest medium in which to make payment, and service is the hardest; but it is only the meaner obligations of life that money will discharge. Those who urged that we should discharge the debt which we owed to England by presenting her with battleships were merely showing us an easy way of evading payment, and at the same time of corrupting England, as Attica was corrupted after Salamis.

Our hearts and our brains must go with our money. We cannot contract for our defence. We cannot leave to one what is the business of all. To make the amount assigned to us as our proportion of the fund for the common defence a first charge upon our revenues is not enough. We shall be obliged to consult, and assist at a decision as to how and where that fund shall best be expended. Then it will not matter upon which part of the Empire the brunt of war will fall. If the coasts of Australia are ravaged it will boot an enemy nothing since the Empire exists to make that damage good and hold him to account.

The question of taxation without representation will then be solved without having been raised, since to represent is as much an obligation as to tax. The parliaments of the various dominions must still perform their functions incident to them; and they will perform them better when the problems of defence and foreign affairs have been relegated to another court which they themselves have had an equal voice in creating. The parliament at Westminster for example, will then be free, without bringing the business of the Empire to a standstill, to spend a whole day, if it likes, deciding whether it was a Protestant Irishman who beat his wife, or was it a Catholic Irishwoman who beat her husband, and how much Shamrock an Irish message boy is entitled to wear in his cap.

The present situation of the British Empire is the greatest menace to the world's peace which now exists. The prize is great, and it is lying all about the world, unguarded, or at least but so sufficiently marked that trespassers may beware. The temptation else is too great, and should be removed in the interests of those who are liable to be tempted. The one desire of British subjects is peace, to be left alone, to use and enjoy what they hold. There came a time also in the history of Rome when that was the sole intention of the Romans; but it is not on record that they were permitted to accomplish their desire.

On the other hand, an organized Empire, would go far towards ensuring the peace of the world, not by inspiring fear but by restraining ambition. Our situation would be that of Germany, if such could be imagined in lawful and undisputed possession of the Low Countries, Asia Minor, and the littoral of the Persian Gulf, no longer be an object of suspicion, since she then would have accomplished the desire of her heart and be content. In so far as the British Empire is concerned the questions which must decide its fate will be settled by those of us who are now living. The task before us is to secure by proper organization the heritage which has been handed down to us, and to transmit it unimpaired to our children. In doing so we shall do the best for ourselves, for our posterity, and for the world at large.

MORE LABOR MEN IN NEXT PARLIAMENT.

An interesting phase of the British government's proposal to pay salaries to members of parliament in the future at the rate of $2000 per annum is the lamentations of the privileged classes. They say that with salaries about four times greater than the wages they can earn in the shops, factories and mines dangling before their eyes as prizes the labor persons will struggle about ten times harder to be elected to the house of commons.

As the labor party members are all radicals or socialists, the aristocrats, landlords and money lords are complaining that their inherited "rights" will be seriously menaced and that evil days are descending upon their houses. J. Keir Hardie, the socialist leader of the labor party very politely agrees with the privileged personages for once in his lifetime. Hardie says the number of labor men in the next parliament will be at least doubled and progressive legislation will be put through.

WISCONSIN TO TRY STATE INSURANCE.

The signing of the Wisconsin life insurance bill by Governor McGovern commits Wisconsin to state insurance. Beginning in 1913 the state will conduct a life and annuity insurance business on its own book.

The bill provides for the establishment of an insurance department under the management of the state insurance commissioner, to be conducted along the lines of the ordinary mutual insurance corporation. Annuities are to range from $100 to $300 and life policies from $500 to $3000.

The business will all be done through the insurance commissioner's office. There will be no paid agents. The aim is to give insurance at lowest possible rate.

Why Wash Daily?

Bernard Shaw

"Smoke is a very common thing, and I know very little about it. Genius is a very uncommon thing, and I know all about it. I am in that line myself. Sir A. Wright, who brought me here, delivered an address a short time ago which contained a great deal of valuable matter about smoke, which the press did not mention, but he casually let fall some words to the effect that he was rather skeptical as to the value of washing one's self and he found himself famous.

"I have some sympathy with Dr. Wright, for I have really not washed myself, except the obvious portions of my face and hands, since the time somebody else did it for me. I do, indeed, yield to a superstition that has become enormously attractive in the nineteenth century, and that is to indulge in a cold tub, but that is not washing. I do it as a stimulant. I think sometimes I might have done better had I taken some whiskey instead.

"As to our faces, well, look at them. There is only one lady in this room as to whom I can speak with absolute domestic authority as having washed her face two hours ago, and it wants washing again already. Really, according to any decent standard, there is not a person in this room who is not a disgrace."

Assisting the Judge.

A case was being tried in the West of England and at its termination the judge addressed the jury, and they retired for consultation. Hour after hour passed and no verdict was brought in.

The judge's dinner hour arrived and he became hungry and impatient.

Upon enquiry he learned that one obstinate juryman was holding out against eleven. This was more than he could endure, so he ordered the twelve men to be brought before him. He told them that in his address to them he had so plainly stated the case and the law that the verdict ought to be unanimous, and the man who permitted his individual opinion to "weigh against the judgment of eleven men of wisdom was unfit and disqualified ever again to act in the capacity of juryman.

At the end of this excited harangue a little squeaky voice came from one of the jury. It said:

"Will Your Lordship allow me to say a word?"

Permission being given, the owner of the voice added:

"May it please Your Lordship, I am the only man on your side!"

FIVE HUNDRED DEATHS DAILY; HALF ARE FROM STARVATION

Special to The Review

Shanghai, Sept. 11.—Refugees of the flood districts are growing desperate and murder and looting is increasing rapidly. Deaths around Nanking alone average five hundred daily and and half the number is being caused by starvation. News of the Canadian party of missionaries supposed to be en route for Yangtse Kiang, under military escort, is lacking.

AL IBERAL AND FREE TRADER IN ENGLAND; NOT SO IN CANADA

Englishman Gives Candid Advice to Brother Englishmen in Canada—What He Has Found Out in the Country of His Adoption.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Mr. J. N. Greenshield's K.C., the well known Liberal lawyer, announced yesterday that he had reached the parting of the ways and would this time vote against the Liberal Government, since he could not approve of the reciprocity agreement.

Mr. Greenshield's stated to the Gazette that not only was he now opposed to the Liberal programme in this regard, but that he would actively work against them and take the stump in various parts of the Province.

WILL LEAD TO ANNEXATION

"I am absolutely opposed to this reciprocity proposal," said Mr. Greenshields yesterday, "and I intend to fight it as far as I can. I am opposed to it first because I consider that it will in the end lead to the annexation or the absorption of Canada by the United States in some other way. Secondly, I think that reciprocity when it works out to its logical conclusion, will prove a death blow to our manufacturing interests and will equally damage our transportation concerns which the people of the Dominion have almost bled themselves white to build up.

A LIBERAL ALL HIS LIFE

"I have been a Liberal all my life," said Mr Greenshields, "and I still am, but I am utterly opposed to this reciprocity scheme because after carefully thinking the whole thing over I am convinced that it is calculated to greatly injure this country in every way and that whatever advantages may be derived from it will go altogether to the United States."

WILL SPEAK AT SEVERAL MEETINGS

Mr Greenshields stated that he intended to take the platform against the reciprocity part and would speak in favor of the Conservative candidate in Megantic at Inverness, at the official nomination on September 14th. He said also that he would probably speak at several meetings in other portions of the Eastern Townships during the campaign.

He is a native of Richmond and should be of great assistance to Dr. Haves, Conservative candidate in that constituency.

COMMON CITIZENS.

Special to The Review

Sir,—Will you permit me to call the attention of the electors of West Peterborough to an editorial in Friday's "Examiner," Page eight. Said editorial is headed "Millionaire vs. Common Citizen." Let the elector read, mark, learn and inwardly digest said editorial and then turn to this text:

"J. R. Stratton, his automobile," "his string of costly prize horses," "his elegant home" and "the Farmers Bank" and then let the common citizen, who has been stung by the Farmers Bank, draw his own conclusions.

Yours, etc.,
COMMON CITIZEN.

LAURIER ADMIRED.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—How the Yanks do love Laurier for what he is trying to do for them. Here is an extract from a letter from one of the leading citizens of Clarence, N.Y., to a Peterborough citizen:

"I hope you agree with Mr. Laurier (on reciprocity.) I have a good degree of respect for Mr. L. and hope he will be returned, as he and Mr. Taft seem to take similar views of the matter, and I believe him to be a patriotic and sincere worker for the interests of his country."

INTERESTED

A LIBERAL AND A FREE TRADER.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me a little of your valuable space to write a few words to my fellow countrymen who though in this country long enough to qualify for a vote, have had little or no time to study the politics of the country. At the last election I was in just that position. Although I had been here two or three years I had been so busy working and laying the foundation of a home in this, my adopted land, that when the election came I am afraid I had to give my vote rather blindly. Now I look upon my vote as a sacred thing, too sacred to be lightly given and far too sacred to be sold. The fortune has yet to be made that could buy my vote and the man has yet to be born that could intimidate it.

There are many of you who were like myself, Liberals and free traders, at home, and you may naturally ask, is not the party the same and do not the same principles apply here. Let us see now. England is a consuming country, as far as foodstuffs go, dependent almost entirely upon outside countries, while here we are producers, not only of enough for ourselves, but of great quantities for export. This entirely alters the case as regards food then. How many of us were there in the country, three weeks before we realized the effects of protection on manufactures! Look at the C.G.E., at the Quaker Oats, and other great industries in this city which would never have come this side of the line had it not been for the National policy. True, we find living a little higher, but we get the money to buy it with. Then again, we do not want to see this colony pass away from the old flag, therefore, let us unite our votes for the policy of continuing the prosperity of the country on its present lines.

There is another vital question at this election however, and that is the question as to whether we will be and remain free British subjects, making and enjoying our own laws and privileges or whether we will allow the foreign prelate of any church to put forth decrees that will affect our social laws, whether we will support a government that will submit to such impertinence. If the Imperial parliament had dared to formulate such a decree as the Ne Temere, we should ere now have been in the throes of a revolution, and shall we allow any church a place and power that we deny even to King George, and the Imperial parliament on this question. I ask my fellow countrymen to think seriously and vote for the liberties for which our forefathers died.

Then again, shall we vote for a government whose finance minister issued a charter to such a group of swindlers as organized the Farmers Bank Quibble as the Liberals may, Mr. Fielding either knew or should have known, who and what these people were before granting them a charter. If he knew, then he became party to the fraud. If he did not know then he was incompetent and certainly not to be trusted to put through a national business deal with such a man as President Taft. There is no use mincing matters. We want straight honorable competent men to represent us in parliament, and I ask every man who loves righteousness and probity in public life to show their detestation of such scandals as the Farmers Bank by which the savings of hundreds of honest men and women were swept into the coffers of rogues, leaving many of the victims penniless, by refusing to support and return to power men whose business it was to exercise vigilance and discretion and who did not do so. Vote straight for a United Canada, for a free Canada, for a clean Canada. Vote for Burnham.

RIOTING GOES ON.

Food Disturbances Result in Clash With Troops.

Brest, France, Sept. 11.—A fierce battle occurred here yesterday when a large mob of "cheaper food" manifestants engaged the troops. At least 10 persons were injured.

Twenty policemen and soldiers were badly hurt by stones, bottles and missiles thrown at them by the mob. The troops repeatedly charged into the crowd and an equally large number of rioters were injured by being struck by sabres or by being trampled upon by the cavalry horses.

The soldiers were not permitted to use their guns. The Sixth Regiment of Colonial Forces has been ordered here to reinforce the authorities.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The Government is sending additional troops to the northern departments of France to deal with the cheap food demonstrations, which often are instigated by revolutionary societies, or simply are riots of violently inclined persons who mix up wth the genuine housewives' processions. Two battalions of troops were sent to Vilenciennes, department of Nord, from the Paris garrison yesterday.

Reports that women were parading the streets in protest against the high cost of food, and that the rougher element was engaged in plundering shops, were received from Brest, Valenciennes and Roubaix.

AMERICANS INTERESTED.

Nearly Fifteen Hundred Attend Laurier's Windsor Meeting.

Windsor, Sept. 11.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier ended his Ontario tour here on Saturday and the interest he is arousing among his American allies was evinced by the number of Michigan people at the meeting.

Nearly fifteen hundred Americans came over from Detroit and vicinity to hear the Canadian Premier. Among their number were Senator William Alden Smith of Michigan, who voted against reciprocity in the United States Senate, and Mr. Milton A. McRae, president of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce.

Following short addresses by Dr P. A. Dewar and Mr. A. H. Clarke, the local candidate, the Premier spoke both in English and French.

He was the apostle of the policy for which the Conservatives and Liberals of the past alike had labored, a policy of opening up better trade relations with the great republic with which Canada shared the continent. Canada and the United States were so united geographically and through the bond of common kinship and language that the development of trade relations in natural products had long been desired. The mistake of the past had been made by the Americans in rejecting the overtures of Sir John Macdonald and his successors. "It is a source of gratification to me in my old age to bring you a concrete proposal of reciprocity so long sought by my predecessors in vain," said Sir Wilfrid.

Night Flyer Killed.

Esslingen, Wurtemburg, Sept. 11.—The aviator, Raimund Eyring, was killed last night while making a flight at the aerodrome. His machine collided with a mast marking the limits of the field. Eyring was warned beforehand against flying in the dark.

Russian Steamer on Rocks.

Petropavlosk, Sept. 11.—The Russian volunteer fleet steamer Transit ran on the rocks yesterday off Nianhe, Kamchatka. The passengers and crew were saved by the Japanese steamer Kio Maru. The vessel's cargo is a total loss.

German Baron Killed.

Coburg, Germany, Sept. 11.—Baron Von Effa, court chamberlain, was killed in an automobile accident here on Saturday.

Canadians Free.

Pekin, Sept. 11.—The Chinese Government is concentrating troops on the borders for the purpose of suppressing the alarming disturbances in the province of Szechuen, if the provincial forces are insufficient in numbers or prove disloyal. Sixty Canadian Methodist missionaries are among the Chengtu refugees. These in all number about 100, of whom 30 are Americans, and nothing has been heard from them for the past four days. It is believed that they are being escorted by Chinese troops in the direction of the Yangtse Kiang.

Shanghai, Sept. 11.—The Yangtse River is 45 miles wide in places. The great floods stretch over a territory seven hundred miles in extent. Seventy thousand survivors surround Nanking, where 300 are dying daily.

Similarly distressing details are being received from many cities. It is feared that the waters will not subside before the middle of October. The rains this year were unusually early and caught the crops before they had matured.

Red Cross Founder Dying.

Oxford, Mass., Sept. 11.—Bowed down by the weight of years, Miss Barton, founder of the American Red Cross, was believed to be near death to-day, at her summer home, in this town. In poor health when she came here early in the summer from her home at Glen Dhoe, Md., she had grown gradually worse.

Her doctors say that Miss Barton's strength had been greatly impaired by an illness from pneumonia some time ago, and that her eextreme age had left her without power of recuperation. While death might not be immediate, it could be long delayed.

Mob Broke Into Hospital.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Sept. 11.—Gioia Del Colle, a city with a population of 20,000 in the Italian province of Bari Della Pugliee, has, according to official advices received here, been the scene of savage excesses in consequence of the echolera epidemic now raging in Italy.

The crowds rushed into the hospital, brought out the cholera patients and carried them in a ghastly procession through the streets.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

RECIPROCITY OR DEMENTIA AMERICANUS

Who follows close where Borden leads;
Stand firm your country's trade to save
From foes who sow dissension's seeds.

Bedecked with flaunting star and stripe,
Dear Uncle Sam a-wooing goes,
Intending soon with one fell swipe,
To abduct "Our Lady of the Snows."

From Mexico he grabbed of late,
An empire vast in Texan land;
And formed of it the "Lone Star State"
That lies along the Rio Grande.

'Twas thus he gained the Hawaiian Isles,
The Phillipines he rent from Spain;
By war and brandishment and smiles
He added them to his domain.

Had this our land not been disgraced,
And had our rulers done the right,
One then his thousand would have chased,
Or two-ten thousand put to flight.

Big Bill his right hand gently waved,
And Fielding came without delay;
Impelled by some impulse depraved
To barter our birthright away.

Two foreign factions then combined
And this vile trade arrangement built;
High-Tariff-Taft in league conjoined
With medalled "Democrat to the hilt."

Why use Canadian common sense
They say the pact is good enough,
Statistics, prices, facts, expense
You need them not—tremendous bluff.

All Nature's products of the soil,
They'll trade with us as free as air
Potatoes, pumpkins fruits of toil,
We'll grow them here, they'll cook them there.

They'll take the showers of fruitful rain,
That o'er our Southern borders stray
And for the summer to remain,
They'll send their wild geese up this way.

Ye farmers hurry, from the Wests
With Laurier have an interview;
What wrongs ye had, are unredressed,
There's nothing in this deal for you.

If this is trade reciprocal
This hybrid Taft and Fielding pact;
It should be fiercely fought until
With Laurier its been sidetracked.

LEARY EXPOSE TOO MUCH FOR STRATTON

Did you read the Examiner's sorry wriggle out of the Leary expose? It was a rich one. The Stratton organ practically admitted the corn, all the essential facts of the case as stated in the Review on Saturday. It could not do otherwise, without swearing that black was white, or that R. H. Leary was never west at all with a carload of horses. Below on the left is the body of the Examiner's "explanation," on the right opposite, a few things that weren't mentioned by the Examiner in the hurry of the day's business:

The Examiner Says:

Mr. Leary, in conversation with the Examiner, says that these horses were shipped on the 25th of July to Winnipeg, and that immediately on their arrival there he sold three of them at good prices, and could have sold the whole of them at a large profit had he sold them on time, but the owner of the sales stable in which he placed the horses, had a barn full come in just after Mr. Leary left for Edmonton, and instead of selling Mr. Leary's horses, sold his own, thereby leaving Mr. Leary's horses on his hands.

Mr. Leary went on to Edmonton from Winnipeg and returned, and finding thirteen of his horses unsold he shipped them to Yorktown, Sask., and returned to Peterborough. Since returning home he has received a letter offering him a price for the whole thirteen horses, which price is satisfactory to Mr. Leary, and they are now disposed of.

Mr. Leary informs the Examiner that there is no question of doubt about it that Ontario horses will find a better market closer to home in the Eastern States as soon as the duty of from $50.00 to $75.00 a piece is removed off the Canadian horses entering into United States.

The Real Facts

Precisely. Mr. Leary sold only three out of the sixteen when he was in Winnipeg. He went on to Edmonton, and as the Examiner says "a whole barnful came in just after Mr. Leary left." Where did they come from? Ontario? Not much. They came from the United States, in spite of the duty. Why were they sold instead of Leary's horses? Because they were cheaper a whole barnful sold against thirteen animals. If Leary's horses were cheaper that the American horses, whose horses would have got the preference?

Mr. Leary shipped the thirteen to Yorkton, Sask., a far inland point, where the American horses have not been imported, in spite of the duty, "by the barnful." And he had a bill for $246 to foot for the keep of those horses in Winnipeg. Not much wonder he shipped them to Yorkton, eh! In Yorkton he did not face the competition of the American horses. It was his only chance to get rid of them. After paying for shipment to Winnipeg, $246 for keep there, shipment to Yorkton, and expenses of sale, how much profit would R. H. Leary have?

The eastern states horse market is largely a myth. Ontario shipped west over $10,000,000 worth of horses last year. Could Ontario sell to the eastern states $10,000,000 worth of horses in a year, when those eastern states have got all the horses they need, as Ontario has, and in which the price is $50 lower on the average than in Ontario?

NE TEMERE DECREE DEBATED BY ANGLICAN GENERAL SYNOD

Church of England Delegates Discuss the Marriage Laws.

London, Ont., Sept. 12.—The general synod of the Anglican Church yesterday afternoon passed the recommendation of the committee on the adaptation of the Book of Common Prayer. By so doing the first step was taken in remodelling the prayerbook to meet the needs of Canadian church and the requirements of Canadian associations, something that one wing of the church has been agitating for in many synods for years. The recommendation was not passed without a bitter opposition, however.

The evening session was devoted to the business end of the new prayer book and finally it was adopted that the Cambridge Press would have copies of the new amendment prayer book ready for the next general synod.

The ne temere was brought up at the morning session, Hon. S. H. Blake of Toronto making two motions, first to have a joint committee appointed from both upper and lower houses of the general synod to confer with other religious bodies to conduct the fullest investigation into the matter and to recommend any change in legislation to remedy the existing evils of the marriage law. The second was a memorial to the Government to set aside the Court of Exchequer as a court to which all questions of the validity of marriage would be referred. Neither resolution was put to the house, the noon adjournment coming before the conclusion of the debate upon them and, according to the order sheet, the prayer book question had to be settled first.

James E. Jones, K.C., of Toronto, and Dr. Davidson, LL.D., of Montreal, led the opposition against the resolutions, both declaring that the ne temere did not effect the marriage laws of Quebec — the decisions and rulings on the cases in question being made on the civil law of the province, which had been broken when the marriage contract had not been solemnised in the manner prescribed by that city's civil law. The debate was a warm one.

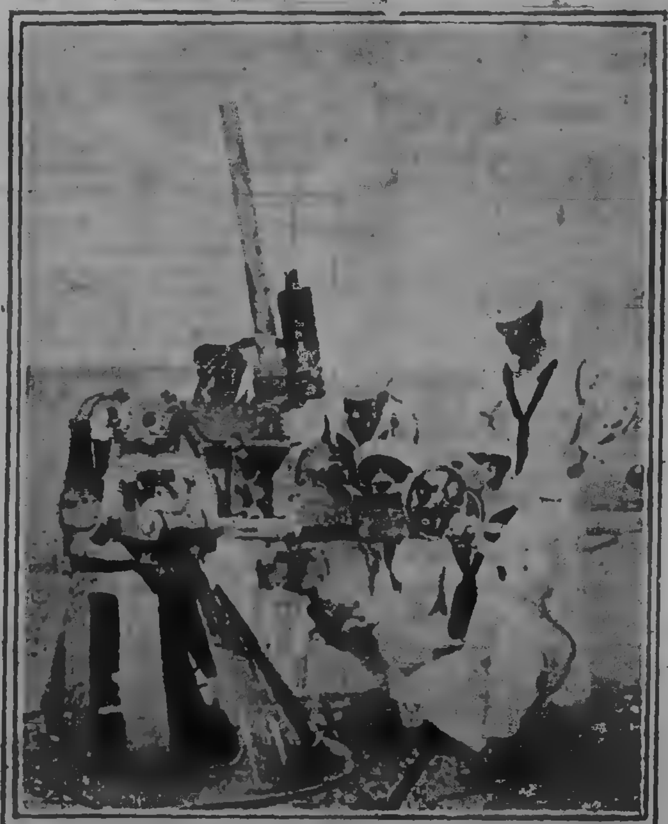
AERO GUN DEVISED TO VANQUISH INVADING AEROPLANE.



NEW AERO GUN OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

That the United States navy now has a gun capable of destroying any aeroplanes known to-day or likely to be invented in the near future is the belief of the officials of the Navy Department. It is the one-pounder designed by Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, which has undergone its first tests at the naval proving ground at Indian Head within the last few days.

The invention by which invading aeroplanes are to be vanquished is the remarkable carriage device, which, by means of hydraulic cylinders and powerful springs, takes up all of the combined recoil of shot and gravity, allowing the steel braces to escape the shock. The gun can be placed on wheels as well as on board ship.

WILL CROSS CONTINENT

Aviator Starts From San Francisco.

To Make New York by October at Latest.

San Francisco, Sept. 12.—Robert G. Fowler left the stadium, Golden Gate Park, in a Wright biplane on his transcontinental flight to New York at 1.37 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The start was made under the most favorable weather conditions. The aeroplane was christened with a bottle of Pacific Ocean water by James Ralph, jr., a director of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Fowler carries a message from Brigadier-General Brush, commander of the U. S. army of the Pacific, to General F. D. Grant, commander of the east, whose headquarters are at Governor's Island, in New York harbor.

With a trade wind at his back the airman climbed into the sky and doubled back over the trail of the forty-niners.

Fowler will attempt to jockey his biplane to New York by easy stages via Sacramento, Elko, Salt Lake City, Granger, Cheyenne, North Platte, Omaha, Rock Island, Chicago, Fort Wayne, Pittsburg, Buffalo and Albany reaching the end of his journey by Oct. 10.

He regards the crossing of the Sierras as the most difficult portion of his journey, but expects success.

As the field, rimmed with verdure-covered hills, dropped beneath him, Fowler flipped the tail of his big kite to the westward, nosed his way up into the sky until he found the inbound wind and winged away to the northeast across the roofs of the city. Throngs crowding the roofs of the skyscrapers and office buildings cheered his passing.

Fowler crossed the bay at a height of 500 feet and passed from sight at 1.57 p.m.

He was reported passing Suisun, 48 miles from here, at 2.32 p.m., and passed Davis, 75.6 miles away, at 3.06 p.m. He reached Sacramento, his stopping-place for the first leg at 3.12 p.m.

Fowler was flying about 500 feet from the ground when he reached Sacramento. He circled around the north side of the city, finally making a beautiful turn and pointing the nose of his machine down toward Agricultural Park, the state fair grounds, where he landed at 3.28 p.m. He was taken in an automobile to the office of Governor Johnson, who welcomed him and offered his good wishes for the success of the first transcontinental flight ever attempted.

Auburn, Calif., Sept. 12.—Aviator Fowler landed here at 6.36 o'clock, and stopped for the night.

PREMIER BACK TO OLD QUEBEC

Actonvale, Que., Sept. 12.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke here yesterday, a large section of the population being at the station to meet him. After Mr. L. L. Bauthier, the Liberal candidate, had briefly addressed the crowd, Sir Wilfrid spoke from the rear of his car.

The Liberal leader dwelt briefly on the reciprocity and navy questions, concluding his speech with an onslaught on the Nationalists and their leader. "Mr. Bourassa," said Sir Wilfrid, "must be ashamed of the disgraceful campaign of hypocrisy he is conducting. Mr. Bourassa, the autonomist, champion of the pure among the pure, and the ally of the Ontario jingoes, should also be ashamed of the personal attacks his paper, Le Devoir, is making, and of having his organ circulated throughout the province with the funds of the Anti-Reciprocity League.

"The statement has been made, and it has not been denied, but the bullet that will kill me is not cast yet, and on Sept 21, I have no doubt Mr. Bourassa and his allies will be left to their hatred. I am no more a young man, but I am sound of foot and eye, and my heart is young. Why should it not be, since after traveling all over the country I found that the people were still in sympathy with the cause I represent, I am confident the Liberal party will be returned to power with an increased majority."

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will speak here on Tuesday night, Sept. 19. The place of speaking and other details have not as yet been announced.

The reciprocity agreement is terminable at any time if Uncle Sam does not use the big club of tariff retaliation. He has put on the thumbscrews before. Would he do it again?

Harness Manufacturing Firm Issues An Official Announcement as to Where It Stands on the Issue.

With reference to the long article in the Examiner last night, holding up the increasing business and great prosperity of the B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., Limited, as the result of the Fielding tariff, the Ackerman Company wishes to make the following announcement:

"We neither knew of or authorised in any way the publication of the article, and wish it generally understood that we had no intimation that it was to be published. We would like, moreover, to make clear and emphatic that we are opposed to reciprocity entirely, holding that it will increase the cost of living to our workingmen."

MAINE VOTES FOR RETURN TO WETTER DAYS; 1000 MAJORITY

Prohibition State Believed to Have Gone Back on the Constitutional Disability—A Close Vote.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—Unofficial returns late last night indicated that prohibition has been voted out of the constitution of the State of Maine by a bare majority of 1,400 votes. About 25 small towns had not been reported, and the vote of these, together with errors incident to the collection of returns by telephone, still left the exact result in some doubt. One hundred and twenty thousand voters visited the polls and cast their ballots on the question. With the 25 towns missing the vote was 60,878 for repeal and 59,563 against a change in the constitution.

As had been predicted, the cities were the chief strongholds of the repeal faction, but the majority of 12,000 in the total city vote was barely sufficient, according to the latest available returns, to offset the vote of the rural communities.

Although the vote cast yesterday did not equal that of a year ago, when the Democrats swept the state, which has for years been a Republican stronghold, the election was without question one of the most interesting contests that the state has ever known. There was not a home in any section of the state, no matter how deep in the wilds that did not receive quantities of literature on both sides of the question.

Little excitement marked the voting. Although the polls in some of the cities were crowded during much of the time that they were open, it was an orderly crowd and gave the officials little or no trouble.

Since 1857 Maine has had a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, and since 1884 prohibition has been a part of the constitution. In that year, 1884, the question of placing prohibition in the constitution was put before the people and prohibition won by a majority of 45,998, carrying every county in the state.

Prayers were offered all day in hundreds of churches.

LEADER BORDEN SAYS THAT IT MEANS VASSALAGE TO U.S.

Sydney Mines, C. B., Sept. 12.—The hall engaged for Mr. Borden to speak in here last night was not large enough to hold the huge crowd which came from all parts of the island to hear the Liberal-Conservative leader speak, and, so that all might have opportunity to hear Canada's next premier, a monster gathering was held in the open air, at which some 5,000 people were present.

"The whole tendency of this compact is to export the unfinished Canadian product in order that it may be converted into the finished article by the labor of a foreign country.

"That is not good business for the Canadian people. Our policy should be to develop our natural resources and convert them into finished commodities by the labor of our own people, and to establish such conditions in this country as will insure a generous living wage to Canadian workingmen. That result cannot be accomplished unless our industries are placed on a firm basis. The aim and tendency of this treaty is to place them on an exceedingly insecure and unstable basis. The natural resources of the United States are under the control and ownership of twenty-five or thirty great capitalists of untold wealth and power. The trusts and combines through which these men direct their efforts will not be less ruthless and unsparing in Canada than they have been in the United States.

"The goal and aim of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1891 was unrestricted continental free trade. That policy meant one tariff for the two countries to the exclusion of the rest of the Empire, and any such tariff would be made at Washington and not at Ottawa. Such a condition would mean commercial vassalage, which must be followed by political absorption."

Catarrhal Deafness

Successfully Treated By

Catarrhozone

Deafness is not so common as blindness, yet thousands are more or less afflicted by it, and their comfort seriously interfered with.

Catarrhal deafness manifests itself but slowly, yet it must be acknowledged that the great majority of those who become totally deaf might have averted this unfortunate condition if they had treated the catarrhal inflammation at its beginning.

The only remedy that can be safely employed for all forms of catarrhal deafness is Catarrhozone. You simply charge the air you breathe with this healing, soothing agent, and by forcing it gently through the ears destroy the germ life which keeps up the inflammation, and at the same time by the soothing, healing action it heals the inflamed surfaces of the middle ear.

CATARRHOZONE, to those who are just a little deaf, and are growing increasingly deaf, is an agent capable of affording the utmost satisfaction, and its use is attended without danger, and as the treatment can be carried on at home no person threatened with the affliction of deafness should postpone one moment in beginning its use.

From every part of the Dominion glowing accounts of the beneficial action it exerts upon catarrhal conditions of the middle ear have been sent in, and you will be resorting to the only method of cure, and the simplest method too, if you try Catarrhozone. Dealers everywhere sell it, 25c, 50c, and $1.00, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

The Daily Review

TUESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1911.

> The Farm Journal of Philadelphia, with a circulation of 750,000 says: Free trade between the two countries will inevitably follow the enactment of the present measure, and that will mean, ultimately, peaceful annexation.

STOP THE LEAKS

Following are some passages from a pamphlet recently issued by the association of Minnesota manufacturers. The object of the pamphlet was to urge the adoption of the reciprocity treaty by the United States. The title of the pamphlet was "Judge For Yourself," and on one page, among other illuminating passages, there was one which bore the significant heading heading "Stop the Leaks." It was as follows:

"If the manufacturing industries are driven out of our centres of population, the farmers' best customers are taken away, and the inevitable result is reduced farm products because of the lessened demand.

"Reciprocity will stop the leak of our manufacturers moving to Canada. Statistics show that more than 750 American manufacturers have moved up in Canada, in the last ten years, and fully as many more will be apt to follow, if we fail in this, our present opportunity, to stop the leak now, by agreeing to the reciprocity treaty. Facts and figures of startling character on this point are to be found in recent public prints.

"Consider this carefully and judge for yourself, bearing always in mind that no one industry can prosper alone. "Each for all, and all for each,'" will work wonders in our efforts for a great and prosperous country.'"

THE ACKERMAN CO.

The remarks made by our contemporary the Stratton organ last night in reference to the growth and prosperity of the Ackerman company were quite pleasing, and quite appreciated, though such kindliness is not usual except at election times. No one has any quarrel about a write-up of a company which has done well, by skilful management and progressive methods and it is the hope of everyone in Peterborough that the Ackerman company will continue to enjoy the great and increasing business described by the Examiner.

This praise of the Ackerman company, though fully justified, does not arise from a desire merely to give an appreciation of a worthy local industry. Not altogether. It seems needless to say that it arises from a desire to take a fall out of those who assert that the Fielding tariff since 1896 has not been kind to manufacturing industries, and that the Fielding tariff is permitting injury to the manufacturers. It is in brief, merely using the Ackerman prosperity as a campaign dodge to offset the general opposition to reciprocity, as the first big departure from the National policy that the Liberals have continued, in their wisdom, since attaining power.

The duty by which the Ackerman company is protected against American competition, is thirty per cent on the finished article. This duty has been in existence since 1896, when it was inherited from the previous Conservative Government and kept intact. The credit in the matter to which the Liberals are entitled is having enough wisdom not to undo the good work of their predecessors.

As a matter of fact, the Ackerman company announces to-day that it is opposed to reciprocity, because it believes that reciprocity will mean a higher cost of living to the workingman. Certainly this must be true if one listens to the arguments of the minister of agriculture, for he is telling the farmers that under reciprocity they will ship their products to the United States.

And moreover, the Ackerman employes are overwhelmingly against reciprocity, as well as the firm itself. The fact that nine manufacturing industries in Brantford are being injured by reciprocity should be warning enough to the Peterboro workingman to stay this effort towards partial free trade with the United States that threatens the very roots of his well-being. The Ackerman employes are a sound, common sense lot of men, and they do not want reciprocity with 2,500,000 men clamoring for jobs, such as there are to-day in the U. S.

And while the Examiner is on the subject of the benefits of the Fielding tariff, it might be asked how much great prosperity has that tariff brought to the Lock Works, to the William Hamilton company, the Rapid Tool company, the Shovel company, the Cordage Works, etc etc. Why doesn't the Examiner write something about the benefits of the Fielding tariff on some of these industries?

THE LABOR QUESTION

The report of the executive of the Trades and Labor Congress meeting in Calgary says that it believes that reciprocity is in the interests of the Canadian people. The indications are that the labor organization is being used by the Liberals for political purposes, and as many of the labor men object to such manoeuvring, the action of the executive may be condemned by many of the local councils.

One thing appears to be certain, and that is if the labor men want reciprocity with American labor, they are foolish. Take the case of Hamilton. Thousands of Poles, Galicians, Swedes, Norwegians and other cheap labor, have come in there in the wake of the Harvester company, and other American institutions. If the labor men want to encourage reciprocity in cheap foreign labor, that of course is their look out.

The Canadian workingman who is generally prosperous, however, should reflect that there are 2,500,000 American men out of work. If they should know that labor is in demand in Canada—as many of them don't—how long would it take them to come to Canada to cut the Canadian man out of a job if possible? Reciprocity will aid in this. Does the Canadian labor man want it?

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are over 2,500,000 men out of employment in the United States now. Do you want reciprocity with that?

Reciprocity will ruin the Canadian salt industry? But who cares about salt? Who cares about half a dozen other industries in the Dominion?

J. M. Foster, president of the Fortier Tobacco Co., a life long Liberal and a friend of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is leaving the party on reciprocity. And still they come.

Thomas Delworth, a life-long Liberal, denounced reciprocity at a meeting in Weston recently. He is a vegetable grower, and he says reciprocity means the ruination of that business.

A poll of the factories in Brantford a couple of days showed 80 to 2 against reciprocity. It is the same in the Peterborough factories. Does sentiment like this count at election time?

James Richards, of Toronto, an independent Labor candidate, whacked Laurier with as much vigor as the most pronounced Tory. It beats all how everybody is finding things out about Laurier this election.

Fifteen hundred Americans crossed the river from Detroit to Windsor to hear Laurier speak. Why not? Laurier is the reciprocity man and the Americans think reciprocity is the handing over of Canada to the United States. Why should not they turn out to cheer their chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier?

F. L. Fowke, the Liberal candidate in Oshawa, says that the prominent manufacturers of that place who are against reciprocity can go to blazes, and he would tear up their ballots if they were marked for him. That's brave talk, but the fact remains that the workingmen know enough not to vote for a trade arrangement that will put them in danger

James Carruthers, a leading Liberal, and a big grain exporter, is out against reciprocity. F. Bull, president of the Williams Piano Company, of Oshawa, is out against reciprocity. He says, "I have been up to the present time a supporter of the present government. In this election I am forced to work and vote against the government as I am absolutely opposed to the reciprocity agreement."

The Toronto Globe in 1891 said: Sir John's followers know well that he is gulling the country. If they thought there was the slightest chance of our obtaining reciprocity in natural products by itself, they would be more than alarmed, since it is obvious that the farmer would not long support high protection for the Canadian manufacturer if his own industry were placed outside of the pale of the N. P.

> If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000

Gun Play Popular.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Gun-play seems to have been the order of the day during the week-end just passed. There were four cases of shooting on the dockets and eight prisoners yesterday.

Antonio Codio, who was assaulted, he claims, by a fellow-countryman, and who fired two shots at his fleeing assailant, put up such a fight when Detective Fafard tried to disarm him that it took four constables to subdue him. Brought before Judge Lanctot his revolver was confiscated, and a permit which was given him by Judge Leet to carry firearms, was cancelled.

John Dacker, whom it is alleged shot Elsie Jette in the head, was brought before Judge Lanctot, charged with attempted murder. Andrew Smith and Jack Skringe, accused of abetting his act, were also arraigned. All pleaded not guilty to the charges and were remanded until the 14th for enquete.

Nicholas Hayes was charged with having shot Juliette Van Mar three times because she refused to submit to his advances. Brought before Judge Lanctot, he pleaded not guilty, and was remanded until the 18th for voluntary statement.

May Be Tragedy.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Of five Montrealers, Mr. and Miss Parent, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Allard, who left here on Sept. 2 in a gasoline launch to camp at Ile Aux Corbeau, near Sorel, nothing has since been heard, and it is thought that the rumor from Sorel of Thursday last, to the effect that a yacht had exploded on the St. Lawrence, may have a tragic connection with their disappearance.

The friends of the two families have become apprehensive for their safety and it is likely that the island will be searched to see if the party ever arrived at their destination. If the yacht exploded and sank in mid-stream there is little chance of any-one surviving to tell of the accident.

Italian Leaped From Ferry.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Joseph Sarli, an Italian musician, who boards at 33 Agnes street, committed suicide yesterday morning by jumping from the ferry boat Kathleen, on her 11 o'clock trip to Centre Island. Efforts were made to rescue him, but the body sank immediately, and all attempts to recover it have as yet been unsuccessful.

The unfortunate man was subjected to epileptic fits, and it is believed that he was the victim of a fit when he jumped from the boat. He leaves a wife and four children.

Murder and Suicide.

Calgary, Sept. 12.—At 11 o'clock yesterday morning Emily Gruts, a servant girl employed by G. T. Robinson of this city, was shot and killed by Charles Steadman. Steadman afterwards shot and killed himself. Two bullets were discharged into the girl's forehead.

Papal Order for Montreal Mayor.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Mayor Guerin was yesterday notified by Archbishop Bruchesi that he (the mayor) had received from His Holiness Pope Pius the title of Knight Commander of the Pontificial Order of St. Gregory the Great.

Prominent Citizen Dead.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 12.—Charles Priestman, aged 63, a prominent and lifelong citizen of Niagara Falls, is dead, at his home here of heart failure. He leaves a widow and one son, in the Imperial Bank, Winnipeg.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 127 cars, comprising 2623 cattle, 360 hogs, 400 sheep and lambs and 10 calves.

Exporters.

Export steers sold all the way from $5.75 to $6.00; export bulls, $4.75 to $5.40.

Butchers.

Many of the best butchers cattle being taken for export caused a shortage for this class and prices advanced in sympathy. Prime picked lots of butchers sold from $5.90 to $6.20, good, $5.65 to $5.85; medium, $5.30 to $5.60; common, $4.75 to $5.25; cows, $3 to $5, bulls, $3.75 to $4.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Market dull and slow, especially for milkers, with prices lower, ranging from $35 to $60 each.

Veal Calves.

There was a limited supply of veal calves which sold at $4 to $8, and two calves of choice new milk-fed quality at $9 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Lambs were firmer at $5.65 to $6.15, and one choice lot brought $6.25; sheep, ewes, $3.75 to $3.85 for culls, rams and heavy ewes, and light ewes brought $3.50 to $4.25.

Hogs.

The Swift Canadian Co. quoted selects fed and watered at $7.50.

W. J. Johnston, of Gunn's, Limited, quoted hogs fed and watered at the market at $7.40 and $7.10 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 9 were 1057 cattle, 2375 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 300 calves.

The supply on the market this morning consisted of 500 cattle, 1900 sheep and lambs, 1450 hogs and 200 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger feeling in the market for cattle, which was due to the smaller offerings and the somewhat scarcity of choice stock; consequently prices, as compared with those realized last Wednesday, showed an advance of 10c to 25c per 100 pounds, especially for the better grades.

The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and a good trade was done, and the prices realized were satisfactory to all concerned. A few odd steers sold as high as 6¾c, but the bulk of the trading was done in choice stock at 6c; good at 5¾c to 5⅞c, fairly good at 5c to 5½c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per pound. Cows brought from 3½c to 4¾c, and bulls from 2½c to 3¾c per pound, as to quality.

The market for hogs opened strong at an advance in prices, some early buyers paying as high as $7.75 to $8 per 100 lbs. for selected lots, but later in the day a weaker feeling developed, as the supply proved to be somewhat in excess of the requirements, and in consequence prices declined 25c to 35c per 100 pounds, at which reduction the demand was fair and a good clearance was made, with sales of selected lots at $7.50 to $7.65 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for lambs, and prices declined ⅛c to ¼c per pound, which was due to the liberal supplies coming forward. At the lower range of prices there was a fair demand, and sales were made at 5¾c to 6⅛c per pound. The market for sheep was also weaker, and prices were ⅛c to ¼c per pound lower, at 3¾c. The demand for calves was fair, and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to quality.

THE BAÇKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

"'Governor,' I will say is an honorary title, that the boys along the river have given me, and at the same time it ain't so cussed honorary as a lot of titles be. What I mean to say is, some honorary titles mean that a man ain't got any power. But I have. I'm plantation assessor, constable, road commissioner, and justice of the peace, and quorum. Could have other offices, but don't want 'em. So the boys have put all titles into one and call me 'governor.' And I've took it, and I use it. I've got a lot of power up our way, and I ain't bein' called out of my name a mite when I'm referred to as "Governor" Harriss."

There was a challenge to this stranger in his tone. It was plain that other strangers had deprecated or ridiculated.

"It's pleasant to stand well enough among your neighbors to be called governor," agreed George, so frankly that he disarmed Mr. Harriss's hair-trigger suspicion. "And I'm glad to know you, for I'm headed for Corran-cache, myself. And, by the way, that's a queer name for a town! I only heard it two days ago, when I was hired by the Great Trust Co."

Governor Harriss removed his cigar, and slowly faced around in his seat.

"Do you mean to tell me that you come from any place so far away that you never heard of Cornelius Corran, the duke of the Great Toban country, and the founder of the village of Corran-cache?"

"I'll not lie about my ignorance, sir; I never did."

Harriss replaced his cigar, and faced the front. "I ain't goin' to make comments, for I never believe in bein' disagreeable when words don't do a subject any justice. But if you never heard that such a man as Cornelius Corran ever lived, it may be that you never heard the news that Cornelius Corran has just died."

"It is news to me."

"Then, it probably didn't occur to you to be surprised to see me on official business wearing my plug hat—didn't occur to you that I might not be anything but an ordinary salve peddler traveling upcountry, hey?"

"I'll be honest. I didnt' think anything about it, or what you might be."

Governor Harriss puffed at his cigar, squinting his eyes at vacancy. "That shows how little a man can judge by his own inside feelin's what kind of an impression he's makin' on the world in general. But I'm pretty blunt, young man. I'm goin' to say to you that I believe you ain't been mixin' in very thick with the general public lately, not to know any more about the world's news than you do. You've either just come out of some college, or else you've been settin' in some back yard courtin' a girl!"

"A college feller thinks he knows too much to pay any attention to what the worlds doin'; and the feller in love don't think about anything. And here Duke Cornelius, of the Great Toban, lays dead in his house at Corran-cache, leaving for heiress a daughter that is the handsomest girl in all the north country, leavin' half a million acres of timberland and all the men from St. Francis to St. Agathe to mourn him; leavin' five thousand dollars in hands of a committee, to be spent in one day in celebratin' his funeral, and the crowds now comin' from every village and loggin' camp two brass bands ordered, and me down to the city to get 'em!

"That's my official business, young man — to get them bands and an orator and a thousand-dollar coffin that's ahead of us, now — the coffin, I mean — out in the baggage car! All that happenin' and you settin' here beside Governor Harriss, comin' back from his official business, and not knowin' him from a corn doctor, or understandin' his business! My stars! That shows that this world needs something more than wireless telegraphin' to get news circulated!"

He sat for some time and dragged at his cigar, and gazed out of the window.

George was glad that the tumult in the car, recently stilled by Kyle's passage, broke out now afresh. A fight started up just behind them, and men rushed that way. An apology for his ignorance could not have been heard, and he could not think of a suitable one. Governor Harriss took off his plug hat, and guarded it on his knees.

"I never had it touched, yet; but you never know what a drunk is goin' to do when he's too far gone to recognize dignity."

Big Bill came up through the car, knocking men to right and left, battering down the innocent and the guilty, until he burst through the press and clutched the two who were battling. He tore them apart, cracked their heads together, left one, and dragged the other to the opposite end of the car.

"It's goin' to keep Bill Kyle pretty busy if he cal'lates on stopping every fight that's due in this section for the next three days," observed Governor Harriss critically. "Funeral committee reckons on spendin' at least three thousand on licker — and, seein' that it's been smuggled over from the States, you get more run in the dollar. The other two thousand will be spent on the barbecue. All outdoor cookin' for this feed! They got the fires to goin' before I came away."

He mentioned these details with a satisfied relish that jarred on George, considering the reason for the amazing demonstration.

"This strikes me as being a queer funeral you're talking about, if you'll pardon me for saying so. It sounds like a celebration of some sort."

"It is a celebration," stated Mr. Harriss calmly. "Celebration is called for by the will. That was Cornelius Curran's idea — to have his friends enjoy themselves."

He produced another cigar.

"Even these segars come out of the appropriation. Boxes open everywhere in the village; help yourself. That's why I offered you one," he added naively. "'Eat, drink, smoke, and whoop it up,' was the motto of Cornelius Corran, and he says, I want the boys all to remember me as that kind of a feller. I want 'em to look back and say that the last thing old Cornelius ever done was to give 'em the time of their lives.' And he's doin' it."

The old man eyed his silent companion slyly from the corner of his eye. "You don't think that's the right kind of a funeral to have, do ye city feller?" he demanded.

"No, I don't!" blurted George. "It seems rather heathenish to me. Your Corran must have been a——"

"You'd better not pass comments on Cornelius, not at this time, in this section," broke in Governor Harriss briskly, but calmly. "You're a stranger and young, and I'm advising you for your own good. Nobody ever ain't been in the habit of criticising the duke of the Toban. Nobody criticised how he got hold of most half a million acres, nor whether his titles would stand law, nor how he handled his men when they didn't toe the scratch, nor how he spent money when he was spendin', nor how he hung on to it when he had a 'close' fit. And he's windin' things up in a blaze of light that will flicker 'round his memory for a long time to come. Young man, I reckon it'll settle into a steady halo for him, so far as the old chaps up this way go; as for the young ones — he's Clare Corran's father, and you'll know what that means when you see her."

Then Mr. Harriss smoked in silence for a while, letting that suggestion sink in.

III

George did not feel any consuming curiosity as to what this girl of the north country might be. He imagined he knew what the daughter of such a father must be. The idea of the riotous obsequies that Cornelius Corran had provided for in his will appealed did not look at him just then. to his appreciation of the bizarre—youth has that appreciation. But Harry George came from good, old Pilgrim stock, and jesting with death and its mysterious sanctity shocked him while it interested. Mr. Harriss had something still more shocking in reserve.

"You'll have a chance to get a good look at her, like every one else that's at the funeral. She's goin' to lead the parade. The will orders a parade instead of a funeral procession that's made up of just hacks and mourners. Cornelius didn't want any hacks and mourners. Ain't any hacks up our way, for that matter. Two bands says he in his will, decorations, and the coffin set into a bateau on wheels and all wrapped stem to stern in the Canadian and Irish flags. And she's goin' to lead! That's in the will. She'l lead, ridin' on horseback — on that big, black hoss of her'n."

That last detail was too much for the young man who had passed his life among the conventions.

"Mr. Harriss," he said reproachfully, "I believe you are one of these Canadian jokers who go around making up yarns to fool people. I don't believe there ever was any Cornelius Corran, or that there's going to be any funeral."

"You and me don't want trouble, but there'll be some between us if you undertake to call me a liar," stated Mr. Harriss, with dignity.

"But no girl would do such a thing at that, even if her father's will did order her to," cried the young man. "It's impossible. It's shameful!"

"Meanin' that Clare Corran would do anything that wasnt right and proper?" inquired Governor Harriss a baleful light in his eyes.

"Doing a think like that wouldn't be proper."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. Letitia Blair, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 12.—Sir Wm Van Horne, accompanied by his son, Mr. R. Benjamin Van Horne, and his secretary, arrived in the city at noon yesterday in his private car Saskatchewan, attached to the Atlantic express. He spoke strongly against reciprocity at a Conservative meeting last evening.

When asked by the reporters whether he intended to continue his platform campaign against reciprocity, Sir William said that, like some other things, when one got started on a campaign of this kind it was hard to tell where it would stop. "I have received a great many invitations to speak in other places, and I will probably go to upper Canada or the west, to accept some of them. I cannot say where I will speak, as the arrangements are being made by the campaign managers, and I will leave it to them to make the announcements in their own way. I have placed myself in their hands, and I am out to do all I can to bust the damn thing. That is all I can say."

LOSS IN CATTLE

Animals Would be Exported Before Fattened or Ready for Market

It is practically admitted all round that Reciprocity would kill the cattle-raising business in Canada. One decisive advantage enjoyed by the American cattle-raiser is corn-feeding. When we use corn, we must import it. The result of Reciprocity would probably be that we would export such cattle as we did raise, in the form of "store cattle," to the United States, where they would be fattened on corn and even on feeds exported from Canada in a raw condition, and then sold as a finished product in the British market where we now send that product ourselves. The effect of this upon the farmer cannot be better illustrated than by last year's figures. We then exported approximately 100,004 head of cattle for which we got over seven million dollars. Had we sold these cattle as "yearlings" to the Americans, they would have netted about $20 a head or two million dollars. So our farmers would have lost just five million dollars on the deal, or seventy per cent. of their gains (not counting the cost of feeding).

To put it another way, the effect of Reciprocity would be that we would ship our thin cattle to the United States, and, with them, our hay, straw, grain, etc., which would be used there to help fatten these cattle. The main product of the manufacture—meat—would be sold by the Chicago Beef Trust at its own prices; and the by-products would be employed to enrich American farms. Our farmers would lose the whole profit of manufacture—seventy per cent. as we have seen—and would lose the return of the fertilizing elements to their land. Their farms would be rapidly impoverished; and very soon the cattle business in Canada would either die or dwindle to the purely domestic and preliminary features.

As to the comparative prices of cattle at the present time, the following figures may not be uninteresting. In Maine (quoting Senate Documen 849), dairy cows are worth $33 and other cattle $16.90. In Nova Scotia dairy cows are worth $37 and other cattle $29. In New Brunswick they are worth $34 and $28 respectively. In New York dairy cows are worth $39.50 and other cattle $18.20. In Ontario dairy cows are quoted at $48 and other cattle $34. In Minnesota dairy cows are put at $33 and other cattle at $14.30. In Manitoba they run $40 and $23. In North Dakota they stand $33.90 and $2050. In Saskatchewan they go $41 and $31.

So it is obvious that the Canadian cattle-raiser cannot expect to get higher prices for his cattle under Reciprocity. The opposite will then be true. Prices will be hammered away down by American competition.

JUG HANDLED AFFAIR

The Twelve Favored Nations Will Still Levy Duties on Canadian Products

It is expressly included in the reciprocity resolutions that the benefits given to the United States are to be extended to the Empire; and this with no proviso as to a return being made.

Thus the Canadian farmer gets free admission for his natural products to the United States, and to the United States alone.

The Canadian farmer pays for this by allowing free admission of natural products into his home market:—

1. To the United States.
2. To the twelve most-favored nation countries.
3. To the countries of the British Empire, notably Australia and New Zealand.

Not a cent will come off the duties levied on Canadian products by Austria-Hungary, Argentina, New Zealand, Australia, or the rest. Their products will enter free. New Zealand butter will enter free; Canadian butter shipped to New Zealand has to pay 20 per cent.; Canadian butter shipped to Australia will continue to pay 6 cents a pound; Canadian butter shipped to Argentina still will be taxed 4½ cents a pound.

PREVENT A PREFERENCE

Reciprocity Will Stop Any Trade Favors from the Mother Country

Whatever effect Reciprocity has on the Canadian preference on British goods, it will finally prevent any British Government from ever giving Canada a preference on our natural products. It has been frankly interpreted as the death of the Colonial Preference idea in Britain, both by its friends and by its enemies.

Britain will not bonus our wheat when that wheat is being shipped to Minneapolis and Buffalo and mixed with American wheat before export. More than that, free trade working both ways, what would prevent the "cute Americans" from sending their wheat into Canada to be subsequently exported to Britain from Canadian ports as Colonial wheat with a right to the preference?

Then the basic idea of the Preferential scheme is to unite the various British communities commercially; and this idea is negatived when the Canadian community is united commercially with a foreign nation.

WHY NOT CANADA ?

Why Not Keep Our Wheat Home and Grind It Ourselves

Don't we want "new mills," "new markets," "new railways," more "money in circulation," "bigger pay-rolls," increased value in our land, and all the profitable benefits which this American paper says will go to the people who grind the Canadian wheat crop?

We have the wheat crop. Why not keep it at home and grind it ourselves? Then it will be of us that it can be said:—

"The miller who is able to grind this enormous crop will be the miller of the future; and, where he is, there will be the great mills of the world."

There were 1,133 registrations at St. Catharines.

HOW TO TREAT HAY FEVER

TAKE "FRUIT-A-TIVES" IF YOU WANT RELIEF

Hay Fever is not a nervous trouble. The real cause is impure blood, due to defective action of bowels, kidneys and skin. In ninety per cent of the cases of Hay Fever, there is Chronic Constipation, Weak Stomach or Indigestion.

This is proved by the fact that sprays, gargles and other local treatments do not cure Hay Fever.

One or two "Fruit-a-tives" every night will stimulate the bowels, kidneys and skin, and thus remove the poisons in the body which produce the fever and nervousness.

Beattie Blames Woman.

Chesterfield, Va., Sept. 11.—Severe repudiation of Beulah Binford, as a girl from whom he vainly tried to detach himself, and the direct imputation that the jury judged him more for his indiscretions than the tragedy itself came Saturday from the lips of Henry Clay Beattie, jr., convicted on Friday of wife murder.

Any other jury, composed of city folk, with mundane views, would have been more merciful was his bitter lament. "Fearfully unfair," he muttered in his cell when asked his opinion of the verdict.

"Beulah Binford," he added, "figured largely in the verdict — more largely than the testimony of the killing. These country folk cannot understand how a woman of the underworld can be crazy about you. They don't know when that happens how very hard it is to get rid of her."

When she received the news of the verdict against Henry Clay Beattie, Beulah Binford said: "He is innocent. I am sure he had nothing to do with the murder of his wife. It's easy to kick a man when he is down, and everybody has been against him."

Wm. Grant, aged 25 of Chatham, a brakeman, was killed while coupling cars. He leaves a widow and two children.

O. W. White, of Calgary, a C.P.R. fireman, was killed when his engine was derailed.

C.P.R. LOCAL MET WITH MISHAP

Passengers on the C.P.R. local last evening were rather badly shaken up when just as the train was pulling out of Burketon Junction the engine, baggage car, parlor car and part of another coach, left the rails. The train was going at a slow rate of speed at the time, and no cause for the accident could be learned. No one was hurt.

The three coaches were left at Burketon and another engine coupled to the remaining portion of the train, and after some delay continued its trip arriving in Peterborough about ten oclock. Quite a number of local people were passengers.

SOME CURIOSITY.

To the Editor of the Review:

Dear Sir,—Would you please insert the following questions in your paper:

How could J. H. Burnham or anyone else, blacken Stratton's name?

Also, is Mr R. Leary going to help in the same work he did the last election?

C. F.

HURTS THE WORKINGMAN.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me to draw the attention of the public to a few things that is shown up by Franklin Escher, one of United States' greatest minds on the subject of what reciprocity means to the money markets of United States. He says there are, nevertheless, at least three distinct points in contact.

The first is in the increase of our American manufactures, which is bound to take place, and which will tend strongly to help the price of the securities of our manufacturing companies.

The second is in the tonnage, which will be gained by our American railroads as the result of the increased volume of merchandise passing over those roads. Workingmen, how does this appeal to you? Is it possible to increase the American manufacturing business and railroad business without decreasing ours?

Third, is the reduction of the cost of living to the people of United States, which may be expected as the result of the breaking of the tariff barricade that such increase and result is only gained at the expense of the American farmer. Farmers, think of it, where do extra prices come in? Is not this a genuine tug-of-war of over ninety million people against nine millions of people. The argument put forth by Mr. Escher has not been disputed by the measure's bitterest enemies across the line. How can you expect to get the difference in the price of wheat, &c., between Toronto and Chicago, and reduce the price of bread in Chicago; and what is bothering me most is how much was laid down on the table for the running of this campaign when Secretary Knox requested Fielding and Paterson to sign such an unfair and unjust agreement. As a working man who knows something of what the rough side of life is, and who is trying to earn a livelihood for those depending on me by honest endeavor, I intend to do my part that the labor of this country will be protected. It may mean, and does mean, the sacrifice of the great Liberal party of our Dominion, but they have said the word, and let them take their medicine. It should not be a political question at all, and the honest electors of the Dominion are not treating it as such, and will bury it out of existence on the 21st.

I remain, yours, &c.,
W. H. MERRILL.

WEDDING BELLS

KERZINGER—SULLIVAN.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. F Dunnett, Barnardo avenue, on Saturday afternoon, Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, united in marriage Miss Esther Sullivan, of Peterborough, to Mr. George Kerzinger, of Detroit.

RISHEA—LEAHY.

At six o'clock this morning the Sacred Heart church was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Annie Leahy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leahy, 162 Wescott street, and Mr. Albert Rishea, of Fort William, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Dr. O'Brien.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Robert Leahy, was becomingly attired in white duchess satin, and carried a bridal bouquet of pink and white asters.

The bridesmaid, Miss Celena Rishea, sister of the groom, wore a gown of white embroidery, and carried a bouquet of pink asters. The groom was assisted by Mr. Robert Leahy, brother of the bride.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Gertrude Leahy, sister of the bride, who was gowned in crea msilk.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent, and to the groomsman a diamond stick pin.

After the wedding ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. The dining hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with chrysanthemums and ferns.

Mr. and Mrs. Rishea left on the 8.30 G.T.R. train for Toronto, on their wedding trip. The bride's travelling gown was of navy blue cloth and she wore a white beaver hat with a willow plume. They will reside in Fort William.

OVERFLOW MEETING FOR MR. BURNHAM AT LAKEHURST

Conservative Candidate took Up the Issues of Campaign The Mystery at Washington

Notwithstanding the lowering skies the hall at Lakefield was filled to overflowing at Mr. Burnham's meeting last night. A number of ladies were present. Mr. Burnham was unaccompanied and spoke for one hour and a quarter upon the chief issues of the day. He said that as Mr. Stratton was evidently making it a point to come after him, whenever possible, it was necessary to forestall much of what might be said. He thereupon gave a full description of the Farmers' Bank affair, and said that any attempt of Mr. Stratton to evade the fact that he is not actually under indictment, charged with being one of those who procured the charter of the Farmers' Bank, was useless, and that he, the speaker, stood ready to make good his word, as suggested by the Examiner on one occasion, in the opera house or any other place. The speaker dealt also with changes which were coming over the spirit of the continent. When a few years ago trade was the only matter of consideration, outside the frenzy of political partizanship, other organizations had sprung up and completed their equipment to such an extent that their work was even more important than that of even free trade or politics. However, he had faith in the fact that the people would see to it that no organization should be allowed to circumscribe their liberties.

People have been so accustomed to sensational news that when important news is made now, it is received with indifference. In this lies a great danger.

Mr. Burnham dealt at length with the reciprocity question, going into it in detail, quoting from President Taft to show that in almost every branch of production the Americans poured more into Canada by a large margin than Canada sent to the United States.

Supposing that the wider market theory was correct, the increased trade in the present proportions would mean the complete swamping of Canadian industries. There could be no denying of that. He quoted also from the Minneapolis Journal to show that the real reason the United States wanted the pact, and suggested it was that Canada was rapidly procuring a commanding position abroad, and the United States becoming anxious to prevent further rivalry, had decided on a very cunning plan of securing Canada's raw products and shipping them abroad herself. It would also remain a mystery why Canada went totally unprepared into an agreement, in which the other side had made most elaborate preparations. The speaker said that we had turned down commercial union and unrestricted reciprocity at two general elections, and there was no reason to suppose that the present reciprocity pact would not meet with the same result.

With good hearty cheers for the King and the candidate the meeting was brought to a close.

"WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT IT?"

That's what a customer asked us recently about a patent medicine we had sold for years, and we were forced to admit that in reality we knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising.

Some of the claims made were so extravagant that, of course, we could not take them seriously. This is the reason why we strongly recommend our own preparations.

Nugent's Family Remedies are manufactured by the Nugent Drug Co. These preparations have a reputation of over a quarter of a century. We manufacture over forty remedies (one for every ill).

These preparations have stood the test for years and we have scores of testimonials from people who have tried them and have found them to give perfect satisfaction.

SLOBBERING ON THE PLATFORM

Arguments Appealing to Men are Being Abandoned

It is reported that a certain candidate not more than 2000 miles away from Peterborough, has begun his old tactics of weeping copiously on the public platform. On failing to impress his constituents with the strength of his arguments and character, he has betaken himself to pouring briny tears in copious floods on the platform, accompanied, no doubt, by suitable groans of anguish, which would be calculated to move the hearts of the ballot markers of his audience. There are some ridiculous things in politics and surely this is one of them. There was once a man in Kentucky named Slobbering John and possibly the reciprocity pact has already had some effect in this particular.

YOUNG LADIES SAID FAREWELL

Presented Miss Mildred Roberts With Brooch and Address

The members of the Young Ladies' Bible Class of the Mark street church, under the leadership of their teacher, Mrs. Stanley Matchett, gathered at the home of Miss Mildred Roberts, one of their number last night and presented her with a fancy brooch and an address.

Miss Roberts sails next week for England. She has been very popular with a large circle of friends and her classmates took this opportunity of expressing their high estimation of her.

A very pleasant social evening was spent.

OBITUARY

Robert Lawrence

The death is announced of one of the very old residents of the city and neighborhood in the person of Robert Lawrence, who had reached the age of 84 years. He was a native of County Cork, Ireland, and came to Canada when 11 years of age, in charge of a Mr. Bethune, his grandfather being a Church of England clergyman. He lived in his early days with Mr. Wm. Walsh, Cavan, until manhood. He lived near Baltimore for some years, and married Ellen Ranney, daughter of a Scotch resident of the neighborhood. For years he worked a small farm in Otonabee; but for the last twenty years had practically retired from active work. He leaves five sons, John J., Woodstock, Ill.; David, Douro; Robert, Toronto; Ernie, Peterborough; Bertram G., of Smith. One daughter is Mrs. W. E. Chamberlain, Douro. He was a staunch Conservative and loyal supporter of the party, and a member of the Church of England. He was for many years a faithful member of the Orange Order, and respected for his firm adherence to its principles. In private life he was ever genial and friendly, and enjoyed a large circle of friends, especially those whose recollections carried them back to the early days of the county and city.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, 13th, from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. W. C. Chamberlain, Douro, to the Little Lake cemetery, at 2 p.m.

FRANCE WILL REFUSE.

Her Reply to Germany Is to Reject Moroccan Proposals.

Paris, Sept. 12.—France's reply to Germany's counter-proposals in the Moroccan negotiations has been written, and will be laid before the French Cabinet to-day for approval. The task of drawing up the reply proved simpler than at first expected, doubtless because the German demands were such as could not be accepted by France. The reply will be despatched by special courier to the French Ambassador at Berlin after the Cabinet meeting to-day, and he will hand it to the German Foreign Minister, Herr Von Kidderlen-Waechter.

It is understood that the reply, while it is written in a spirit of conciliation, is absolutely firm with regard to the position which France has assumed concerning questions of principle, from which France will not depart a hair's breadth.

The broad outlines of Germany's proposals have been communicated to the public, because the Government believes that the people have a right to know at this period of tension what was being done. Foreign Minister De Selves has also indicated in a semi-official note that France's reply would be a refusal to accept Germany's conditions. In this French opinion appears to be wholly united and prepared for any contingency.

One point of view in official quarters is that Germany's financial situation, which is expected to reach a climax by the end of September, may tend to moderate Germany's demands.

German Opinion Optimistic.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The German newspapers generally have adopted a more optimistic tone relative to the Moroccan negotiations. The Cologne Gazette's semi-official Berlin despatch declares that the French reply to Germany will arrive at the end of the week, after which Germany will be in a position to prepare further proposals. The developments up to the present, says the despatch, justify the belief that both sides are striving for a satisfactory solution of the difficulty.

Bismarck's Sword Fell.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—There was a strange incident on Saturday in the Saxon town of Artern.

Hundreds of the inhabitants gathered in the square where Bismarck's statue is situated. As a clock in the square struck noon the sword which the statue of the dead statesman held in its hand extended and fell noisily to the ground. It was immediately followed by one of the arms.

This peculiar happening caused a great sensation among the superstitious, many of whom declared that it was a sign of war.

SHAM CONSTABLES.

Montreal Men Charged With Despicable Hold-Up Game.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Wearing a rag-picker's license, which somewhat resembles a constable's badge, and carrying a dark lantern, two men have been conducting a hold-up game in Westmount and Notre Dame de Grace. Sauntering along some of the less frequented streets they flash their lanterns in likely places to find spooning couples. On finding a young man and girl, their game is to go up, flash the badge and tell them they have to come along to the police station. It was not hard to convince such people that they had committed some offence of the bylaws. These two "officers" would gently insinuate that if a little cash was forthcoming the matter might easily be fixed. The game was a good one until Sunday night a young gallant on Cote St. Antoine road refused to produce the coin when "arrested," and notified the police. One constable was sent out and arrested a man on the charge of loitering, and he appeared in the Westmount Police Court yesterday.

Here he was confronted by two girls who identified him as a man who had stolen a purse from them. The girls had been so frightened when confronted by the men on a dark street that one of them dropped her purse on the sidewalk, and the men immediately made off with it.

Accordingly, the man the police arrested Sunday night was remanded for a couple of days until the police can locate the other man.

Record Heat In England.

London, Sept. 12.—Friday was the hottest Sept. 8 in English records. The thermometer at South Kensington marked 92 in the shade, and never before has a temperature above 90 been registered in London in September.

It was the thirty-third day this summer on which the temperature of London exceeded 80, and the sixth day on which it reached 90.

The drought has been equally remarkable. The water famine in various parts of the country is becoming serious. Reservoirs are empty and condemned wells are being re-opened, with grave risk to health.

ACCIDENT TO DELIVERY DRIVER

Horse Fell and Young Lad Was Thrown to the Road

A young boy who drives the grocery delivery waggon for John Hill, was stunned this morning by being thrown off the cart when the horse stumbled and fell.

The accident occurred on Charlotte street about nine o'clock. One of the cart wheels stuck in the street car track throwing the horse to the road. The youthful driver was shot out, and over the horse's head and lay on the ground slightly dazed. Passersby helped him up and he soon recovered. No other damage was done.

BELIEVED TO BE SAFE.

Canadian Missionaries In Charge of an Armed Guard?

Toronto, Sept. 12.—The anxiety felt for the safety of the missionaries in West China can not be hidden, although members of the Foreign Mission Board are confident that the protection of the British gunboats is sufficient to insure safety during their flight from Chengtu to Chingking, a journey of 500 miles. In the meantime, telegraphic communications are cut off from Chengtu, and nothing definite from this point, which is in the fighting zone, has been heard.

The following cable answers, received by Mr. Shore of the Foreign Missionary movement, tell the story, while the missionaries are believed to be en route to Chingking from Chengtu surrounded by Government troops.

"Chingking, Sept. 11, 1911.

"Situation quiet, officials and people friendly. Extremely anxious about Chengtu. There is no telegraphic communication with Chengtu or Kiatingfu. There is every probability that Chengtu missionaries left a few days ago, acting under orders from consul. We are now endeavoring to provide against all emergencies.

"M. A. Brillinger."

"Shanghai, Sept. 11, 1911.

"Owing to the critical state of Chengtu, foreigners have been ordered to Chingking. Reported on the 7th. Communication is interrupted.

"China Inland Mission."

"New York, Sept. 11, 1911.

"No replies to cables Chengtu for three days. Associated Press states Pekin has had no word Chengtu four days. Anxious.

"Boston, Mass., Sept. 11, 1911.

"No word from Chengtu since cablegrams reported to you. Associated Press now reports nothing heard from Chengtu in four days. Believes missionaries are being escorted by Government troops in the direction of Yangtse River.

Dominion Census.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—Steps are being taken by the census branch this week to collect the last outstanding information as to the population of Canada; when it is in the first official bulletin will be issued. When the census was taken it was found that in cities and towns there were many vacant houses. It was deemed advisable to wait till September, when the holiday season is over, to collect this information, and it is being done this week. An official announcement as to the population of the Dominion may be looked for not later than next week.

STRATTON TALKED TO BURNHAMITES

Nogies Creek in Sympathy With Conservative Policy

Nogies Creek, Sept. 9—Mr. Stratton's meeting on Wednesday evening Sept. 6th was but fairly attended. There was little or no enthusiasm. Mr. Harstone was the first speaker. He dwelt on the trade question from the Western farmers' standpoint leaving the impression that the North West was, and always will be our best horse market. He also stated that conditions have changed so in the United States in the last twenty-five years that they have found it necessary to make an agreement in trade relations with out Government. He also stated that this agreement was very one sided, but he failed to go on and show which side it favored, but the careful study this agreement will clearly show that the United States are having shipped into them our products for their use that they are looking for free of duty, and the most of their products that we require are still under a heavy tariff. Coal and coal oil are two of our largest imports and the duty on coal remains 45 cents a ton, and the duty on coal oil Mr. Stratton admitted, was past considered. Mr. Stratton's as well as Mr. Harstone's speech, was a wonderful exhibition of egotism. Mr. Harstone is trying to impress the people that he had so prospered under our present protective system that outside of a great store in East Northumberland, that he had a massive farm in the West and a beautiful residence in Peterboro. It mattered very little to the people whether Mr. Stratton had the finest ladies' driver in the world or not, or whether the carriage team he drives was named Moll and Jim, or Nesbitt and Travers One interesting point of the meeting was when Mr. Stratton completely defeated Mr. Harstone's point that wheat would be at least 9 cts. a bushel higher under the reciprocity agreement by declaring that the United States had pushed the agreement through on the grounds that it would reduce the cost of living to their people. At last, the chairman defeated the whole meeting by stating that the United States was on the point of destitution. The speakers got no applause. Mr. Harstone only received the clap of two persons, one from the settlement and one from Bobcaygeon. Not over a dozen men women and children responded with a clap for Mr. Stratton, and that very weak. There wasn't even an attempt of a cheer for reciprocity, Laurier or Stratton.

The meeting broke up with at least seventy five per cent of those present in sympathy with Mr. Burnham, and British connection.

There was also a great feeling of the people after the meeting, that Mr. Stratton, who poses to be a charitable man, should have had charity enough to give Mr. Hall and the Liberals of East Peterboro, their share of the honor for the improvements of this entire county in the last twenty-five years.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NOVA SCOTIAN'S WILL

Big Estate Devoted to Benefit of Poor of His Native Province

The will of the late Jas. Cosman, of Meteghan, Digby, N.S., leaves an estate estimated at $600,000. After making a number of small bequests, he bequeaths all his property to three trustees, to be appointed by the Archbishop of Halifax, to be sold and invested in securities, but directs that no Government bonds shall be bought where the funds may be used by such Government for wars or conquest. When these annuities shall cease, through death or otherwise, the accumulated funds of the estate shall be divided into two equal parts, one of which parts shall be handed over by three trustees, to be appointed by the Bishop of Rapahoe, Ireland. The remaining half shall be kept invested in Nova Scotia, and be used by the Nova Scotia trustees for the benefit of the poor of Nova Scotia as the trustees deem best. The first half of the income shall be invested in trust securities and allowed to accumulate for one hundred years, or longer, if necessary, to provide an amount to establish hospitals or homes in Nova Scotia for the needy, where they may end their days in comfort. The County of Digby shall first be provided for, but the Archbishop of Halifax shall decide the number and location of such hospitals. In every institution under the will there shall be an inscription stating that it was donated by James Cosman, Weymouth, N.S. The half of the Nova Scotia portion which is to be accumulated will amount at the end of one hundred years at five per cent. to about $34,000,000.

A DUKEDOM IN ALBERTA

Duke of Sutherland Has Purchased an Immense Western District

The Duke of Sutherland has set an excellent example for the over-lords of England who, under Lloyd-George's system of land taxation, are finding it desirable to dispose of their ancestral holdings. He has pointed a way for them to still be land barons on a vast scale, by transferring the proceeds of their English estates to Western Canada and becoming proprietors of large tracts, which can be obtained now for a mere nothing but will later be of great value, as the country developes.

His Grace of Sutherland has purchased an immense district in Alberta and about two thousand acres near Brooks in that province are now being prepared by his agent for occupation by British farmers. The farms will vary from eighty to one hundred and sixty acres, and it is expected that they will be ready for occupation next spring. By the time the settlers arrive the first crop will be almost ready for them to harvest.

In selecting settlers, preference, but not exclusively, will be given to Scotsmen with families—and the larger the family the more welcome they will be. Some of them will be sons of former tenants upon the Duke's British estates. The capital required by each settler will be from $1,500 to $2,500, according to the size of the farm. Settlers may become owners of their holdings by paying in installments.

That the Duke of Sutherland is very earnest in this undertaking is indicated by the fact that contracts are said to have been let for the construction of a splendid mansion for himself upon his new Canadian estates, and announcement is made that he will hereafter spend a considerable portion of each year in this country. We hope others of his class will follow his lead and thus give to farming in Western Canada the virility and training of the best Scotch and English country blood.

VALUE OF LIVE STOCK

In a Dry Season This Value on the Farm is Very Evident

The true value of live stock is clearly demonstrated in a dry season. Adverse conditions show the distinction between good and poor farming. In driving through the country, it is quite an easy matter to select the farms on which the crop is fed and sold in the form of meat or milk. It is equally easy to select those on which little or no stock is kept and no special effort made to keep up the soil fertility, everything being sold off the place in the raw state. On farms that are well manured and thoroughly cultivated fairly good crops are the result; while those that have been continuously cropped show a light crop and a lack of something, and it goes to indicate that the material lacking is good manure, which can be best supplied by keeping stock.

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government, was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian workingmen.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

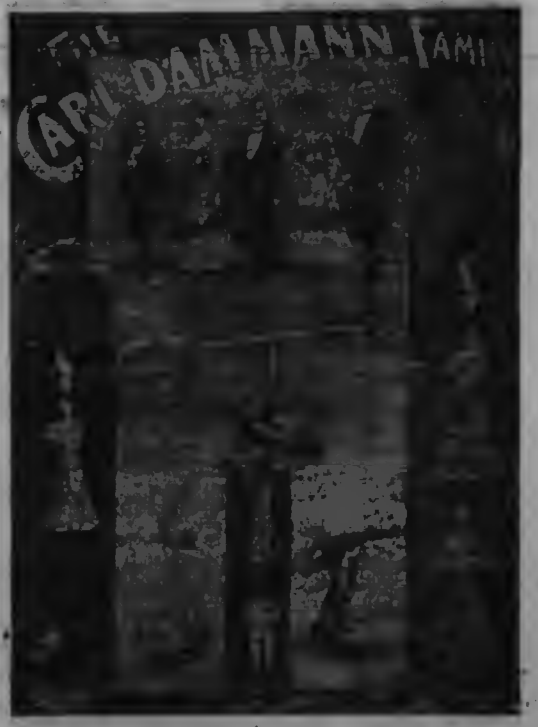
For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.



The celebrated family of Acrobats who will give afternoon and evening performances in front of the Grand Stand at the Peterboro' Industrial on Thursday and Friday. The entertainment promises to eclipse any other such program given to Peterboro' people. The 57th band will also be in attendance.

True Bill For Murder.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—At the criminal assizes of the court of King's Bench yesterday, a true bill was found against Arthur Peachey, held on a charge of murder, and true bills against Giuseppi Proetti, Nicholas Patris and Joseph Vaillancourt, on charges of attempted murder.

Peachey is the watchman who got into an altercation on the street, fired three shots, finally wounding Emile Lesette, one of the men with whom he had been fighting.

"ONE FLAG SHALL FLOAT"

Governor Bates, of Massachusetts, speaking at the Intercolonial Club, Boston, said: "We recognise that these Maritime Provinces are bound to the American nation by ties that nature and history forged in the days long past; and the link which binds these countries to us is stronger even than the link which binds them to old England. We do not know that the time will come, but we suspect it will, when it shall be recognized, with the consent of the Motherland and the approval of the people of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, that the welfare of all requires that but one flag should float over this whole country."

Ottawa Train Sheds

The new train sheds of the G.T.R. hotel at Ottawa will be constructed under the protection of the Bush patent, of the same character as the large one built recently in Chicago, Ill. It is a continuous shed with an opening in the centre for the smokestacks of the locomotives, so that it will be quite free from smoke. The roof will be of cement with inserts of heavy glass. This style has given satisfaction wherever used.

Five memorial windows were unveiled at the Church of the Ascension, Hamilton, last evening.

SAME OLD PURPOSE

United States Used the Rod on Canada, But Insidious Commercial Processes is the New Method

Years ago Mr. Andrew Carnegie wrote: "Although I am opposed to taxing the food and the necessaries of the people, I should make an exception in regard to the products of Canada, and this without regard to the doctrines of either free-trade or protection, but as a matter of high politics. I think we betray a lack of statesmanship in allowing commercial advantages to a country which owes allegiance to a foreign power founded upon monarchical institutions which may always be trusted at heart to detest the Republican idea. If Canada were free and independent and threw in her lot with this continent it would be a different matter. So long as she remains upon our flank a possible foe, not upon her account, but subject to the orders of a European Power, and ready to be called by that Power to exert her forces against us, even upon issues that may not concern Canada, I should let her distinctly understand that we view her as a menace to the peace and security of our country, and I should treat her accordingly. She should not be in the Union and out of the Union at the same time, if I could prevent it. Therefore, I should tax highly all her products entering the United States; and this I should do, not in dislike for Canada, but for love of her, in the hope that it would cause her to realize that the nations upon this Continent are expected to be American nations, and, I trust, finally one nation, so far as the English speaking portion is concerned. I should use the rod not in anger but in love; but I should use it."

The United States used the rod for years, says the News. Coercion having failed, it now tries another method. It hopes by slow, insidious commercial processes to break down our individuality.

LOSE ITS IDENTITY

Canadian Wheat Would Be Exported As American Flour

Canadian Wheat is the best in the world. We must never forget this crucial fact when thinking of the effects of dumping our wheat into a common pile with anybody else. The American millers now buy our wheat and pay the duty in order to have it to mix with their own inferior grade and so get better flour for their own people. They can import it, of course, without duty, to grind for export. Their own Government so frankly recognizes the superiority of Canadian wheat that it has made a special provision for allowing them to import it, grind it, and then export the flour, without paying duty on the Canadian grain.

Our Government is now passing through Parliament a strong act which holds all sorts of heavy penalties over any persons who "mix" Canadian wheat in elevators or elsewhere, and thereby cause our superior grades to lose their identity. We are going to have a Dominion Grain Commission, composed of high-priced men and with heavy running expenses, to watch our wheat from the head to the hopper and see that it does not get "mixed" with inferior grades.

Yet Reciprocity will invite our farmers to send their wheat to a market where "mixing" is a regular part of the trade, and where Canadian wheat is bought for the very purpose of "mixing" it with low-grade American wheats with a view to giving body to the flour. In American mills its identity will not be accidentally lost, but deliberately destroyed. The world will forget the existence of "Manitoba hard." It will have died to give a better reputation to American flour. Our boasted Grain Commission will be money and labor thrown away.

Moreover, the very fact that our law will not permit "mixing" in Canada while the American law encourages it, will tend to divert the shipment of wheat through American ports; and Duluth, Buffalo, and New York will be built up at the expense of Fort William, Port Arthur, Montreal, St. John and Halifax. This practically means the serious crippling of the elevator business throughout Canada and the annihilation of our boasted inland marine. We have been establishing fine ship-building industries on our inland waters, supporting a population which must buy its food from the Canadian farmer; and now this will be knocked on the head by a system which makes shipment much easier and more loosely watched by American ships and ports.

TO LOWER YANKEE WAGES

The Very Time When Canada Should Keep Up Her Barriers

In the past the Canadian tariff, the Canadian banking system, and the steady character of the Canadian people have combined to protect this country against these economic American cyclones. With another American panic in full view are we going to begin pulling down the tariff which has been one of the Dominion's chief safeguards against American hard times and American panics. The Canadian workingman has most at stake. Such important American newspapers as the Chicago Examiner and the Wall Street Journal believe that a drastic cut in American railway wages is impending. They say that "wages are demonstrably too high in the sense that they represent more than the work is worth measured by the wealth which it creates." The last named authority declares that the reduction is long overdue, and it urges the men to accept a cut without struggling. At the same time the Canadian Pacific Railway is actually advancing the wages of a great number of its employes.

SIGNIFICANT MOVE OF PETERBORO PRESBYTERIANS; COUNCIL WAS ORGANIZED

Three Presbyterian Churches Unite for Forward Movement Movement—Coming Visit of Moderator of General Assembly, Superintendent of Home Missions and Secretary of Mens Missionary Movement

That the Presbyterians of the city city are very much alive was fully demonstrated last night in the lecture hall of St. Andrew's church, when the men connected with the Boards and sessions of the three congregations met together and formed a city union which they call a Presbyterian council. It means that St. Paul's Knox and St. Andrew's churches will work together and plan together in whatever is of interest to Presbyterianism in Peterboro. The members of the Boards of Managers and Sessions entered into the proposition unanimously and all feel it will be a great help and inspiration. They were fully prepared for the closer fellowship the council stands for. Officers were elected and the honor of President, falls upon the shoulders of sheriff Hall of St. Paul's church. Mr. Richard Lees of St. Andrew's was elected as Vice-President and Mr. J. W. Buyers Knox, Sec. Treas.

The first action of the new council was to plan for the visit of the representatives of the General Assembly, who will be in the pulpits of the churches on Sept. 24th. It was decided to follow up their visit with a speedy canvas of every Presbyterian family in the city, that each person may realize his or her obligation to the church. Dr. Grant, Dr. McKay and Mr. Anderson will meet the canvassers on Monday night in St. Andrew's Hall. This conference will be succeeded by a whirlwind campaign lasting only one week during which the elders and managers of each church, will visit every person holding Presbyterian connection. Great results are expected and the men are full of enthusiasm. When a banquet was suggested to celebrate the union and the work, it was decided to work first and eat afterwards. The movement is full of promise and its consummation is one in which the people generally will rejoice.

Park St. Harvest Home Services

The annual Harvest Home services of the Park street Baptist church will be held Sunday, September 24th, and Monday, the 25th.

And don't overlook the midway. Secretary Hall says he has had the largest number of applications in the history of the exhibition, but only the best will be permitted on the grounds.

Organizations from All Saints, Knox and Park street churches will have big eating booths, with all facilities of feeding everybody and doing the job right.

The classes are gentlemen's driver, Tandem of three horses, Unicorn Four in Hand, Ladies' Turnout, Tandem, Single high steppers and saddle. They will be shown during the two days of Friday and Saturday. A megaphone in the hands of a capable marshall, will be used for the convenience of the crowds in informing them as to the program

A demonstration of the Fire Department will be given at eight o'clock before the grand stand.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE IN SESSION

Engineer Jamieson Will do Extra Work at the Pumping Station.

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light committee called last night to discuss the proposition of the Board of Works, that Engineer Jamieson of the Fire station, be appointed to look after the south city pumping station in conjunction with his duties at the Fire station, and the granting of hose to the Board of Works. There were present, Ald. Morgan, chairman; Metheral Edgar, Graham and Kerneghan, acting secretary Adams, city engineer Hay and Mr. Perdue.

The committee granted 87 feet of fire hose, at the same price per foot as the last was sold to the Board of Works.

WANTED—A LIGHT

Mr. J. J. Turner asked the committee to place a light at the corner of King and Water streets as it is very dark. When he has a large show company he often had to seek police protection for the girls as many young fellows line up after the show and await their appearance. There was no action taken.

Ald Edgar asked that a pole at the corner of Weller and Park streets be removed. Ald. Graham and Edgar are to view the place and see if it can be done satisfactorily.

Mr. Perdue recommended engineer Jamieson as a competent man. He said it would be necessary for him to be down there for a week steady. He could be reached by telephone in case of fire

Mr. Jamieson was satisfied to do the work for a consideration, but he wished his duties defined. He would do the work for $20 extra.

Ald Kerneghan thought the man on the steam roller could look after the work, but as a man was necessary in the summer also this was not considered

Ald Metheral did not like the idea of paying too much money, but he said the idea now was to have a man on the job while Mr. Perdue was here to show him.

The committee decided in favor of allowing engineer Jamieson to work at the sewer pumping station He is to start to-morrow morning.

W. R. Travers Says That Dr. Beattie Nesbitt Was a Particular Friend of J. R. Stratton's

Some Interesting Evidence in the Farmers' Bank Case—Nesbitt Said He Could Get Political Help With the Government if Necessary

W. R. Travers' evidence in the Police Court at Toronto in the Farmer's Bank hearing:

Q—Do you know anything about Dr. Nesbitt?

A—No. I couldn't say that I do.

A—No, I can't say he did.

Q—What did he tell you about Mr. Stratton?

A—I remember he mentioned his name once or twice, or more. He was a particular friend of his.

A—Yes!

Q—Did he tell you anything about Mr. Stratton in connection with the $80,000 loan?

A—No, nothing was mentioned about that.

Q—Do you remember after Knight was there—you were asked for a special return and you said that you and Nesbitt and others had made it up together? Did Nesbitt say anything then about Stratton?

A—That was a long time after. The return was asked for in May, and Knight was there in December, 1906.

Q—What did he say about Stratton then?

A—When?

Q—When you were making up that special report.

A—Well, I don't remember the exact conversation. It was to the effect that if the government was not satisfied in any way, that perhaps he could get some of his friends to help him.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT ISSUES STRINGENT ORDER

Pekin, Sept. 13.—An imperial edict issued yesterday says that the ringleaders in the disorders in Szechuen Province intended to proclaim independence. As a consequence, the Chinese Government has ordered the viceroy to destroy the rebels to the last man. The viceroy's attention has been called, however, to the fact that many of those taking part in the disturbances are misguided, and the Government instructs him to distinguish between them and the actual rebels in imposing punishment.

The possibility of very serious results in Szechuen is considered grave. If the rebellion is not promptly suppressed it is likely to spread to other provinces, where there has been much discontent of late. Some of the newspapers are urging the people to join in the rising, but the merchants everywhere are fearful that if the rebels are successful, it might be the beginning of a general conflagration.

The Japanese legation has received a despatch indicating that Chinese troops are among the rebels who are besieging Chengtu. No reports have reached here as to the extent of the affected area. The Yangtse section of the province has not yet broken out, although ready to participate if the movement seems successful.

It is not known whether the American and Canadian missionaries have left Chengtu or are besieged in that city. Their last telegram declared their intention of sending the women and children forward. If they left the city and made the journey in safety by the river, they should reach the Yangtse in a day or two. The best means of travel would be by junk, where the fugitives would be less conspicuous than if proceeding by carts across the country.

Missionaries Apparently Safe.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—A cablegram received at the Methodist Mission rooms yesterday in a measure dispelled the anxiety permeating the atmosphere regarding the safety of the missionaries in West China, which is now in a state of insurrection.

The cable reads: "A number of parties of missionary refugees nearing Chungking. Trust no lives are lost." Mr. Shore has asked by cable that he be informed each day as to the missionaries arriving there from Chengtu.

Drowning a Mystery.

North Bay, Sept. 13.—A man, whose name is supposed to be Boyd, residence and relatives unknown, was given employment by the De La Plante Lumber Co. Saturday at Tomoko sawmill village and camp headquarters, 27 miles north of North Bay, on the T. & N. O. Railway. Monday his body was found in the small lake near the village, drowned in eight feet of water; although the body had not sunk, being held on the surface by the clothing having become fastened in a snag. The body was brought to North Bay, being held for identification. Boyd was a middle-aged man, well built and had a grey moustache. The body was found close to the shore, but how he came to his death remains a mystery.

DEMAND FOR FREE HAND

French Cabinet Draws Up Reply to Germany.

At Three-Hour Meeting Foreign Minister De Selves Lays Draft of Reply and Approves It — Italy Plunges Into African Troubles by Preparing to Occupy State of Tripoli.

Paris, Sept. 13.—A momentous meeting of the Cabinet was held yesterday afternoon to consider France's reply to Germany's counter proposals in the Moroccan negotiations. The meeting lasted three hours. The terms and a rough draft of the document were laid before the Ministers by Foreign Minister De Selves, and were discussed and scrutinised from every aspect.

Although the Minister formally refuse to satisfy public curiosity by making any statement whatever as to what passed at the historic council, it is understood that the Cabinet accorded its fullest approval of the reply prepared by Mr. De Selves, which is no less explicit than that submitted by Germany. It sets forth in the clearest possible manner France's position with regard to the question of principle raised by Germany, and pays particular attention to the necessity of maintaining commercial equality for all and of assurance to France of an absolutely free hand politically in Morocco.

The Foreign Minister will proceed to Rambouillet to-day to submit the decision of the Cabinet to President Fallieres. He will then have drawn up the definite text of the reply, which will be despatched from Paris without delay and will be in the possession of the German Government by the week-end.

Italy Wants Tripoli.

Rome, Sept. 13.—Premier Gioletti had a long conference yesterday with the Minister of War, Gen. Spingardi, and the Minister of Marine, Admiral Cattolia, regarding the Tripoli question.

The Prime Minister, it is understood, said that if the Turkish Government was not ready to recognize Italian influence over Tripoli under some form of a protectorate, the only recourse must be the military occupation of the Turkish province.

Both the Minister of War and the Minister of Marine declared that everything was ready for an eventual expedition of troops, backed by the Italian navy. Indeed, the engineer corps already have made preparations to insure the occupation of the region, should their services be required. If the Government deems it necessary to use troops for this purpose, they will be despatched from Naples and Taranto.

The Italian press urges the Government not to allow the present occasion to Tripoli to escape, pointing out that after a settlement has been reached in the Mediterranean between France and Germany through Morocco, such a favorable opportunity never will recur. The Italian people as a whole do not display much enthusiasm over the prospects of Italy obtaining concessions in Tripoli, they recalling former Italian colonial disasters.

YOUNG FORGER WANTED TO DIE

Left Farewell Note but he Will Likely Recover

Special to the Review.

Buffalo, Sept. 13.—Charles F. Murphy, twenty-one years of age, who hails from New York, and is charged with attempting to pass a forged cheque at a hotel, tried to beat out his brains against the floor of his cell during the night. He had written a farewell note, but it is expected that he will recover.

STRATTON AND HIS STILETTO

Mr Stratton has seen fit, for political purposes, to make an attack on the Ackerman company, a company, by the way, which has made its money honestly and fairly, and has not been dragged into court in criminal prosecution. Although he does not say so, in so many words, Mr. Stratton wishes to insinuate that the Ackerman company has intimated to the employees as to how their votes should be cast—and that of course, against reciprocity. If the Ackerman company itself had been favorable to reciprocity, how happy Mr. Stratton and the organ would have been. It makes all the difference in the world—whether you happen to be "right" or not.

The Ackerman company denies most emphatically that it has sought to sway its workmen's votes, or that anyone on its behalf has approached them on the subject of reciprocity or politics. Mr. Ackerman, sr., has been away in Europe since the last of June, and of course, has nothing to do with the campaign, and no one else in the firm has made the slightest effort to discover the political sympathies of the workingmen.

Apart from this, however, Mr. Stratton one day quite a while ago went to the Ackerman company and asked permission to spend a few minutes in the factory with the men. He was given this permission freely and readily. He stayed nearly two and a half hours. One of the workingmen in the factory says that after two hours and a half of Stratton's "how are you, my good fellow." I hope you will vote for me" business, the vote in the factory stood something like 50 to 5 against him. And that was long before there was any insinuation that the Ackerman company was taking any notice of the matter at all.

The Ackerman company is not alone in this matter. Every manufacturer around town who is known to the great I-am as being opposed to reciprocity and his political policy runs the risk of getting a dagger in his ribs. The Stratton organ is a handy bludgeon for political purposes. The men of the Matthews company are almost a unit in their determination to vote against reciprocity. Last election the vote was about evenly divided—this time there are not more than four or five at the outside who will vote against their jobs. The Matthews company will be seriously affected by reciprocity. Mr Stratton should not blame the manufacturers for influencing the workingmen against reciprocity — because the workingmen don't need influencing. They are solid against it now.

And the Big Thunder knows it. He is trying to terrorize people in Peterborough by his usual methods, but he is going farther this time than usual for two reasons. He knows in the first place that his cause is desperately critical and in the second he does not hope to come back. But the real effect of these attacks on Peterborough people who refuse to make dints in the floor with their knees to the great I-am, should be to consolidate their determination to be independent. Surely the industrial workers of Peterborough should resent such Tammany Hall methods. Surely it is time that the stiletto method of waging a campaign were given a quietus.

How any man with a fair mind can vote for Strattonism is beyond comprehension. All that the "little dictator" can do or cannot do, however, cannot alter the fact that he is the advocate of an American alliance, the advocate of Taft and Champ Clark and James J. Hill, and that he is prepared to invite commercial loss and national destruction because he wants to warm a seat in parliament again—that is, providing that the Farmers Bank trial in November does not give him some other occupation.

SIX THOUSAND PEOPLE HEAR BORDEN AT HALIFAX

Opposition Leader Holds big Rally in His Riding Despite Liberal Tricks.

Halifax, Sept. 13.—Six thousand men and women last night listened to R. L. Borden, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper and others at the Arena. The meeting was the best of a successful series. Certainly a more enthusiastic reception could not have been carried.

The Liberals had a counter-demonstration with bands, but it was proportionately small. Three smokers were held in different parts of the city by the Liberals in order to attract their followers from the Arena.

When the speakers entered the Arena the assembled thousands rose to their feet and cheered as the leader and others were carried to the platform on the shoulders of young men and middle-aged men. The cheering lasted several minutes.

Ald. Bligh presided. He introduced A. B. Crosby, Mr. Borden's running mate in Halifax. Mr. Crosby's remarks were brief, but were well received.

Mr. Borden in his address said that the United States is able to produce food for four hundred millions. Canadian farmers get better prices than American farmers.

Mr. Borden appealed to the audience on the plea of patriotic sentiment against that of a few cents a bushel on beans. Reciprocity, he declared, would inevitably mean annexation.

Before Sir Charles Hibert Tupper spoke, the audience, led by ex-Ald. Hebb, sang "God Save Our Canada." The speaker made a patriotic appeal to the electors to stand by the national policy and the cause of the Empire. He was accorded a good reception.

Cheers for the King, and the speakers concluded the meeting.

Whitney Foresees Landslide.

Stratford, Sept. 13.—Over 4,000 people thronged Waterloo street rink last night and gave Premier Whitney a most memorable reception.

Arriving at 8 o'clock, the Premier was met at the station by Mayor Brown and the City Council, and, headed by the local band, was escorted to the rink where the mass meeting was held. Despite the cold, an enthusiastic crowd followed the procession through the main streets.

Sir James Whitney prophesied a great landslide in this country, and said he would also pledge his reputation that it would be a great landslide for Mr. Morphy in North Perth.

"President Taft has stated time and again," said Sir James, "that the American will have direct access to the Canadian natural product and will benefit by it. He also states that the bond uniting Canada to the Mother Country is light and almost interceptible, and it would be easy to detach Canada. He says distinctly what he wants, and gives reasons for such."

Drowning at Porcupine.

Porcupine, Sept. 13—Thunderstorms, quite frequent during the last fifteen days, are characteristic of the Porcupine weather, and yesterday nearly one inch of water fell. SOLDIERS TO STOP THE STRIKE Serious Situation Develops Among the Spanish Miners.

Bilbao, Spain, Sept. 13.—The strike situation in this city is serious and steadily growing worse. A state of siege has been proclaimed and reinforcements of 5,000 troops are on their way here. Business is at a standstill, stores are closed and the tramways and railways have stopped. Desperate encounters between strikers and troops are of constant occurrence. The soldiers have fired on the mobs several times and Monday night the civil guards wounded eight persons, two of them fatally.

Striking miners at Oviedo dynamited a railroad bridge in order to prevent the transportation of coal from a colliery where the men refused to strike. Troop have been despatched to that town.

NEW YORK EXPLORER WITH CANADIAN ASSISTANT STARTS LONG TRIP INTO WILDS OF ARCTIC

FORT RESOLUTION.

Harry V. Radford, the New York explorer, has written from Fort Resolution, Northwest Territories, six hundred miles north of Edmonton, Alberta, telling of plans for his trip into the Arctic wilds. The letter was posted July 1 and was sent on the eve of his departure for Hudson Bay across the barren grounds of Northern Canada, Fort Resolution being the last point of civilization from which he can send a message, perhaps for two years. His assistant, Mr. T. George Street, of Ottawa, left Fort Smith, on Slave River, for two years his winter quarters, June 27, and reached Fort Resolution by canoe June 30. The ice had not all left the east end of Great Slave Lake at that time, so the men waited there a few days to guard against delay by ice after starting.

ACKERMAN CO. DID NOT SEEK TO INFLUENCE ANY VOTERS

Statement From the Company—All Employees Sign a Statement to That Effect—Examiner's Statement Nailed on the Spot.

To the Editor of the Review.

In reply to an attack in the Examiner of September 12, we feel that it is both due to the public and to ourselves, to give a brief explanation of the facts relating to the insinuations that we sought to influence workingmen in our employ in political matters. In the first place we have not now, and never had any quarrel with Mr. Stratton. We have never taken an active interest in politics in any campaign, finding that our business occupied all our time, and furthermore, on account of the fact that we do not believe in business men mixing in politics unless the issue is of vital importance to their own interests. Speaking of the present campaign, as we have already stated, while we are not in favor of reciprocity personally, it does not materially affect our own line of business any further than that we feel that it will result in an increase in the cost of living to our own employes. Notwithstanding the fact that we feel this way, we have never in any manner intimated this to our employes, nor have any of them consulted us as to our opinion.

We have no apology to make for the fact that we are Conservatives. We feel that we owe no apology for the pasting up on the outer wall of our office at the main entrance of our building the notice that we as a firm are opposed to reciprocity, or any measure injuring British connection or the industrial or farming interests of Canada. We would say further concerning this notice, that it was sent to us last week with a letter stating that if we considered it advisable we could be supplied in any quantity necessary to paste throughout our work-rooms, but as we have never yet tried to influence our employes in matters of this kind, we merely put this one up. We have not brought it to the attention of any employe. Two commercial travellers commented on the matter, but until the issue of the Examiner last evening the matter had not been referred to us by any employe or local citizen. We have not found it necessary to forbid our employes discussing politics during business hours. We presume our factory is the same as all others, but we would say that we as a class have as fine a body of men working for us as there is in Peterborough, and the feeling, as far as we know, has always been most friendly between employer and employe.

The statement in the Examiner is so far from the facts, that we felt it advisable to put the following question to all voters in our employ, and we are glad to be able to say that every voter present to-day in our factory has readily and cheerfully subscribed by signature to this statement. We may say, with the exception of two, all voters were present to-day, and one of these is on his vacation and the other absent on business.

We have honestly and fairly tried to put all the facts of this controversy in this statement.

THE STATEMENT.

"We think that the statement is due our employees, the B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., to say that no member of the company, and no one on its behalf has ever spoken to us with regard to our votes in this campaign; and that we have not been approached on behalf of the company in any manner, shape or form on political matters.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments

The Public are Warned to Be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analysed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white, ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica, and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache, and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 13, 1911.

The Farm Journal of Philadelphia, with a circulation of 750,090 says: Free trade between the two countries will inevitably follow the enactment of the present measure, and that will mean, ultimately, peaceful annexation.

THE AMERICAN CAMPAIGN

It must be confessed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has captured the American vote. All the people who believe that the United States should own the North American continent are enthusiastic about the White Plume. The Liberal press contends that he made Canada a nation; while the people to the south of us, who who are resolute to keep Canada in a subordinate position, who are set upon American hegemony for the western hemisphere, love him, admire him, cheer for him, and interfere in a Canadian election on his behalf, says the Toronto News. At Cobourg the American colony which inhabits the summer hotels of that town turned out in force, welcomed him loudly, took possession of the platform and the purlieus thereof, and in general adopted him as the American leader. In Windsor the continental platform was graced with many Americans; conspicuous upon it was Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, who managed to get the Waterways Treaty amended after signature to the prejudice of Canadian rights at Sault Ste. Marie. According to the Globe, 1,500 of those who attended the meeting were Americans. The Premier was driven to another meeting in the motor-car of a wealthy Cleveland manufacturer. There is no word of American approval of or enthusiasm for R. L. Borden. His admirers and supporters are exclusively Canadians and Britishers. Enemies of the British Empire show no affection for him.

AMERICAN PRESS INTERFERENCE.

The American in Canada is not the only foreign supporter whose aid Sir Wilfrid Laurier has enlisted. He has the support of the American press, particularly of that portion which most hates the British Empire. Mr. Hearst's newspapers, after copiously explaining that reciprocity means annexation, are cheering for Laurier. Newsboys specially imported from Boston are crying in the streets of Montreal "Canadian editions" of the Boston American attacking Conservatives as corruptionists and describing Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "whirlwind tour." The Boston Transcript prints articles by Mr. E. W. Thomson insolently telling Canada that she dare not reject the boon which the United States at long last has condescended to vouchsafe to her. The New York Herald goes very close to contravention of our Election Act in its campaigning for the Chieftain who is committed to its cause of continentalism. The New York Sun, famous as a hater of Great Britain and noted as an advocate of the big corporations, sympathizes warmly with Laurier.

(formerly Windsor) Toronto, Ont.

GOVERNMENT COURTS THIS INTERFERENCE.

American newspapers of course are free to express what opinions they may choose to entertain; but it is significant that the Laurier Government deliberately encourages their advocacy of its cause and their interference in Canadian politics. For example, the Boston Transcript has been printing Mr. E. W. Thomson's threatening letters, telling Canada to beware how she gives Uncle Sam a "slap in the face." The Transcript is favored with the advertising patronage of the department of the Interior, in a lucrative form. An American weekly publication which has a considerable circulation in Eastern Ontario has a Canadian department which booms the Liberal cause; this Canadian edition is practically edited from inside the civil service at Ottawa. American correspondents at Ottawa are treated with distinguished consideration by the Government. The Laurier administration deliberately welcomes and encourages offensive foreign interference with Canadian affairs.

AMERICANS WOULD RESENT BRITISH INTERFERENCE.

What do Canadians think of this interference by Americans with a Canadian election? The United States dismissed a British Ambassador who had been meanly trapped into an expression of opinion on American politics in a private letter. An American Consul-General in Canada delivers a public address telling Americans of the good things which reciprocity will bring them. American vigilance is jealously on the watch against even a sign of British sympathy with one party or the other in its domestic politics. The people who carry independence of outside opinion to so dangerous a point when their own affairs are concerned are eagerly thrusting their fingers into Canada's business. They swarm on Canadian political platforms, they cheer for Liberal candidates, they carry on Canadian press campaigns. If the News were to print articles advocating the election of a candidate in Buffalo, the American city would flame with anger; Buffalo newspapers are very busy on behalf of Liberal candidates. The Hearst papers would yell to high heaven, if a prominent British statesman idly avowed sympathy with an American party; they assume to give Canadians advice.

IMPERTINENCE THAT SHOULD BE RESENTED.

The American intrusion should be resented by Canadians with indignation and contempt. Americans should learn to concede to others the liberty of transacting. It must be made plain to them that their officious interference is an exemplification of arrogance which will not be tolerated. The Liberal party should be made to feel that the regard of anti-British American abects is a poor passport for Canadian confidence. The newly-discovered pastime of American interference should receive a rude check. The Liberal watchword is, Vote for Reciprocity and American Interference. The Conservative motto is Canada for Canadians, and Canadians good enough for Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Ackerman Company yesterday. Who to day, and who to-morrow?

The Ackerman company has earned its money honestly, and respectably, at any rate.

Bare your necks, ye manufacturers for the sin of holding opinions of your own. If you don't do what the Tammany Hall chief wants, prepare to meet thy doom. Off to the chopping block, ye knaves who disobey the boss.

We have now asked seven times of Mr Stratton who carried away the Farmers' Bank certificate from Finance Minister Fielding's office in Ottawa. His silence is ominous. Taken in connection with the statement that he was a particular friend of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt's, made by W. R. Travers, his silence might be wrongly construed. Why doesn't he say something?

R. H. Leary may change his mind at the earnest solicitation of one J.R. Stratton about going back west before election day. But he said, and he cannot truthfully deny it, that he was not going to be here on election day to vote for Stratton and reciprocity, or to work for them—or words to that effect. The Stratton clan may take what comfort out of that they can. A man can't recall his words, but he may change his mind.

How long can the reign of terror continue without the people rising en masse in protest?

Girl Is Exonerated.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Judge Monck yesterday morning acquitted the Italian girl who had been charged with theft by her erstwhile fiance. The man claimed to have sent the girl money on the understanding that they were to wed when she came to Canada, and that she refused to carry out the contract or refund the money. In defence the girl testified that the man had said he would not marry her unless forced to do so, and warned her that she would be sorry if he did marry her. The judge dismissed the theft charge, but impounded the girl's bail money of $200, which was the sum alleged to have been stolen by her. A civil action will be brought to determine the ownership of the money.

Badly Battered Up.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—An unknown man was found in Fortification lane at noon yesterday in a terribly mutilated condition, and so weak he could not tell his name to the police officer who found him. At first the patrol was sent for, as it was thought the man had been drinking, but his condition was so serious that the ambulance of the Notre Dame Hospital was finally summoned, where his wounds received attention. His head and face were terribly battered, evidently by blows from someone's fists. The police are now investigating the affair.

Murderer's Suicide.

Windsor, Sept. 13.—Crawling from his hiding place in a swamp early yesterday morning, George Reebe, who killed his wife with an axe on Sunday afternoon, committed suicide on the doorstep of his home by cutting his throat with a sharp knife. He was found dying by inmates of the house, and expired before medical assistance arrived.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Least Fuel. The Most Satisfaction

Exchange Your Baking Worries for a "Happy Thought"

It isn't good policy and it's mighty poor economy to struggle along with an unsatisfactory range, working yourself to death, and wasting good food and high-priced fuel, when you can obtain a and possess a range that will always give you complete satisfaction. Its efficiency is based on a stove experience of over half a century. Its improvements are those that have been thoroughly tested and found to be of real value to a range.

HAPPY THOUGHT

It is made of material that will give lasting-service, the parts subject to the greatest strain and wear are especially reinforced and it has a reputation to live up to that obliges the makers to see that every range turned out of their factory is perfect.

It is always good policy to be thoroughly informed about any article before buying.

We will be pleased to explain the Happy Thought Range to you and then when you have examined the other stoves in the market—we will be ready to do business with you.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

And then and there, Harry George received a lesson in what it meant in the north country to doubt Clare Corran of Corran-cache, her beauty, her wit, her knowledge of all matters in heaven or on earth, her right to reign as queen of hearts from St. Francis to St. Agathe.

Governor Harriss had been nursing his hat on his knees. He replaced it on his head. Thus, he crowned himself with his dignity, assumed his rightful position as official spokesman of the territory in which he ruled.

"In that dude-rid, henpecked, milk-and-water locality that you've come from," he snarled, "maybe it ain't thought proper to love a father, all through his life and obey him, and then love and obey him after he's dead and leaves you on your honor. Mebbe them wobble-necked women-geese down there think they're mournin' when they load a lot of crape on the outside and sing 'Hail Columby' inside while the minister's prayin'. 'Tain't what is outside that mourns — it's what is inside. And Clare Corran mourns so for her father that she'd cut off her lily right hand rather than fall down on what he asked her to do."

He had raised his voice, till its shrillness cut through the gabble of the men in the car. The name of the girl caught their attention. By the way they began to listen, it was plain that it was a magic name to them.

"She is the girl of her father!" squalled Governor Harriss, his voice breaking in his fresh passion. "The pal of her father — with grit enough to be his son, but with the love for him that only girls can feel. That's Clare Corran!"

"And who says she isn't?" roared a man halfway down the car. He came up the aisle, elbowing right and left other men who were rising from their seats. "Who says she ain't the queen doe of the Great Toban? He's got me and a thousand like me to fight!"

Governor Harriss was on his feet now. He leaned over George, tapping emphasis upon the shoulder of that disconcerted young man.

"And if she rides, dressed in her best, but with sorrer in her heart, rides ahead to be the first at the bed where Cornelius Corran will sleep his last sleep — rides ahead because with his dying breath he asked her to, and put it into his will — ain't she as good, and as sweet, and as true, as any of your wedlin' city ducks that have to be toted on a cushion in a back? If she ain't, say so. If she is, take word of it back to your dudes." It was plain that Mr. Harriss enjoyed being in the spotlight, and that he welcomed this opporunity.

The man who had made the first rush was at their seat, now. Others massed at his back, and Big Bill was climbing over seats in order to be where duty called at the outbreak of any hostilities. And George, with that gaunt finger tapping his shoulder, became the centre of all that distrubance so suddenly that he stared from face to face, bewildered.

"I'm an old man," quavered Governor Harriss. "If I was as full of ginger as I was once, I'd put a rosette over your eye."

"If there's decoratin' needs to be done here, you needn't worry about artists volunteerin'," said the first recruit. "Give me the pattern. What did this son of a beeswax say about Clare Corran?"

Big Bill made the last stage of his journey by jumping two woodsmen down into a seat and climbing across them on his hands and knees.

"I'm in this," he panted. "You'll do your fightin' out where the Great Trust Co. don't have to pay for car damages."

"This ain't fight, boss, it's a lynchin'," yelled the woodsman. "The dude has passed a skunk word about Clare Corran."

"That's different," said Kyle. "Don't worry about the seats if that's so."

Now, they hemmed George back, front, and sides. Harriss's finger still played tattoo on one shoulder. The clutch of the leader of the mob was on the other. It was all so unreasonable, so unjust, so preposterous, this druken onslaught, that his own anger now blazed as hotly as theirs. He surged to his feet, breasting them from him.

"Hold on, right here," he shouted. "What do you mean by pitching into a man in this way? I have not insulted any young lady. I don't know this one you are talking about." He clutched Governor Harriss, lifted him out of the seat, and thrust him among the men in the car aisle.

It was a magnificent display of muscle and quickness, and it held back the corwd better than words would have done, whether the words had been threat or appeal. George backed to the window, and stood at bay.

"I'm a stranger in this section. I don't know your people. If I've said anything that's been misunderstood, I'm sorry. If there's any one wants to fight me, after that, he's simply looking for fight without excuse for it — and there's no man-fashion about that business, forty to one."

"That's fair talk, son," declared Kyle, and he straddled a seat back and stood down beside George. "Now, Harriss, what have you got to say?"

Governor Harriss was between the hostile lines, a precarious place for a non-combattant. If he gave the signal for combat, it meant damage to himself and his precious plug hat. He temporized.

"I might have been mistook," he admitted. "Come to think of it, it don't stand to reason that a man meant to insult Clare Corran."

"If he's right, let him prove it," said the man who had led the charge. "Take off your hat and say you love her — our Queen Clare, of the Great Toban."

With hot wrath and revolt in his cheeks, the young man was about to refuse, but Big Bill growled in his ear: "Do it. It won't hurt you, and I don't want this car mussed up."

It seemed like treachery to another — but they couldn't understand. And his disgust urged him to get rid of them. A hush fell on them, broken only by the clatter of the train. He lifted his hat. His smile was ironical, but they took only of his words:

"I love your Queen Clare, whoever she may be."

Woodsmen are like children. As ingenuous, as fickle, as precipitate in forgiveness. They cheered him with laughter. They had only dimly understood what the quarrel was all about. Even the angry knight who had first thrown down the gauntlet grinned.

"Get back into your seats," commanded Kyle. "I'll set with you," he informed the young man. "I never knew old Harriss to get on that plug hat but trouble chased after him, like a storm after a sundog. You go away from here, governor."

RECIPROCITY AND LABOR

The Agreement Was Entered Into Without Considering the Labor Interests

"The avowed object of the Government in making the trade agreement with the United States was to provide an additional market for Canadian farmers and to raise the prices of Canadian farm products," says the Toronto News. "If the result of the agreement, in case it goes into effect, is not to increase the prices of cheese, butter, eggs, meats, flour and other household necessities the farmer will be fooled and every substantial argument advanced by the Government in support of the compact will be disproved. Whatever, therefore, may be the practical effect of reciprocity the design of the Government to increase the cost of living is established. The agreement was entered into wholly without consideration for workmen, for the great army of clerks in mercantile houses, for teachers and clergymen, for the multitude who live on fixed wages and fixed salaries and upon all of whom at best the burden of existence presses sorely and heavily. Here and there and now and again a Liberal newspaper or a Liberal speaker in the industrial centres denies that the agreement will raise prices, but at least the denial impugns the good faith of the Administration and discredits every argument addressed to the farming population in whose interest Ministers profess to have acted in the negotiation with Washington. But the concern of labor in this contest is by no means confined to the prices of food products. The wages of labor depend upon the supply just as the prices of commodities depend upon the supply. Admittedly if American food products flood the Canadian market prices will fall. Admittedly if the demand for labor decreases wages will fall. In the seventies Canada was flooded with American products and prices were low. But labor was unemployed. Factories were closed or run on half time. Soup kitchens were opened in Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere. A pall of depression rested over the whole country. Wages fell as prices fell, and instead of competition amongst employers for workmen there was competition amongst workmen for leave to labor."

St. Louis Sees the Stars and Stripes Over the Entire Continent

Annexation to the United States is an eventuality of Canada's near or remote future. Manifest destiny has said it. Had Canada in 1776 been peopled by Englishmen she would have joined the thirteen colonies in the revolt against England, and have been included with us in the peace treaty of 1782. But Canada had been ceded by France to England only about a dozen years before the beginning of our revolution, and her French population cared less for political liberty than it did for the special privileges which George III. allowed to its Church, which would have been denied in any scheme which the thirteen colonies would set up. Therefore Canada clung to England. Had our authorities at Washington granted the recognition to Astor on the Pacific coast during the war of 1812 which he asked, and which he had a right to expect, or had they extended to him the protection immediately afterward which he sought, we could have obtained the whole of the present British Columbia peacefully, and probably the rest of Canada would, long before this time, have asked for annexation. In either case Canada's present population of 7,500,000 would probably have been at least 20,000,000 by this time, and Montreal and Toronto would be in the class with Boston and St. Louis. But there is still a prospect that the mistakes of the olden days will be corrected amicably, and that the Stars and Stripes will float all over the Continent of North America, with Hudson Bay as the nation's centre.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HIDING THE FACTS

Information Which the Reciprocity Party is Keeping Back

The pro-reciprocity press is deliberately hiding from its readers the facts (1) that the United States is in the throes of a serious commercial and industrial depression; (2) that all across the Republic from coast to coast hundreds of factories are closed or on half time; (3) that tens of thousands of Americans are out of employment; (4) that the great American railway systems are retrenching and dismissing workmen; (5) that the Republic which has already endured several months of hard times appears to be on the verge of one of its periodical panics; (6) that in order to keep going its people will be willing to sell everything they can get hands on, and (7) that under reciprocity Canada would be made a convenient dumping ground for American food stuffs and other products.—Toronto News.

Taft Says Canada Will Be a Good Market for Americans

President Taft, addressing a National Grange delegation, said: "I believe it is contrary to nature, it is flying in the face of Providence, to put an artificial wall like that between this country and Canada, and not get the benefit that will inure to peoples of the same traditions, the same language and practically with the same character of labor. If we take down that wall, we will benefit by it; for we shall sell more agricultural products to Canada than she will sell to us. We do now, and we shall sell her even more after the treaty goes into effect."

Honesty is the best policy, but aside from that the most of it is the result of being closely watched.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

Trustee Fairbairn Promotes Effort to Open "Little Mother" Schools

Enthused over the idea of the "Little Mother" schools which have been established in Chicago for the training of girls from 8 to 14 years of age in the proper care of babies from 6 to 8 months old, with the object of relieving overworked mothers, Trustee Fairbairn has consulted with the Toronto Playground Association to see if similar schools cannot be opened in Toronto in connection with the playgrounds. Boys are admitted to the training under the nursery appellation of "Little Brother Mothers." In Chicago these schools are conducted under the supervision of the health department. The classes are opened in each place for a period of three weeks, and then later plans are made to conduct the class every Saturday morning during the year. Each student is required to take a baby to the class, which is in charge of a nurse and a kintergarten teacher, under the Chicago system.

A TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN

Dominion Alliance Inaugurates Educational Movement in Quebec

That the temperance convention at Knowlton represented the first shots in a new educational campaign which the Dominion Alliance has inaugurated, and in which they intend to systematically teach the children and adults of Quebec scientific truth regarding alcohol and the human body, is the declaration of Mr. J. H. Roberts, secretary of the Dominion Alliance. Special lecturers will be employed, and the province will be sown knee deep with temperance literature. While efforts will not be relaxed in other departments of work, such as law enforcement, the emphasis in future is to be placed on educational work.

IF YOU ARE SICK YOU CONSULT A SPECIALIST

WHY?

Because he has made a special study of the disease you are suffering from, and from the knowledge gained by years of experience knows just what treatment you require.

If you are going into a law-suit, you do the same—consult the best lawyer you can get, and find it cheap in the end.

Now, when you are considering taking Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, do you not think it would pay you to consult one who has had many years experience in that profession, and whose knowledge would be of use to you in enabling you to get the best value for your premiums, with the most liberal policies and absolute guarantees?

If you want what is best in Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, you can get it by calling at, or phoning to

That's what a customer asked us recently about a patent medicine we had sold for years, and we were forced to admit that in reality we knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising.

Some of the claims made were so extravagant that, of course, we could not take them seriously. This is the reason why we strongly recommend our own preparations.

CLOTHES CAUGHT FIRE AND LADY WAS FATALLY BURNED

Mr and Mrs. J. John, Rubidge street, city, received through the Montreal Daily Star of Monday, Sept. 11, the sad news of the death of Mrs. W. J. Holliday in the Royal Victoria hospital, after having been terribly burned in her own kitchen.

The late Mrs Holliday, in company with her husband and infant child, spent a week visiting friends in Peterborough, only returning home about three weeks ago. During their stay here they made a host of friends, who will exceedingly regret to hear of her sad death

USING GAS STOVE.

On Saturday last Mrs. Holliday, with her baby, only a year and a half old was alone in her house and was heating a mixture of wax and turpentine on the gas stove. The vessel overflowed and caught fire. In trying to right it, Mrs. Holliday's clothing was set on fire.

A neighbor heard her screams of agony and ran over and met her at the front door enveloped in flames. Another neighbor ran up and smothered the fire with a blanket and sent for the ambulance. While the injured lady was lying on the doorstep awaiting the arrival of the ambulance, her chief thought was of her baby, and when a neighbor carried out the child a happy smile lit up her face. A passing motorist went for her husband at the Fairmount Y.M.C.A., where he is secretary. She was twenty-seven years of age, and had been married three years. Besides her husband and baby, and parents, three brothers and three sisters survive her.

Rev. J. G. Potter, formerly pastor of St. Andrew's church, city, now of the MacVicar church, Montreal, to which Mrs. Holliday belonged, told of the sad accident at his service Sunday morning, and at the session meeting a resolution of sympathy for the family was passed.

Mrs. J. John, Rubidge street, attended the funeral, which took place yesterday from the deceased's former home, at Cushing, Que.

Y.M.C.A. BOARD OF DIRECTORS HEAR ENCOURAGING REPORTS

Splendid Outlook for the Coming Fall and Winter Season.

The Board of Directors of the local Y.M.C.A. held a very successful meeting last evening in the Board room of the Association building. Mr. J. J. Turner, the president, was in the chair and there was a sufficient number of the directors present to form a quorum.

The reports from the several departments indicated that a good program of work had been carried on during the summer.

The building has just been thoroughly overhauled and put into first-class shape for the coming season. Probably not for ten years has the building presented a more attractive appearance as it does just at present.

The financial report, presented by the treasurer, Mr. Howden, revealed the fact that the receipts up to the end of August are away in advance of last year at this time, though a good deal of hard work on the part of the directors and a greater degree of support from the friends of the Association will be necessary if the financial statement at the close of the year is to show the Association free of debt.

S. L. SPICER, M.D.,
Boys' Secretary.

Mr. J. H. Connal reported on behalf of the Physical department that things are in splendid shape for the opening of the gymnasium in a few days. The Association is particularly fortunate in being able to retain the services of Mr. Thompson as director of physical activities this year. Good physical directors are not easily found and there are none better than Mr. Thompson.

A large number of applicants were received into membership, and the membership secretary, Mr. Hall, reported that prospects are bright for a large addition at the next board meeting.

The boys' committee was delighted to report that the Association had been successful in securing the services of Mr. S. L. Spicer as the new boys' secretary. Mr. Spicer has just graduated from the Western Medical College at London, Ont., and comes with the highest recommendations. Mr. Downey suggested that the parents of the boys ought to be notified that school boys who are members of the boys' department are not allowed in the Association on any night in the week except Friday and Saturday nights. This rule will be strictly observed by the officers this year, and parents will do well to investigate if the Y.M.C.A. is put up as an excuse for a school boy to get out at nights. This applies equally to the members of the boys' department who are in attendance at the Collegiate Institute.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford presented to the board a scheme by which the Brotherhoods and men's Bible classes of the city could have the use of the gymnasium on one night in the week at a special rate. The scheme was thoroughly discussed and the directors were in hearty favor, provided it is found to be practical. A committee was appointed to investigate and take action in the matter.

The board heard with deep regret of the loss sustained by Mr. Holliday, the general secretary at Westmount, Montreal, in the fatal burning of his wife.

The program of religious work was not presented in view of the absence of the chairman of the Religious Work committee.

HOW THE CONSUMER LOSES

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—Will you let me ask the intelligent farmer a few questions?

1. Doesn't it seem ridiculous that an agreement should be made between the United States and Canada by which a train load of agricultural products from Canada going to the United States will pass a train of United States products going into Canada? Wouldn't it be far better for the American farmer to have his own market and the Canadian farmer his own market, and thus save freightage to the consumer, who would be able to get his goods just so much cheaper?

2. If the advantage is to the Canadian exporter of agricultural products to the United States because the United States needs our products, how can it be of advantage to the United States to ship the same sort of products (that they need) out of their own country to Canada? Wouldn't such procedure be more like the acts of lunatics than of a statesman and business man?

3. The consumers in both countries will have to pay freightage in addition to what they pay now, which will be a serious addition to their burdens.

4. If reciprocity meant that one country would send agricultural products in exchange for another sort of products from the other country we could understand such reciprocity, but reciprocity in the same sort of products is foolishness, and expensive foolishness as well.

Yours truly,
COMMON SENSE.

GRAND WEATHER PROMISED FOR THE OPENING DAY

Big Fair Gates Will be Thrown Open to the Public For Three Days.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition opens to-morrow, when the grounds and buildings will be open for receiving exhibits. In the evening there will be a grand illumination. The 57th Regimental band in full strength will give a band concert before the grand stand along with a number vaudeville performance. A magnificent display of fire works, will wind up the day. An expert has been here for several days setting up.

On Friday and Saturday there will be some splendid horse racing along with a number of other high-class attractions. On Friday afternoon a popular event in the dog race will take place. The boys and their dogs always come in for a fair share of attention from the exhibition visitors and judging by the number who intend taking part in this event there will be barrels of fun.

The directors have spared neither work nor expense to give the people their money's worth.

The vaudeville itself is worth the price of admission. All the performers are high class artists, and were procured at considerable expense.

All that is necessary to make this the most successful exhibition in the history of Peterborough, is fine weather, and the probabilities say, warmer weather for to-morrow.

MILLINERY OPENINGS

Fall Styles Will be Shown in the Stores To-morrow

The fashionable women of Peterboro will have an opportunity of seeing the very latest creations in hats and fall millinery, to-morrow, when the annual autumn millinery openings commence. Some of the styles that will be in vogue this season are stated to be particularly pleasing and handsome. All the millinery places of business are busy preparing their windows and stocking them with the very latest, and doubtless there will be the customary eagerness to see what the reigning styles will be. The hats will be all small this season, and tending to shade the face.

MR. J. R. STRATTON HAS RESIGNED

Is Off the Directorate of the Home Life

The resignation of four directors of the Home Life Association of Canada and the filling of their places by four directors of the Union Life Assurance Co. would seem to indicate, according to the Monetary Times, the transfer of the control of the former company to the latter.

Those who resigned from the directorate of the Home Life at a recent meeting were: Messrs. J.R. Stratton, president, D.W. Karn, Rolph and Burns. Their places were filled by Messrs. H. Pollman Evans, who will be president of the company; Y.H. Currie, H. Symons, K.C., and Dr. G.E. Millichamp, all of whom are also directors of the Union Life Assurance Co.

PRICE OF CANNED SALMON JUMPS

Housewife Finds a Change in Several Commodities

Several changes have taken place lately in the grocery line, in the way of increased prices for goods. Salmon has soared considerably and henceforth, or at least for some time, the householder will pay 20 cents a can for salmon that was formerly listed at 15 cents, and for salmon that was formerly 20 cents, the price now, is 25 cents. The reason assigned is the scarcity of the salmon catch in British Columbia, this year, and also a heavy demand for canned salmon from the country.

Rice has also jumped in price, caused, so a local grocery traveller stated, by the drought in India.

As has been previously noted sugar is away up now. The beet crop in Europe and in Cuba from which places the bulk of sugar is imported, was very poor this year and away below yields of other years, hence the increased price.

POOR RACING AT THE COAST

Mutuel Machines at Work, But Public Has to Take Word of Manipulators

When the Mutuels were introduced we were told that the day of the tout, the bookmaker, the doper, the briber, and all the other odoriferous scum which has made racing a reproach on this continent, would be obliterated, says The Vancouver Sunset. The ring detective the other day ejected one of that fraternity from the track. An official director in the association and owner of a large number of horses which win when he wants them to win, had the tout admitted to the track the next day, and he was given a job as official messenger to take bets in the grandstand.

One of the arguments in favor of the mutuels was that the public not only had the odds, but could see at a glance what the odds were when the betting closed. This is a delusion. The moment a race starts a button is pushed and the machines are locked so that no more bets can be recorded. Also, every machine is immediately turned back to zero. Three machines had tried to take down the number of bets recorded on each horse, but they were not quick enough. The public has to take the word of the calculator.

On eastern tracks the association deducts five per cent. At Minoru the association takes ten per cent. At Minoru the highest purse offered during the season was $1,000. On one day the following magnificent prizes were competed for: One purse, $250, value to the winner, $175; three selling purses for $250, value to the winner, $175; one $200 selling purse, and a $300 purse, the value of which to the winner was $120.

Such programmes may in some mysterious way encourage the breeding of thoroughbreds in British Columbia, but we are inclined to think a man will come out better if he crosses with standard bred stallions and raises combination horses for the market, than he will by bucking the tiger at the Minoru race track.

As an encouragement or incentive to breeding the racing institution at Minoru is a hollow mockery; as a sport it is a farce, and as for an even break as a gamble the public has no more chance than an unfeathered chicken roosting on a cedar rail in the nether regions.

Any young fellow who thinks he would like to get a little easy money betting on the races should go over to the barrier and see two or three starts. If that will not cure him of race track gambling some tout ought to throw him down and take his money away from him.

RUGBY PLAYERS SLOW IN COMING

Feeble Encouragement to Those Behind the Fall Game

There does not seem to be many rugby enthusiasts in Peterborough, at least that was the general impression gathered by the number at the special rugby meeting called in the West End Club parlors last night.

At the practice on Saturday afternoon next at Riverside Park it will be decided whether a team is to be entered in the O.R.F.U. series or not. If a sufficient number of players turn out to practice, the West End Club will take charge of the team and try and make a success of it. Therefore it is up to everyone who intends to play or who wishes to see a Peterborough team on the gridiron this fall, to get out in uniform and help along.

Manager Oldham feels confident that there is sufficient material in the city to warrant entering the junior series at least, and he wishes to see the rugbyists of the city in action on Saturday.

Four or five of last season's P.C.I. team will no doubt be able to make good and there are some dark horses to be uncovered.

A TALK ON SPORT

A Western Paper Draws Some Conclusions from the Western Field

Sport is a fine thing when properly controlled, but it is the worst thing possible for a community if it is misdirected or unduly emphasized. We are not sure that the condition of affairs in Western Canada is altogether healthy. Two Western cities are at daggers drawn—or parasols drawn—because they chance to have rival lacrosse teams. The effect of the competition has been to lower the moral tone of the communities. One would not say that the baseball competition in Western Canada has developed higher ideals or afforded real relaxation for players or spectators. Sport is a peculiar thing in this way, that it may confer a lasting benefit on those who participate in it, or it may do lasting harm. Those who in the name of sport run into excess of all kinds—into gambling, drinking, and the like—are more to be dreaded than patients who have escaped quarantine. The man to be avoided above all, is the loud-mouthed braggadocio who patronizes the ball teams but who knows neither honor nor decency. The man most to be desired is he who with a sense of fairness and a love for all that is clean and modest, will undertake to direct the sport of his community.—Western Home Monthly.

ANCIENT FOOTBALL

The Game Had its Enemies in the Sixteenth Century

Football had its enemies among the early Puritans. In 1583, one Philip Stubbs, produced a work, entitled, "The Anatomie of Abuses," wherein there is a very fierce attack on football. The game was played with vigor in the 16th century. "Whosoever scapeth away the best goeth not scot free," writes the author, "but is either sore, wounded, craised and bruised so as he dyeth of it or else he scapeth very hardlie, and no meruaile for they have the sleights to meet one betwixt two, to dashe him against the harte with the elbowes, to hit him under the short ribbes with their griped fists and with their knees to catch him upon the hippes and to pick him on the neck, with a hundred such murthering devices; and hereof groweth envie, malice, rancour, choler, hatred, displeasure, enmitie and what not else; and sometimes brawling, contention, quarrel-picking, murther, homicide and great effusion of blood as experience teacheth."

CANADA'S WEST; ITS PROGRESS SINCE FRASER

By W. D. McBride.

THE HIGHWAYS OF COMMERCE

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Honourable Joseph Howe of Nova Scotia away back in the early fifties had a vision of the West and British Columbia united to the Eastern provinces by a railway through the Rockies. It was then the shadow of an unsubstantial dream, and before it could be realized even as a project the work of Confederation had to be brought about. Four years after this event ,however, the three and a half million people who then composed Canada were under covenant to build this railway within a period of ten years, as part of the pact by which Confederation was extended to the Pacific Ocean. Yet we are told at times the people of Canada are slow and unprogressive. The undertaking was simply colossal, sublime in its affronting of destiny. These fathers of ours who united Canada dreamed nobly and made their dreams come true; and what Helots we shall be if we fail to complete the structure they so grandly planned! Has ever a people so few in numbers undertaken such vast projects as Canada. Canada had for many years taken a keen interest in the Red River country, and desired to add it to her territories. Captain Palliser had been sent out in 1857 by the Imperial Government to explore the country and ascertain if there was an available pass through the Rockies within British territory. He reported unfavourably on the West as a whole ;and about the pass gave this counsel of despair "the unfortunate choice of an astronomical boundary line has completely isolated the central American possessions of Great Britain from Canada in the East and also almost debarred them from any eligible access from the Pacific coast on the West." In the face of such advice less than four million Canadians pledged their national faith in 1871, that a railway should be built from ocean to ocean by 1881. Unhappy political events were responsible for our being five years late in performing what we had undertaken. The railway must pass north of Lake Superior, and it is a fact that seems unrealizable today that prior to 1871 no white man had ever been known to traverse the country between the Upper Ottawa river and Lake Superior. The water route up the lakes or what will some day be the Georgian Bay Canal had been followed. We knew little of the West, and the Rocky Mountains were virtually unexplored. This pledge meant that Canada must do in two years the preparation work that had taken the United States fifty years. With the pressure of millions of people behind pushing its settled areas out into the plains and up to the Rocky Mountains, it was not till the year 1853 that Congress ordered a topographical survey "to ascertain the most practicable and economical route for a railroad from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean." In the end public spirited men in California took up the task that was too great for the Government of the United States, and Congress granted liberal subsidies to the undertaking. Even at that the Union Pacific was not completed until somewhere about 1872. There was honest doubt as to its feasibility in the United States, and if this was so with such a numerous, prosperous and enterprising people as the Americans is it to be wondered that there were faint hearts in regard to such a project among our few and comparatively poor people? It was wise, says Dr. Grant, because it was necessary, and it was necessary because the British provinces had united for the one purpose of working out their own destiny as an integral part of the greatest empire in the world. Her destiny thrust mighty tasks upon Canada, and that her path was not an easy one was fortunate no doubt if it has had its effect in hardening and strengthening the national character. The task was taken up with energy, and in April 1872 reports of the first survey from end to end were laid on the table of the House of Commons. In 1874 came the Pacific scandal and as a result an effort to build the road as a government work, but the progress was slow. On the 10th day of December 1880 Sir Charles Tupper introduced the contract with the C. P. R. Company in the House, and on the 7th day of November 1885 Lord Strathcona drove the last spike of the road at Craigellachie in British Columbia. This was five years in advance of the contract time, and the opening of the railway meant the inevitable growth and development of the West. Eastern Canada had grown in its early stages because it had access to the sea by a river penetrating into the heart of the continent, and Lord Selkirk's colony in Red River failed almost solely for the reason that it was denied this access to the sea's highway to markets. Railways were a secondary stage in the East, but with the plains of the West a necessary preliminary step to any considerable development of their riches. The cost was great. The undertaking was one to stagger even a richer country, but imperative for commercial and larger national reasons. The people of Canada rose nobly to the occasion. The bitterness of the political struggles of that time is now a matter of history and it is apparent now that the people of Canada, who were not then overprosperous, approved of the undertaking as carried out from patriotic, national consideration almost solely. I talked not long since in a Western city, with an assessment value of over $25,000,000, with an old gentleman from Kingston who described to me the zeal with which he and many others opposed the contract ,not the project. He wrote to the Globe giving most startling statistics of what a subsidy of $25,000,000 meant. He piled it up, laid it out flat, and I believe circled the equator with it in bills. No doubt such arguments appealed strongly to many voters, who concluded that even at the price there were national reasons of unbreakable force why the work must go on. Nations who have come to greatness have had to pour out money and blood like water in defence of their aspirations and it is a hopeful sign for our future that our people have not flinched so far at any cost deemed necessary to carry out national undertakings. Fortunately we have not been called upon to endure the scourge of war but it may be hoped that the same spirit that faced such tasks as we have had to perform would be equal even to this supreme sacrifice for national existence. Less than twenty five years after his opposition to the C. P. R. contract Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Premier of Canada submitted to Parliament as justified on almost identical grounds the contract for building the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is announced that it will be completed from Moncton to the Rocky Mountains by 1912 and to the Pacific by 1914. The Canadian Northern will soon have a third transcontinental railway completed. Every season these railways add about a thousand miles of branch lines to their trackage in the West, and settlers are crying out for railway accommodation. Hon. Walter Scott, the Premier of Saskatchewan, in discussing the question in the Legislature, said the time was near at hand when this province would produce six hundred million bushels of wheat alone; so that it is evident the transportation problem of the West is one of some magnitude. Lord Grey conveyed to the imagination of the world some idea of The Wests' resources as a wheat field when he pointed out in public speeches that in 1909 with less than a tenth of its area under crop Saskatchewan alone produced more than one tenth of the largest wheat crop on record in all the United States. Alberta has an area equal to that of Saskatchewan and part of it is being prepared by irrigation for diversified agriculture, while Manitoba though smaller will always be in the reckoning of the productivity of the West. The future of this West which is so rapidly being brought under culture, is beyond cavil one of such greatness as to be difficult of realization. Access to the sea coast on Hudson's Bay can no longer be denied the West, and evidently the government realizes this by undertaking to build a railroad to a port on this sea. Hudson's Bay juts down into Canada in such a manner as almost to shut off the East from the West, and many have honestly feared that ultimately there would be commercial and social separation. Is it not more likely that it simply supplies a closer and more intimate connection, an alternate route to that supplied by the Great Lakes? The great stretch of country intervening between East and West, now unpeopled virtually, cannot remain so always. In its water powers it possesses potential manufacturing wealth, while every year fresh mineral treasure is being uncovered, and even the rocky wastes may be made to produce valuable timber for all time if this great work is not left until too late. And forest wealth in this case means resources in future happiness for millions who may escape to these lacustrine wilds for a season. The fur traders in Canada blazed the high ways of commerce, and two that they marked out that have not been improved as they should and must be are what is known as the Georgion Bay Canal and the Hudson's Bay route. People who consider it quite natural that happy settlements and towns should exist on the Saguenay and Lake St John shy at the idea of cities on Hudson's Bay, and are appalled at the reported dangers of Davis Straits. Are the difficulties then unsurmountable? This is not the spirit that has made Britain great. As it is set forth naked and unashamed by Rudyard Kipling it is coming to be approved by the spirit of the New West which is beginning to realize its tasks and responsibilities:—

> "We must feed our sea for a thousand years,
> For that is our doom and pride,
> As it was when they sailed with the Golden Hind,
> Or the wreck that struck last tide—
> Or the wreck that lies on the spouting reef
> Where the ghastly blue lights flare
> If blood be the price of admiralty
> Lord God, we ha' bought it fair."

This is part of the price Britain has freely paid for supremacy on the seas, and the West is beginning to realize that as a British people we have a share in this mighty task. If there are difficulties in opening up our own inland sea they must be overcome, and the price must be paid for giving such vast opportunities for happiness to mankind as the West and the Newer West afford. No doubt the full responsibilities we must assume are not fully realised, but this realization is coming surely.

THE HIGHWAYS OF COMMERCE

THE BUILDING OF A NEW RAILROAD

Not To Be Disturbed

There was a fire discovered in a house in New York the other day, and a lady's maid telephoned for the brigade. The fireman at the end of the wire nearly burst a blood vessel when he heard, "There is a fire at our house, and please send us just one engine, as mistress has friends dining with her and doesn't wish them disturbed."

Moon Beams

Araminta: "What is it, do you suppose, that keeps the moon in place and prevents it from falling?"

Charley: "I think it must be the beams."

"Work - nothing but work from mornin' till night."

"Ow long 'ave you been at it?"

"I begin to-morrow."

Mr. Brown and his family were standing in front of the lion's cage. "John," said Mrs. Brown, "if those animals were to escape, who would you save first me or the children?"

"Me," answered John, without hesitation.

There is a clear distinction between eating and dining.

THE EDUCATION OF THE PEOPLE

By Dr. Andrew Macphail

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Forty years ago in the country districts of Canada — and all Canada was country then — there was no education of the people, that is, of the kind which is now considered indispensable. Few children were taught to assign names to the weeds of the field, — and somehow weeds seem to have become more common as their names are better known. In those days a weed was a weed and a flower a flower. The one was ruthlessly rooted out and cast into the fire or upon the public highway to be trodden under foot. The flower was cherished and the sum of beauty was as great then as it is now.

In this spectacle of weeds upon the highway there was an element of moral training which is missed in a collection of plants made up impartially of weeds and flowers gummed on sheets and marked with dainty labels. If this ancient child lacked the profound knowledge of systemic botany which the modern child enjoys he was able to distinguish the "triticum" from the "triticum repens". What is more important he acquired a passion for eradicating the thorn and the thistle and cherishing the herb of the field by which men shall live. In the sweat of his face he learned that there is really a distinction between good and evil, and by his hatred of the weed he learned to hate the evil which is in the world. His mind was enlarged his sympathy deepened and his judgment made sharp by his knowledge that a flower might degenerate into a weed and a weed be transformed into a flower. If he did not learn much about botany he acquired a philosophy of life.

Nor did the child of the villager fare much better. He received no laborious instruction in the art of making a towel rack. The family sitting room was adorned by no rolling pin suspended by a knot of blue ribbon. The best he knew of carpentry was acquired in the woodshed where he employed a precious leisure in constructing a stout sled which would bear him swiftly down the frozen hillside. If this young craftsman had an eye for beauty he could gratify his feeling for design at the slight cost of a winsome behaviour towards the village carpenter or blacksmith. That was the price which he paid for the secret of their crafts and so he learned good manners. He became a serious man at an age when a modern scholar is a mere play-boy unskilled in the first rudiments of the lesson of life. I do not mean of course that there were no schools in those days or no education. There were plenty of schools and much education of a kind which must seem very queer to those who have had no experience of an education which was designed solely for its effect upon the character of the pupil.

I have in mind such a school. Indeed this piece of clumsy dictation is being made almost upon its site. The theory which prevailed in those days was that somehow the master made the school. We called him master because he was master, not teacher, because teaching was the last thing he thought of doing. Also he was master outside of the school as well as within and he would drag from the field any recalcitrant boy whom he thought likely to be benefited by his ministrations. This master had no appliances to make study amusing or interesting. His only piece of apparatus was a short stick, of good grain and sound heart, or a dichotomous piece of leather properly tempered by smoke and fire. To temper this instrument was considered as necessary an accomplishment as the mending of a pen. A master who could not manufacture his tools was as ill considered as a blacksmith who should forge an ax which would not hold its edge.

In those days there were very few professors but there were plenty of schoolmasters which is in singular contrast with the present state of affairs when the universities are crowded with professors who hold classes for two hours a day five days in the week for five months in the year and the schools are left to the tenderness and mercy of immature girls and celibate women. To be a professor was easy. To be a good schoolmaster was given to few. I have seen boys of seventeen who would make excellent professors of surveying, plumbers who could teach persons more ignorant than themselves the principles and practice of steam heating but very few schoolmasters within the last thirty years. The breed appears to be nearly extinct. How they were created, no one knows. Possibly they were professors who were spoiled in the making by developing too fine and hard a temper. Occasionally they were scholars who had fallen from their high estate by some infirmity of the flesh. Such persons were extremely competent to exorcise jolly from the young especially at times when remorse for their own infirmity was strong upon them. I have often thought that the temperance movement has interfered with the production of good school-masters, just as the decrease of illegitimacy has left the country bare of servants.

It is recommended in such textbooks upon education as deign to mention the matter at all that in extreme cases where bodily punishment is permitted it should be administered with all the circumstance of a solemn rite. Nothing could be more degrading and none but a degraded man could punish a boy in cold blood. These old schoolmasters had a certain savageness and were quickly aroused to wrath against ignorance and folly.

The principle upon which they proceeded was that all boys could be improved by being confined in a school-house. All could learn obedience, just as the most ferocious animal could be reduced to submission if only the penalty of obstinacy, sullenness or disorder were made heavy enough. But by anything which could be learned out of books only the few were expected to profit. Education was free, that is, free to all who had the resolution to seize upon it and make it their own. Like the kingdom of Heaven, it must be taken by violence. It was free in the same way that the elements are free in the soil, the fish on the sea, or precious metals in the earth free only to those who are willing to endure the toil of making them their own. To cajole or even to force an unwilling or incapable boy to learn from books was considered a piece of stupid outrage upon the boy and a waste of the master's time. His business was to maintain order, enforce discipline, and exact obedience, to create an atmosphere favorable to the exercise of the mind by those who had minds to exercise. The discipline was rigid and the only escape from it was into the realms of fancy. Those who were unable to rise were forced out into the world again and quickly found their place as craftsmen or as toilers upon the land or upon the sea. There was no system, no curriculum, no textbooks even. Certain instruments of torture, such as copy-books, massive printed works which were wholly unintelligible, and a set of problems about the capacity of A, B, and C to remove earth, pile cord-wood, run races, and row boats against the stream were of course placed at the disposal of every boy. After these hateful tasks the severest bodily labour on farm or on work-shop was regarded as the highest luxury to all but the few who in some way had become infected with the desire for learning. Upon these few the master lavished his affection and learning. No pearls were too precious for them, and no solicitude too laborious. Instead of being punished for such gross vices as lying and fighting, these chosen few were reserved to be whipped for pronouncing a Latin word with a false quantity. That was a distinction to which none but the few could aspire.

For the value of this system I am quite willing to appeal to the results as observed in those who remained in the school and in those who were driven out before their natures were damaged — and nothing can be more damaging to a stupid boy than to be kept at books by force in the old schools or by cajolery in the new. This school contained an average of sixty pupils. They were all conferred in one room, and they had one master. The district in which it was situated never contained more than forty families, yet out of it has issued within my own remembrance one hundred and fifty-five persons who afterwards obtained University degrees. That is a test of a certain value. I have spoken with generations of pupils who were driven out from that school unlettered it may have been but they testify in one voice to the value of the lesson in obedience which they learned.

And yet I have seen upon those rude benches boys of thirteen who had mastered the six books of Euclid and were not insensible to the wide humanity of Horace. How it came about also that a year later they were reading the Gospels in Greek it would be difficult for me to explain or to make understood.

I think that the success of this school was due to the master's belief that education should serve no practical end and that at the moment it strove to be useful it became useless for any purpose whatever. This discovery was not a new one. The Greeks who are perhaps the best educated people who ever lived proceeded by that principle. The learning of poetry, the practice of music and of gymnastic exercises — that was their whole system. This meant that boys were acquainted with the best that had been done and thought in the world which had then existed.

To these disinterested men education was the end and aim of their ambition, that is the training of taste and character, the symmetrical development of body, mind and imagination. Even the study of arithmetic was only permitted if it were pursued for the love of knowledge, and not for the purposes of a shopkeeper.

This old schoolmaster of whom I have been speaking was perfectly clear in his mind that an education which left a boy inefficient in the calling which he was to follow was no education at all. He was equally clear that no education was of any value to a boy who had no mind to profit by it. With the making of a craftsman he had nothing to do, he was concerned merely with the making of men.

In all the reports upon Education which I have read there is one feature in common, and that is a lamentation over the indisposition of the public to spend their money upon it. It might be worth enquiring if there was not a grave doubt in the minds of the people that they were not getting value for what they did spend. In the public schools of the United States there are nearly seventeen millions of children at a yearly charge which approaches four hundred million dollars; and this calculation makes no allowance for the value of those young persons' time, which must be of some value in communities where attendance upon school is considered only a part and not the whole of life.

The theory of free education is that it provides equal opportunities for all. The effect in reality is that it forces each individual to accept the situation whether he is qualified for it or not. It forces upon each pupil an education not because it is the best for him but because it is the same as others received. He is not even left free to refuse it and what was once free education has now become compulsory. This compulsion is most rigid in the cities where the people are too ignorant to resist. In so intelligent a community as Prince Edward Island where one third of the whole revenue of the province is devoted to purpose of education thirty-five per cent. of the school population do not attend school or attend only very irregularly.

The aim of all systems of public education is to bring all pupils up to the same standard of attainment and that standard is the ability to matriculate into the school or university next above. How badly the system fails may be gathered from the fact that of the students who even succeeded in entering Harvard last year, fifty-eight per cent. failed to meet all requirement. In Yale the ratio was fifty-seven per hundred. In Columbia seventy-five out of one hundred and forty-five entrants were "conditioned", and in New York University, the numbers were thirty-six out of forty-one.

A fallacy which lies at the root of all systems of public education is well expressed in a report which lies under my hand. The writer who is the superintendent of education deplores "the practice of a false economy", which "would close against our youth the avenues to distinction, that instead of being presidents or professors in colleges, judges, doctors, lawyers, clergymen or business men they will be reconciled to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for those who have been born and brought up under more fortunate conditions." The defect in our civilization is just this, that men are employed as professors, doctors, lawyers, and clergymen who would be engaged much more profitably to the community and to their own souls in hewing wood and drawing water.

The fact of the matter is the pedagogues are mistaken in assuming that a college education, or any other education which has its origin in books alone is of much value unless the individual has a mind which will absorb it and make it his own. The system has not produced educated men, and it has produced inefficient workmen.

Let us adopt what to a pedagogue well appear the lower position, and assume that education has something to do with making of a man a good craftsman, whether he be professor or carpenter, by which he can earn his living, a good father who will perform his duty towards his family, a good citizen who will perform his duty towards the State. These offices have been performed; and are being performed, by men who were educated by the most diverse methods, and indeed by men who have never shared at all in those inestimable advantages which are believed to lie in schools and books. Tried by this test the education by which the doctor, lawyer, or clergyman has attained to his high eminence has no superiority over those methods which produce hewers of wood and drawers of water. There are incompetents in both classes, but probably the proportion is not higher amongst carpenters than it is amongst professors.

For purposes of education, it is not the method but the man which is required, and the essential requisite for a teacher is that he shall be an educated man. And when I say man I do not mean women. Yet the large proportion of public schools are taught by women who — if they make any impression at all — necessarily impress upon boys the characters of women. In the public schools of Ontario eighty-one per cent of the teachers are women. There are 5500 more women than men. At the Macdonald college which provides training for all the Protestant teachers of Quebec there were last year 152 persons in attendance, of whom all but three were women. Modern education has arrived at its logical attainment in the female teacher, the correspondence school and the phonograph which gives out sounds representing certain facts. No matter how adorable the feminine character is, it is not precisely that which one would hold up for emulation by boys who are afterwards to become men.

The remedy which is proposed on every hand for this state of affairs which none consider satisfactory, is that more money should be paid for education especially for the encouragement of male teachers. I am disposed to think that the public pays very handsomely for what it gets or is likely to get under the present system. In Ontario the average salary of the male teacher is 660 dollars a year. In Prince Edward Island, which is a still more intelligent community, the salary is 265 dollars, which induces me to believe that the people of the latter province appraise more correctly the value of what they get.

The truth is that every system of education is wrong. One principle will suffice for all boys but a system is valid for only one individual. Any method will be wrong if it is applied to any pupil save the one for which it is suited. Good teachers have no system. They trust to the spontaniety of their own instincts, and those instincts are destroyed by any system which is imposed by outside authority. The teacher then comes a part of a machine, a civil servant instead of a master of unruly boys.

So long as education had the high aim of enlightening the mind, subduing the will, and giving to the material at hand the best possible character, it was inevitable that some account should be made of those elements in the nature which have to do with religion. Until our own day education and religion were invariably associated. Let us make the utmost concession to the susceptibility of those who believe that schools are only "national" when they are "non-religious" ,and substitute any other term which they may choose. The case is not different. Education divorced from religion ends in lawlessness, defiance of authority, and ill manners in every relation of life. It is the negation of all discipline.

Of course I am not speaking with praise of those schools in which a system of traditional theology and organized ecclesiasticism is mistaken for religion; nor of those in which it is considered that the ability to repeat the Lord's Prayer in Latin and draw a map of Palestine is the mark of a religious mind. There is this, however, to be said of schools of a professedly religious character: as a rule they are taught by men who, whether or not they are good men and men of character, are at least in the form of men and possess the authority which comes from strength and not from weakness.

Schoolboy "Howlers."

Some amusing schoolboy "howlers" were recounted by Mr. W. Elwyn Fiske, headmaster of the Elm House School, Surbiton, at the Christmas prize distribution. In the general papers worked by the students one boy described "coup d'etat" as a French dish played in musichalls as a voluntary.

Credit, said another boy, signifies "a person who gets nice things said behind his back." A third boy illustrated the meaning of gender by explaining that a camel is masculine and a dromedary feminine.

Asked to quote some exceptions to the rule "Ladies first," a boy wrote, "When you are going to be hung." "Ladies first except for votes" and "Ladies always first except when the door is too small" were other replies. The boys were also asked what they would wish for if they were granted five wishes. Among the replies were "To be able to eat anything" and "To be a porcupine, because I could prick people."

IF YOU HAVE NO ICE

Here is a suggestion for the housekeeper who gets along without ice:

"Obtain a large, common flower-pot and seal the whole in the bottom with plaster of Paris. Place in the pot the bottle containing milk, or a covered crock containing butter, and fill the pot with water to as great a depth as possible without the bottle or crock floating. Cover the pot with a board or a plate and set out in the open air, away from the direct sunlight, and preferably where there is a current of air. The evaporation of the water from the surface of the porous pot will keep the contents several degrees colder than the outside air, when there is the slightest amount of air stirring. The higher the wind, or the drier the air, the greater will be the cooling effect."

The Boston News Bureau, the most conservative Financial Newspaper in the United States, says in its issue of September 5th:
"THE NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED MEN IN THE UNITED STATES AT PRESENT IS ESTIMATED AT 2,500,000.
Is this the time for Canadian Workmen to Link Their Interests with those of the States?

CANADA STANDS READY TO REPEAT HER VERDICT; SEES MISTAKE HAS BEEN MADE

Mr. Burnham Has Another Successful Meeting in North Harvey—Canadian Farmer to Prevent Attempt to Ruin Canadian Agriculture.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted Mr. Burnham and Mr. Soden at North Harvey last night. The night was beautiful and the people turned out in great force. A number of ladies were present. Mr. Lewis Parker very ably filled the chair.

Mr. Burnham opened the meeting by contrasting the methods employed by United States and Canada in getting ready to make the reciprocity agreement on Canada. Sir Wilfrid Laurier bit, and two men who knew no more about farming than farming did about them, were hastily despatched to Washington to make an agreement fraught with the utmost importance to both countries. Canada now awakes to find that a serious mistake has been made and is fully ready to do as she did in 1891 when at the polls she wiped unrestricted reciprocity off the slate.

AN ABSURD PROPOSITION.

The speaker appealed to the audience to go with him while he loaded a train load of products for the United States, under reciprocity. He put in all products of the farm from hay to hogs. He then went to United States with his hearers and loaded a train load of the same products, only in this case the train was much longer, since the agricultural exports to Canada from the United States is much greater than from Canada to the United States. At a given signal the train moves on. They pass at the bridge and the people of Canada welcome the trains to the station, carrying large quantities of the very stuff they had sent the day before to the United States. This is reciprocity in farm products. A reciprocity by which the people exchanged similar goods was like two little boys swapping jack knives and being delighted with the increase by the trade. Was not this a fair explanation of reciprocity? How could the people of Canada be expected to vote for what was an absurd proposition.

FATAL FOR CANADIANS.

The speaker said that he held in his hand, the weekly notes of August 18th, in the Department of Trade and Commerce of the Laurier government at Ottawa, which said that it would be a fatal thing for Canadians to ship their grain to England through any port but a Canadian port. When our own department of Trades and Commerce, which is absolutely non-political, although under the control of the government now in power, says a thing like that, because the British importers of grain know how much better and cleaner and better grade the Canadian grain is, and when the same document points out how the Canadian grain grower had increased his grain exports to Great Britain, was is not time for the farmer to save himself from debt and do all in his power to prevent the ruin of Canadian agriculture!

Mr. Burnham read what president Taft says in regard to the necessity of the United States getting Canada's bye products or else the American cattle trade and hog trade could not expand as the United States desired. The plain result of the pact would be to put the foreign trade in the control of the United States and to enable the United States to rule the British market and to take away that growing prosperity and development from the Canadian farmer and artisan and give it to his American rival.

STATE PENSIONS

Was it any wonder that the Canadian farmer is alarmed rather than cheered by the prospects. The speaker also elaborated on his pension system, by which free of all cost, men and women on reaching the age of 65 years would receive from the public, what was provided for that purpose a regularly paid pension that would keep them from all want, charity and dependence. This has been found to work perfectly in Great Britain and the speaker said that Canada was far behind the times in not having it introduced before.

AUDIENCE LAUGHED

Mr. Burnham created great laughter, in holding up the Examiner of Monday evening, to the view of the audience and exhibiting the pannelled item, in that paper which read as follows: "The reciprocity agreement saves the people from those who would monopolize their food supply. The Examiner says, said Mr. Burnham, that the American farmer and the farmer of North Harvey is conspiring to monopolize the food supply. To relieve the congestion, the Examiner would bring in American products and then Mr. Stratton asks you for your votes.

MR. R. J. SODEN SCORES

Mr. R. J. Soden, when called upon by the chairman made one of his rattling fine speeches and literally brought down the house. He was interrupted several times by an American tourist, but he put it all over him and the tourist relapsed into silence, amidst tremendous applause from the audience.

Mr. Soden referred to the Welland situation, where the Liberal member Mr. German, had declared against the pact, and also spoke on the unprepared position of Canada as against United States, when the agreement was brought up at Washington. It was as if Canada was like a silly fish, going to jump at and gobble up a spoon without observing the hook attachment.

Usually, he said political policies had something to be said in their favor, but so far as he could see reciprocity had nothing. The United States wanted to control and if necessary wreck both our agricultural and manufacturing prosperity. Throughout, this address, Mr. Soden was heartily applauded for his splendid arguments.

The meeting closed with cheers.

MR. SEXSMITH'S KEENE MEETING

Electors Turned Out in Large Numbers to Hear Speakers

Special Correspondence

Keene, Sept. 12—Mr. Sexsmith, our Conservative candidate held a meeting in the town hall here on Friday night last. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity by Conservatives and Liberals. A very patriotic feeling was evinced by the majority of the audience. Mr. Thompson was the first speaker and expounded some very strong convincing arguments to show that reciprocity was no good for Canada. Mr. Sexsmith spoke next and it cannot be disputed that he, in a very able and truthful manner, discussed the many ways in which Canada would be injured by having reciprocal trade with the United States. In fact his statements were so convincing that it aroused the ire of some of our Liberal friends who endeavored to repudiate his statements, but were unsuccessful in their efforts. Mr. E. Porter was the last speaker and in a very able and gentlemanly manner, discussed the question of reciprocity. The meeting was then closed by cheers for the King and speakers. We trust that every patriotic citizen will cast his vote on the 21st in favor of Mr. Sexsmith and help to keep the Union Jack floating over our fair dominion.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wedlock of Toronto are visiting at Mr. W. Kempt's.

A fire broke out in a stump fence on the farm of Wm. Kempt. By the timely aid of neighbors it was extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Mr. George Gall has now a stock of dry goods in connection with groceries. We trust he will receive a liberal share of the patronage of the public, as he certainly is worthy of it judging by his past record.

Several of our villagers have dug their potatoe crop and report the quantity and quality very poor.

DEATH AFTER A SCRATCH

Morris Qualzam, an eleven-year-old Windsor boy, fell off his bicycle and scratched his wrist. He thought nothing of the injury, but blood poison set in and he is dead.

Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full.

The way to avoid serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful, yet painless germ-killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and stopping the pain and smarting. That is why Zam-Buk is so popular with children.

The flesh thus soothed and purified, the wound is made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore, and new healthy tissue is built up in a quick, painless and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing balm, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk, Co. Toronto for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

COUNTY POLICE COURT CASES

Magistrate Edmison Will Hear Charges at Norwood

County Magistrate Edmison goes to Norwood on the 11.28 C.P.R. to-morrow morning to preside at the hearing of a couple of cases, one of which is that of a resident of Norwood, charging several others with bodily assault. The hearing will commence at one o'clock.

A man named Pace, who runs a shooting gallery at Stony Lake, lodged a complaint also with the Magistrate about some damage that was committed to his shooting gallery outfit on regatta day at Stony Lake by some hoodlums. The case will be tried Thursday in Norwood.

On Saturday morning also in county court at 11 o'clock he will also try a charge of assault. Albert McCuaig alleging that Robert Tedford assaulted him. The dispute seems to have arisen when Tedford who said he was engaged by the former to do some work arrived at the place where the work was to be performed and found it finished. He alleges that McCuaig employed him and another man to do it, and a dispute arose over some wages he was to receive to remunerate him for his lost time. The dispute led to assault.

Hamilton may be asked to vote $601,000 for water works improvements, not inclusive of proposed new reservoir.

WEDDING BELLS

PETERS—HENDERSON.

At twelve o'clock yesterday a quiet wedding took place, when Miss Mossy Henderson, daughter of the late Mr Robert Henderson, was united in holy wedlock to Mr John Scott Peters, of Toronto. Rev. Isaac Couch performed the ceremony at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. G. A. Helson, 613 Bethune street.

Miss Sadie Smith, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and the groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Galvin Peters.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters left on the 1.40 G.T.R. train for Montreal on their wedding trip, and on their return will reside in Toronto.

TORRENT OF LAVA.

Mount Etna Is In Eruption and the Peasants Are Fleeing.

Catania, Sicily, Sept. 13.—The crest of Mount Etna now present a terrifying spectacle. Heavy smoke lies over it with frequent brilliant flashes, and the bombardment which is continuous along a line nearly two miles in extent, is like the firing of heavy artillery. A torrent of burning lava, estimated at 2,000 feet wide and four feet deep, is pouring down the slope. Everything in its way has been carried before it. Groves of trees have been uprooted and set on fire, and the lava stream is sweeping through the fields, sending out for miles around hot resinous waves of smoke.

The peasants have left their homes, carrying with them the aged, the sick, and the children, and whatever meagre belongings they were able to get together.

Whole regions covered with hardened lava from past eruptions, have been torn open by the frequent earth shocks. Many of these have been of great violence, and the peasants fear a repetition of the Messina disaster.

The reciprocity pact injures nine manufacturing industries in Brantford. It hits two in Peterborough. The workingman who votes for Stratton and reciprocity is voting against his own job.

"THEY DO NOT WANT STRATTON AT OTTAWA," SAYS THIS JOURNALIST

Montreal Herald (Liberal) Reporter Says Mr. Stratton Should Have Retired —Liberals Don't Want Him

SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW

MONTREAL, Sept. 14th — The city of Montreal is in the Province of Quebec, but that does not hinder it from taking a keen interest in Ontario politics. The other day there were four newspaper men at the Windsor Hotel waiting to interview an M.P. from Ottawa. Naturally the talk turned to "reciprocity." It started, of course, with Quebec politics and then gradually veered round to Ontario.

"By the way, who's running for the Liberals in Peterborough this year?" asked a reporter from the "Witness."

"J. R. Stratton, of course," answered a "Gazette" man.

"Well," said another, "that is a shame. After that Farmers' Bank case, and that Gamey case, he ought to have enough decency to retire. There is one thing certain, and that is, that they don't want him at Ottawa."

And this was from a reporter on the Montreal "Herald," (Liberal), a paper that is devoting miles of scare headlines to the furthering of the interests of the Reciprocity party.

WHITNEY QUOTES PRICES TO SHOW INJURY BY THE PACT

Seaforth, Sept. 14.—Sir James Whitney was given an enthusiastic reception last night in his appearance in South Huron in the interest of the Liberal-Conservative candidate, J. J. Merner. Over 2,000 people of both political parties crowded the skating and curling rink from the town and surrounding country.

The Premier's speech was intensely imperial and vigorously condemnatory of the Fielding-Paterson-Taft agreement. F. Holmstead of Seaforth was the chairman.

Before Sir James Whitney spoke he was presented with an address by Mayor McCallum and with a bouquet of flowers by Miss Olive Rankin. Sir James, who spoke for more than one hour, was accorded an attentive hearing. He said the designs of the United States were not favorable to Canada, where they expected to reap the benefit and not the Canadians, and quoted President Taft to substantiate his arguments. He dealt with the prices of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, and quoted figures to show that the prices in Canada were higher than in the United States. He did not think that the farmers of this country would be hoodwinked into voting for something that would be a benefit to the farmers of the United States and against their own interest. He dealt with the hay and barley, and claimed that the best market would be to use it on the farm where it was grown. He dealt with the railways of this country, showing where Canada had spent $170,000,000 in building railways east and west, and that these roads would be practically useless east of Winnipeg if our trade was connected north and south. He closed his speech with an appeal to all loyal Canadians and lover of British government to vote against reciprocity on Sept. 21.

Borden In Dartmouth.

Halifax, Sept. 14.—Borden and Crosby addressed a meeting last night in Dartmouth, across the harbor from Halifax. The leader received a warm reception, an overflow meeting being necessary to handle the crowd. The addresses were along the usual lines on the reciprocity pact. Sir Hibbert Tupper addressed a large meeting in Middleton, Annapolis County, last night. Mr. Borden addresses two meetings in Fielding's riding to-day.

Messrs. Borden and Tupper will conduct a campaign in Nova Scotia right up to election day.

The Hamilton Co., f'r Instance

Let the Examiner assert, if it desires, that the William Hamilton Company is working overtime trying to fill orders. Let it assert that every other factory in Peterborough is working overtime. It may be the truth — or it may not be the truth. The Review only wishes it were true in every detail. The workingmen of Peterborough know the conditions as they exist, and there is no use in arguing about the conditions. Every such assertion is only an added reason, coming right from Mr. Stratton, why a free trade measure should be defeated.

Is reciprocity in effect now? No, of course not. If the William Hamilton Company is working overtime, as the Examiner asserts, without reciprocity, will reciprocity help or hinder? The Examiner does not argue that free trade in natural products will help the Hamilton Company market for heavy machinery, surely! Heavy machinery such as the Hamilton Company manufactures finds its market when general industrial conditions are prosperous.

Would you change them — these very prosperous industrial conditions that the Stratton organ is so busily engaged in finding out? The Review only hopes that what the Stratton organ says is true, though workingmen in the places concerned seem to show a disposition to regard the organ's panegyrics as political buncombe.

It does seem strange, however, doesn't it, that Stratton asks the workers of Peterborough to vote for him in advocating a measure which tears down half of the wall of protection that gives them a living?

RIOTING BY FREE FOODERS

French People Use Pitchforks in the Fight.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The war against the high price of food, which has been languishing for the last few days, owing either to the vigorous precautions of the authorities or the palliative measures of the mayors in establishing municipal butcher shops and other food depots, burst forth afresh yesterday. In several districts there were violent disorders, which indicated that professional agitators were again at work. At Creil, 32 miles north of Paris, barricades were formed with telegraph poles. One of exceptional strength was built around a huge boiler, surmounted by a red flag, and it required a large force of troops to storm it successfully. In the engagement large numbers on both sides were injured. The streets of Creil last night were patrolled by soldiers.

Charleville also was the scene of serious disturbances yesterday. Crowds of people from the country round about, armed with pitchforks, attempted a regular investment of the town. A regiment of dragoons, hastily summoned, charged down upon the manifestants, scattering them in all directions.

At L'Orient, in Brittany, the mobs, not satisfied with proclaiming a boycott of the market, upset the stalls and threw into the streets the various articles of food exposed for sale.

"A BAS LA MARINE" CRY OF QUEBEC

Laurier Meets Opposition in Montmagny.

Montmagny, Que., Sept. 14.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier came here yesterday to support the candidature of Hon. Dr. Beland, who is running in the two divisions of Montmagny and Beauce.

The feature event of the day was the first display of open opposition to the Premier's marine policy to occur at one of his Quebec meetings. Not only was there a crowd of young men at a corner on the route of the Premier's procession to the meeting place who cried, "A bas la marine," as he went past, but the Nationalists also made their presence felt by hanging a huge streamer, bearing the same words, across one of the hotels where Sir Wilfrid could not help but see it on his way to the gathering.

Macdonald, Chapleau and other members of the great Conservative party, he said, had advocated reciprocity. "I say great Conservative party, and I salute them," he repeated, raising his hat to their memory.

Then quickly replacing it, he said: "But the present Conservative leaders, what are they? Only pignies."

He then attacked the Nationalists, characterizing their campaign as one of calumny and lies, and declaring that he still believed that the Liberals would come out victorious over the "unholy alliance" of Quebec castors, and Ontario imperialistic jingoes.

To-night the Premier will speak in Quebec for Mr. William Power, and will leave Friday morning for Rimouski.

Hot Time Expected.

Quebec, Sept. 14.—It is announced that Mr. Armand Lavergne will speak on Friday afternoon in Rimouski at the same time and at a spot only about 100 yards distant from that chosen by the Premier for his address

A Whirlwind Finish.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Sir Wilfrid has planned a whirlwind finish to his campaign for Tuesday, Sept. 19, when he will speak at Grandmere in the afternoon at two o'clock, and at Joliette at four o'clock. He will then spend the evening in Montreal, holding two open-air meetings, one at Atwater avenue, and the other in the east end, at a place not yet fixed The other speakers at these meetings will include the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and the city candidates.

DEFEAT FOR THE REBELS

Were Repulsed With Heavy Loss at Chengtu

Special to the Review.

Pekin, Sept. 14.—Advices from Tau Chau to-day say that the rebels were easily repulsed with heavy losses at Chentu, where several Canadian missionaries had taken refuge. It is feared that the city is not sufficiently provisioned to withstand a lengthy campaign

PREPARING THE HEMLOCK FOR THE MANUFACTURER

The Liberal Movement That Threatens Prosperous Industries---Something For the C. G. Co. Workingmen to Consider and Others---Opening the Door to American Competition.

The workingmen in the Canadian General Electric company are receiving a great deal of newspaper attention from the Stratton forces at present. The Stratton organ is making desperate attempts to coax into line the workers of this fine, big institution. The prosperity of the company, its busy times, its widening output are great themes for the picturesque pen of the vote trapper.

Workingmen of Peterborough generally should consider this, and it applies particularly to the Canadian General Electric company. The present tariff is the old Canadian national policy with a few Fielding furbelows put on to make it look like new. This National Policy of Protection has been responsible for the Canadian General Electric company being established, with its works here. The Old National Policy is in this one instance responsible for the employment of perhaps fifteen hundred men.

Mr. Borden has promised to continue that policy in its entirety. He has promised to reject reciprocity, to retain enough protection on Canadian industries to assure the Canadian workingman continued prosperity and the home market. Laurier has taken a bold step when he makes a free trade deal with the United States, that in addition to opening Canadian markets in natural products, has injured many manufacturing industries, among them nine Brantford manufacturing industries, and some in Peterborough.

Workingmen of the C.G. Co., and of Peterborough, can you afford to trifle with a policy that opens the Canadian protection door half-way? Can you afford to support a pact which is but the fore-runner of continued and persistent efforts by the American business men to get a market in Canada for their manufactures?

President Taft wanted free trade in manufactures. Senator Beveridge says that the United States must stop the locating in Canada of branches of American industries—like the C.G. Co. The American manufacturer is waiting with longing eyes for our fine Canadian market! How long would the C.G. Co. remain prosperous, if the duties on the electrical manufactures were taken off? How many similar manufacturing institutions are there in the United States waiting to compete in the Canadian market? Do you think that under Laurier this protection is SURE to remain, to keep out your competitors?

The workingman should know, if he doesn't now, that Liberal candidates in rural ridings are saying that reciprocity is but the first of a reduction on manufactured goods, so that the farmer can buy his manufactures cheaper from across the line. Mr. Harrison, Liberal candidate in North Grey, for instance, says that "this (reciprocity) is only the thin edge of the wedge, and he will do all in his power to drive it home."

The East Elgin Reformer says to its farmer readers: "The manufacturers will have to drink the hemlock. But the manufacturer is afraid that once you—the farmers—have a taste of freer markets, that you will demand more freedom."

The Regina Leader, read by farmers, says: "The big interests are opposed to reciprocity because it means the thin edge of the wedge to further lower the tariff wall. For the same reason the western farmer and business man should support reciprocity."

Mr. Workingman, you have foes without and within the country. For the sake of the preservation of present Canadian independence and prosperity, it is to be hoped that you all will rise above party issues and political feelings to kill with your vote, as far as Peterborough is concerned, this great revolution from the established order of things in Canada, that threatens to sap at the roots of Canadian industrial and commercial welfare.

Let him who wants commercial union with the United States and ultimate strangling of Canadian manufacturing cast his vote for J. R. Stratton.

ANGLICANS ARE IN FAVOR OF IT

Church Union Appeals to Them Also.

London, Ont., Sept. 14.—In general synod assembled the Church of England of the Dominion of Canada last night passed a resolution to seek union with other churches. The resolution was adopted after a long debate, which commenced in the afternoon session, occupied the greater part of that session and most of the evening. Rev. Principal Rexford of the Montreal Diocesan College gave the following resolution, which passed unanimously:

"The general synod places on record its earnest desire for Christian union and as an end thereto recommends the clergy and laity to avail themselves of every opportunity of Christian co operation, which does not involve a sacrifice of church principles. And that the clergy seek opportunity to confer with their brethren of other unions concerning the principle of church union."

During the afternoon a message was received from the House of Bishops recommending that the synod pass a resolution that the delegates to the 1912 synod at Vancouver be assessed $10 to help defray the contingent expenses. This carried, also that the delegates' allowances for meals while traveling be limited to $2 per day.

CONFESSES HIS CRIME

Dogstain Johnson Acknowledges Killing of Annie Lemberger

He Gets Life Sentence and is Rushed to Prison

Special to the Review.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—"Dogstain" Johnson confessed last night to having kidnapped seven year old Annie Lemberger. He says that he killed her because she cried, and then threw the body into the lake. Johnson was immediately sentenced to life imprisonment and rushed to the penitentiary before the people were aware of his confession having been made.

AMERICAN TRUSTS TRYING TO KILL OUR MANUFACTURING

Ottawa Manufacturer Meets Under-selling That Means Death to Canadian Production—How the Trusts Work.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—That the American trusts are doing their utmost to gain a footing in Canada was the charge made by Mr. Fripp at the Conservative rally in Moreland's Hall last last night.

One case which he cited and which raised the indignation of his audience to its highest pitch was that of a prominent manufacturer in this city. He said:

"A Sussex street manufacturer has informed me that during the last few weeks American agents have been in town offering for sale the same goods as he makes at a price twenty-five per cent. cheaper than that at which he can afford to sell them. Selling at this price, of course, causes a loss to the American firm for the time being, the intention being to undersell the Ottawa manufacturer until he is driven to the wall by the loss of trade. After our Canadian factory has closed up and its owners ruined, the selling price of this particular class of goods will be raised far beyond the fair price. That is the game of the trusts every time."

Interviewed on this question this morning Mr. Fripp stated that the case cited at the meeting last night was merely one of many such which have been brought to his attention lately.

"Why," he said, "the American trusts on their own side of the line have both the producer and the consumer at their mercy. They have already assumed practically full control of trade in the United States, and they now seek to extend their influence to Canada.

"The manager of a certain wood-working establishment in this city, the employer of a large number of hands, has informed me that a certain type of door which they make here with Canadian labor at a cost of $1.28 per door is being offered through American trust agents at seventy-eight cents. Once the trusts get a footing into our Canadian trade, the factory here would simply have to close down, and by so doing would throw a large number of men out of employment

"As samples of what will happen when the trusts commence their operations in Canada, we may take the closing of the Carbide factory on Victoria Island by which a large number of men were deprived of their bread-winning occupation and an industry which might have been of great importance to Ottawa was banished forever. The effect of the recent cement merger on the smaller factories at Owen Sound and elsewhere is too well known to require elaboration."

Captain Scott Convicted.

Montreal, Sept. 14. Henry Scott, captain of the Montreal team, was found guilty yesterday of assaulting Dr. Boivin at the National match.

The evidence of the Montreal men was that Scott thought he was going to be assaulted, but the judge held that the players were paid by the very men who paid to see the games and the spectators must be protected. Sentence was suspended.

European Unrest.

Brussels, Sept. 14.—An order was issued yesterday retaining with the colors the soldiers who should be disbanded to-day, their service period having expired. The new period of service has not yet been determined

Man Hunt In Manitoba.

Snowflake, Man., Sept. 14.—Work on farms and in the neighboring towns has been suspended while the men continue to search for Henry B. Wilson of Hanna, N.D., who is alleged to have kept Miss Eleanor Gladys Brice, a school teacher, prisoner for 30 hours in the forest.

Wilson was last seen at Pembina Bridge Tuesday night and it is feared he has escaped over the international boundary line. The bloodhounds are working well and the posses are still in pursuit.

Premier Roblin of Manitoba, uncle of Miss Brice, arrived here yesterday in his automobile and has joined in the hunt. The condition of Miss Brice has improved.

Our Greatest Duty

The thought of EVERY public man, year in and year out, should be directed to this, OUR greatest National, Economic, Political and Military SAFETY—

A Discovery of Vast Importance

It Is Now Admitted That Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, and Colds Can Only Be Quickly Cured By Mixing a New Medicine With the Air You Breathe.

Scientists acknowledge that medicated air treatment is the only treatment that will cure these diseases, and that stomach medicines are worse than useless.

Catarrhozone air treatment has been found to be the most effective way to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. Its action is so prompt that in less than an hour an ordinary cold is cured, and after a more thorough use of Catarrhozone, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all diseases of the throat and lungs are completely cured.

Catarrhozone is a very simple and powerful method of treatment. You simply breathe it through the inhaler and it immediately passes over every air cell of the throat, lungs, and bronchial tubes, curing and healing as it goes.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000

THE TWO FACED CAMPAIGN

Mr. Fowke, Liberal candidate in South Ontario, at Oshawa, a manufacturing centre:

It has been represented that free trade in manufactures will follow free trade in farm products. The man who said that is a wilful prevaricator of the truth.

Mr. Harrison, Liberal candidate in North Grey, at Kilsythe, an agricultural community:

This was only the thin edge of the wedge and he would do all in his power to drive it home.

Mr. Mackenzie King, Liberal candidate in North Waterloo, at Berlin, a manufacturing centre:

It is not the intention of the Government to make any further tariff changes. I cannot make that too clear. If it had been the intention of the Government to reduce the duties on manufactured articles it would have been done when the Americans came to us asking for that. To say that the Government intends such a thing, and that this is only the thin end of the wedge, is absolute nonsense.

The East Elgin Reformer, serving a farming community:

The manufacturers will have to drink the hemlock.

But the manufacturer is afraid that once you—the farmers—have a taste of freer markets, that you will demand more freedom.

The Regina Leader, published in an agricultural community:

The "big interests" are opposing reciprocity because it means "the thin edge of the wedge" to further lower the tariff wall. For the same reason the western farmer and business man should support reciprocity.

Who prevaricates!

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN MISSED

Farm and Dairy, Peterboro, one of the leading agricultural papers of Canada, and a strong advocate of reciprocity, is having a discussion with one of its readers, a Conservative farmer, regarding the bearing of the reciprocity proposition on the prices of food, says the Ottawa Journal. The farmer in question, Mr. R. B. Harding, of Middlesex County, expressed doubt of the value of the agreement to the agricultural community. Farm and Dairy replies by giving a long list of comparative prices at Toronto, and Buffalo for farm staples for the years 1906 to 1911. The list shows that the prices at Buffalo for eggs, butter, cheese, meat, cattle, sheep, lambs, hogs, hay, oats, barley, rye and buckwheat. Farm and Dairy sums up, "With the exception of eggs and lambs, the Buffalo market has invariably ruled higher than the Canadian." The single year's exception in the case of eggs, Farm and Dairy shows to have been due to special temporary causes.

This looks like proof that the Ontario farmer will benefit by reciprocity by getting higher prices for his staple products.

Also like proof that the people of Ontario will have to pay these higher prices.

The one thing means the other.

Nobody but a Laurier campaigner or a Liberal newspaper can show that reciprocity will give to a Canadian farmer higher prices for the food he sells, and at the same time give to the Canadian consumer lower prices for the food he buys.

To the farmer, the cry is, "vote for reciprocity and get more money for your farm produce!"

To the housewife the cry is, "Help reciprocity and buy farm produce for less money!"

EDITORIAL NOTES

Strattee and struggles for the workingman.

Canadians must keep up the barriers if they wish to keep Canada for themselves. That is unanswerable.

J. H. Burnham does not indulge in personal abuse of Mr. Stratton. Do Mr. Stratton and his cohorts abuse Mr. Burnham? Well,—— —!

Reams and reams of the usual arguments about reciprocity won't convince the workingmen of Peterboro that they will be benefiting themselves by voting for a free trade measure.

Let the Canadian tariff be so framed that it will force the manufacture in Canada of the things that Canada needs as far as possible in reason, and build up our industries. We do not want any more Cordage Works, or Lock Works, or Tool Company, or William Hamilton Company episodes.

The manufacturing industries of Peterboro owe nothing to the Fielding tariff, more than it is a continuance of the time honored national policy. But if the manufacturers and workingmen want a change from that policy of protection if they want to feel the thumbscrew of American pressure to lower our tariff wall on manufactures, let them vote for reciprocity—this first instalment of free trade.

It is not a question of "Are you going to vote Grit or Tory this time." Not a bit of it. It is a question of whether you will vote for a discredited Liberal candidate, and for the biggest blow to Canadian nationality that it has been threatened with since Confederation. There are many issues in this campaign to be considered, and to cast your vote according to principle and right can only lead to a vote for Burnham and Borden.

One has only to consider what is the value of a vote in this election, not in dollars, but in principle to realize that it is not a time for trifling. The ordinary party lines of Grit and Tory are to be sunk in the endeavor to put Strattonism down and out, and to put reciprocity down and out along with him. He is not wanted at Ottawa anyway. And if Borden gets in, of what use would Mr. Stratton be, not wanted by either his fellow Liberals or by the Conservative majority?

The Canada You Will Never See

By ARTHUR HAWKES.

Never prophesy until you know. Sometimes you do not know very much until you begin to prophesy. Which means that often it is only when you try to size up the future that you find out what the past has been teaching you.

After all, you know a great many things that you do not know how you know. Some knowledge is acquired as you acquire a suit of clothes; but the best knowledge is that which comes to you as unconsciously as the hair upon your head. It grows with you and in you.

The Canada you will never see will be as surely the product of the Canada you see now as that the boy is father to the man. When you talk about being a trustee of posterity you are talking sound common-sense and the best kind of political economics. When I hear that Canada is to have a population of 80 millions within the next 80 years, it does not excite my credibility. It is as important sometimes to recognize your limitations as it is sometimes to dwell upon your possibilities.

The twentieth century will be ours because of the unique use we can make of our opportunities and the unique way in which we can prevent the full consequences of our disabilities. To hear some people you would think it gets warmer instead of colder as you approach the North Pole. Temperature is bound to influence population, although, perhaps, not to the extent and in the way that you suppose.

A severe winter does not necessarily mean a scant fertility or a seriously restricted capacity of the soil to support population. Things do not grow in winter, anyway. We know nothing about the extent of Canada's population 50 or 60 years hence, because that will be governed by conditions of soil and climate, which we cannot affect. No one, by taking thought, can re-write the story of the thermometer. But, if we cannot bequeath a climate, we can construct and bequeath institutions. They must be constructed in accordance with the genius of the people whom they are to serve, and also of the climate in which they are to flourish.

Where you have a climate that for several months in the year causes the people who live in it to fight against elemental nature you have got a climate that tends to produce a virile people. Men deteriorate much faster in the south than in the north. The institutions of the north have always been more admirable than those which flourish in the south. Physically animals and men always attain their highest perfection nearest the line where the abundance of their food begins to taper off into scarcity.

The other day a party of British journalists was admiring the beauty of the scenery on the upper St. Lawrence and envying the recreations of the people. One of them asked, "How do you endure the winter?" He was surprised to be told that the winter was even more enjoyable than the summer, with hockey, skating, curling, and all the zestful occupations of crisp days and long, joyful evenings.

There is going on in Canada a remaking of people who speak the English language, but who will, through the climate, become different in their physical fibre, and who will be restrained in their pride by the fact that they have got to get along with millions of fellow citizens who speak the language of ancient Gaul. Even as there is a fight against physical nature within Canada, so there will always have to be a fight against some of the results of natural geography, which stuggles to give its own unalterable stamp to political institutions.

John Bright foresaw the day when geographical and other influences would cause the stars and stripes to float over the whole of North America. Goldwin Smith, also an English Liberal of the intellectual school, believed in the inevitability of Canada's fusion with the United States.

But, as Canada is the miracle of the modern commercial and political worlds, and has come to her magnificent position in spite of climate, in spite of geography, in spite of political pressure, in spite of prophecy, in spite of everything except her underlying determination to remain in the orbit of the British Empire, so she will continue an increasing power among English-speaking peoples, because, over and above the capacities inherent in her geographic, climatic and ethnographic qualities, she is so happily placed that she may be the living link, the balance weight, I had almost said the arbiter, of the international relationships of the English-speaking Empire, and the great English-speaking Republic.

Not so long ago she was regarded by both London and Washington as a very poor relation, as a negligible quantity, almost frozen out of the national class that counts. To-day she is courted by both. If she is wise she will refuse to sacrifice one tittle or jot of the independence that is her chieftest insurance for future political greatness within the Empire and as a neighbor of the Republic.

Trade has become an expression of political ambition. I mean, of course, trade in its largest aspects, as it is the subject of treaties and statutes and elections. Some people try to make out that there is nothing more in international trading relationships than there is in a lady buying goods over the counter. But when a lady buys sugar and tea, furs and feathers, the storekeeper does not tell her she is at the parting of the ways and that what she spends with him will seriously affect all her domestic relationships and will weaken her friendship with her kith and kin across the sea.

It is easy to make or mar our fate by some action whose importance is imperfectly understood. I verily believe that the General Election that is upon Canada is one of those deciding epochs in her career. The Government brought the Reciprocal Agreement from Washington with the idea that it was nothing more than a reduction in prices across the counter. They were seriously mistaken. It has been described as the most important in Canadian history because, as President Taft has said, "Canada is at the parting of the ways," and because, as Sir Wilfrid has said, "the best way to be on friendly terms with our American neighbours is to be absolutely independent of them."

The complete establishment of our own lines of inter-communication between East and West, the clearer understanding of their Canadian-British-Imperial possibilities by the many-tongued people of the West; the appreciation of what our responsibility in world politics means—when every citizen of Canada, native-born, British-born or foreign-born, is so much in need of understanding these things it is imperative that we keep ourselves free from any entanglement with a nation that would make our commerce subsidiary to what Sir Wilfrid called the ever vigilant competitor, who is ready to take the trade that properly belongs to those who acknowlege Canada as their native or their adopted land.

Do you not see that underneath all, and above all, and beyond all, the immediate considerations that may affect your vote on the Twenty-first are the untold importances of the Canada You Will Never See?

Protecting the Public.

Ottawa, Sept. 14—"The Ontario Government does not want to interfere with the proper operations of agricultural societies," said J. Lockie Wilson, Toronto, superintendent of fall fairs who is here to-day. He caused a sensation during fair week last year by having a score or more of "con" game machines confiscated.

"We must protect the public," he said. "Recently, we confiscated a number of games. One was a hoop game, and we found it impossible to squeeze the hoops over some of the objects they were supposed to cover. Another game consisted of throwing darts at cards, which were supposed to be numbered on the backs, and we found things wrong there.

"Things, however, seem to be improving at fall fairs, and so far there have not been as many seizures as last year."

Not Quite Repealed Yet.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—Returns from 519 of the 521 cities, towns and plantations, of which 260 are furnished by town clerks on the matter of the repeal of the constitutional prohibition, had been received last night, and give the following vote:

Majority against repeal, 159.

About the middle of the afternoon it became apparent that the prohibitionists were surely, though slowly, gaining, and the state committee of the No License League, which in the morning had decided to petition for a recount, joyfully turned over that prerogative to the anti-prohibition leaders. On account of the fact that the returns from all the towns have not been absolutely verified, the "wet" leaders have not wholly given up the fight.

Illinois Central Strike Averted.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The strike threatened by the shopmen of the Illinois Central Railroad because of refusal of the railroad to recognize the system federation of mechanical employes, has been averted. A reorganization of the federation will be undertaken, when the demand probably will be renewed.

Of chief influence in preventing the strike was the refusal of the International Association of Machinists to authorize the strike on the ground that the system federation had not conducted its negotiations properly, and also that a strike would imperill the working agreements now existing with several of the international unions.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

"You grinned when you said it about her," muttered Mr. Harriss leaning close to George. "But you'll tell her that some day, and you won't feel like grinnin', then . You'll waller at her feet. But she'll never marry a dude."

He swayed away, ominous prophet, sooty as a crow, in his fuzzy hat and rusty black.

"It'll be like livin' through a tornado in tophet, the next two days in Corran-cache," said Kyle, refilling his pipe. "But I'm startin' a day ahead with this bunch so's to be there," he admitted. "The governor gave you the gist of Cornelius' will, did he? I reckon it sounds like a nightmare to a city chap like you."

"So much so that I got into trouble by talking about it," said George sourly. "I'd like to talk a little about my own business, Mr. Kyle. Now, about Smart and Lunch. Do you——"

"I'm thinkin' that the death of Cornelius Corran and even this funeral celebration will have some bearin' on your business, more'n what you realise," said Kyle, with a shrewd wink.

He did not wait for the young man to comment.

"Cornelius Corran was quite a grand-stand player, son, but it wasn't all grand stand with him. Let me tell you something — when he was alive, he held the reins over a terrible slat of timberland. He didn't get all of it by plankin' down dollars on every acre. There's more than one way of gobbin' timberland up this way. When tax titles, squatter claims, fake lines, and all the [illegible] are guaranteed by grit and cheek and plenty of friends at your back, you don't need quite so much help from the courts and the registry of deeds.

"Dennis Kavannagh had the friends when he was alive; he 'tended right to it, keepin' an army ready for call. He never needed it — not in real action. It was enough for the other fellers to know that he had it — bought and owned by the rum, grub, and good-fellership that he spread with hands and tongue. Why, son, if he had ever called on, even, the Great Trust Co., crews would have quit the big fellows and joined this bunch and ridden the president of our corporation, whoever he is, on a rail across the line.

"It's fashionable to steal lands up here, but the other thieves had to let Thief Cornelius alone so long as he lived and had his clutch on things. There's more to this funeral than a hurrah. He left five thousand dollars to spike down the memory of Cornelius Corran as the king of all the good fellers that ever stole land up this way. And his girl is the heiress of his lands and his memory. See? He reckoned that when an ice cake like the Great Trust got up against that memory of his, it would melt so quick that it couldn't put many dents in his estate. I reckon he left the girl pretty well barricaded."

"Do you mean that our company would go in on a land-grabbing scheme?" asked George.

Mr. Kyle laughed so uproariously that tears ran down his cheeks.

"Oh, you city sharps do know how to wear the velvet glove!" he complimented, after getting his breath. "You spoke out, then, just as innocent as that civil engineer that they sent down here last year to steal ten thousand acres — and he got away with it on fake lines that he run."

Mr. Kyle took him in with side-long glance, in which humor mingled with shrewd understanding.

"You've got me sized up wrong — and the company that you work for, too, I think," objected George.

"Keep up the bluff, that's what you're hired for" gigled the rude skeptic "We understrappers of the Great Trust don't expect to be let into headquarters secrets. We only grab in and clean off the lands after they've been stolen. But you'd better not show your hand in the game you're on now till after this section gets over the funeral — and that funeral may last quite a while, just as Cornelius planned. I'd rather have my job than yours."

The new forester of the Great Trust Co. decided that convincing this colaborer was profitless work. But he had found a text for some rather lively ponderings. And especially did he wonder of what sort was this forest queen, whose father had left to her a heritage of protecting loyalty bought with such questionable means.

IV

The journey became tiresome as night drew on. Big Bill gossiped about the affairs of the north country, but he was rather prosy, except when he threw in further malicious hints as to what George's real business was in the woods. He seemed to find the young man's indignant protests a means of whiling away the time. He grew more impertinent in his baiting.

"You're a mighty good-looker," was one of his impish thrusts, "and, perhaps, they've sent you up here to catch Queen Clare and marry the Corran lands right into the Great Trust Co.'s clutch."

George's retort was violent enough to suit even Kyle's taste for the gamy in reparteo.

"And, furthermore, you've got spirit to go with your size and looks, and girls like that most of all. She knows what spirit is. She's all tuned up herself like a fiddle in the front parlor. But if you marry her, you'll have to beat Blinn Wiggin to the sortin' boom. Ever hear of Blinn and his father, Jep?"

"Of course, I have never heard of them — and, in addition to that, Mr Kyle, I don't care to hear about them. Why dont' you tell me where I can find Niler and Smart; if you've got to talk?"

"'Cause I can't keep you mad that way, and you're more interestin' when you're mad," confessed the boss "Why don't you cuss? I give you lief I'd like to pick up a line of fresh city cussin'. My line of talk has gone stale with my crews. I need a new stock."

But the forester maintained wrathful silence. He would have gone back to the other car, but he realized that this retreat would have flattered Mr. Kyle.

"This Blinn Wiggin that you'll be gettin' up against when you make your play for Queen Clare, is a good-looker, too. But I'll tell you, son," he added critically, "it'll be a fair race between you, handicaps about even. He's known her, boy and man — kid and queen, all his life. And she knows him — but she may know too much about him. Just one quiet hellion with girls — and, on the other hand, women fall for just that sort. And yet she may be the kind that would rather come up the home stretch with something in the shafts that the crowd didn't have quite so much of a line on. On the other ——"

"I don't want to have any trouble with you, Mr. Kyle," advised the forester balefully.

"You're with the majority, there— not many people do! On the other hand, I say, Jepson Wiggin has been manager for Cornelius for a good many years, and Cornelius has left him sole trustee of the estate. And you've got to admit, son, that he's a bad man in the judge's stand, where outside ringers are concerned. I'd have to think twice on this before I'd place my money. I reckon I'll watch you for a few days. I can tell something from the way you score down under the wire at Corran-cache."

George, as angry as a well-bred young man can well be, muttered something about punching out the eye that dared to get busy with his business.

Mr. Kyle chuckled appreciatively.

"Never had this ride up shortened any more by innocent and profitable talk in my life — and I've been luggin' in men for twenty years! You'll have to excuse me, now. I've got these Fijis to unload. All off at the next station!"

He went through the car, shouting, cuffing, and shaking.

It had been a long ride, and night had come on. Most of the convivial crew had long before fallen asleep Those who were so far gone in stupor that a shake did not stir them. Mr Kyle lugged down the aisle to the door to be unloaded when the train stopped He handled them as a stevedore would handle bags of grain When the station was reached, he tossed them off into the arms of the other men, and kicked their duffel bags out after them

The little hamlet was Skiticock, so they told George. It was the junction where the logging railroad to Corran-cache tapped the country's main railroad artery. The logging railroad operated only in the daytime. Incoming crews were lodged free at the Great Trust Co.'s boarding house. Kyle informed the forester. He followed the boss there, swarms of hungry mosquitoes chasing him.

"Forty goats for the ram pasture!" Kyle notified the keeper of the boarding house. He was shoving men before him in at the door. "Me'n a caliper chap for a room."

MADE WELL AND STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto.—I gladly give you my testimonial in favor of your wonderful medicines. Last October I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas.

After receiving your directions, I followed them closely and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels, and am stronger in every way.

I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby was born, and I recommend it highly to all pregnant women.—MRS. E. WANDBY, 92 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Another Woman Cured

Maple Creek, Sask.—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I am now in perfect health. I was troubled with pains every month. I know other women who suffer as I did and I will gladly recommend your medicine to them. You may publish this if you think it will help others.—MRS. P. E. COOK, Maple Creek, Sask.

If you belong to that countless army of women who suffer from some form of female ills, don't hesitate to try Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

HOLDS TWO MEETINGS.

Sir Wilfrid Speaks at Beauce and Thetford Mines.

Beauce Junction, Que., Sept. 13.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier reached here yesterday afternoon in the course of his final tour of French Canada. The fierce manner in which the campaign is being carried on in this province can be judged from the strong outburst to which the Premier gave vent in the course of his speech.

Taking his hat off and making energetic gestures, he declared: "Never have I seen a campaign in which the tactics of the opposition were so insidious and dishonest. But thank God, I have strength, though I am on the verge of seventy years, to face them and fight them to the bitter end. Neither the Imperialists of Ontario, nor the Nationalists of Quebec, will succeed in overthrowing Laurier."

Appealing to Conservatives to break away from their party leaders, he said: "If you vote for me, you do not desert your chiefs, for it is that your chiefs have deserted you in departing from the policy of Macdonald."

He said that the proper market for Canada was the United States and he proposed with the reciprocity to put the money that had hitherto being going into the United States treasury into the pockets of Canadian farmers.

A Thetford Mines.

Thetford Mines, Que., Sept. 13.—Apparently unfatigued by his exertions of the afternoon at Beauce Junction, where he addressed a large gathering, Sir Wilfrid Laurier appeared here last night, before a crowd of 5,000 people to set forth reasons for the return of the Liberal party to power.

The Premier first addressed a large gathering in the skating rink and then spoke briefly at an overflow meeting which was held outside.

Sir Wilfrid was accompanied by Hon. Mr. Beland, Hon. Charles Devlin, Mr. A. L. Pacaud, Liberal candidate in Megantic, and Mr. Savoie, former Liberal member.

The Premier, speaking in the centre of the largest asbestos producing district in the world, opened with a reference to the rapid development of this section of the province. This development, he said, was due to the fact that asbestos was allowed to enter freely into the American market unhampered by tariff regulations. He drew a moral from this, claiming that reciprocity would put the producers of other products in a similarly fortunate position.

Czar Visiting Kiev.

Kiev, Russia, Sept. 13.—The Russian court has moved to Kiev for a week. Elaborate arrangements have been made for the stay of the Emperor and Empress, and $1,000,000 have been expended in paving and beautifying the mother of Russian cities.

From the railroad station, where they were offered the traditional bread and salt on a salver on their arrival, to St. Sofia Cathedral, the Emperor and Empress were acclaimed by multitudes.

At the church, after taking part in the religious ceremony, they received copies of the Image of Our Lady, called the Impregnable Wall.

The Emperor spent a busy day visiting his territorial points, and receiving deputations, which included the Rabbis.

Will Raise $1,000,000.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—The raising of a fund of a million dollars for next year was discussed yesterday at a meeting of the Montreal Presbytery, when Rev. Dr. Mackay, moderator of the general assembly, and Rev. Dr. A. S. Grant, general superintendent of home missions, launched a scheme for merging the separate funds of the church.

"This amount would be apportioned by the synods to the various presbyteries, which in their turn would apportion it out to congregations within their bounds, and in each congregation a standing committee will be appointed to see that the required proportion is raised within the year.

MALE CULINARY EXPERTS

Establishment in Montreal of a Novel Cooking School for Men

An invasion of women's rights on the part of the male sex is now imminent in Montreal as a result of the establishment of a novel cooking school exclusively for men, the first of its kind in that city. In it they will be initiated into all sorts of culinary mysteries which heretofore have been taught only to women, and it is expected that the pupils who have entered up to date will be able to make biscuits which will far excel the best that father ever made and rival the famous mother product. Incidentally they will learn to cook meats, make pastry, manufacture a pie or prepare any other dish which may be desired. The establishment of this unique school is not, however, an effort to educate husbands for suffragettes who can care for the household while the wife is engaged in politics or business. The idea is merely to undermine the sovereign independence of the cook, who at present comes close to being the ruler of many households. The founders of the school believe that as soon as a realization is achieved of the fact that a threat to leave on the part of the cook does not mean that the family will be left in dire straits, a fairer relation will be established all around. Incidentally, a course in the new school will be valuable to the husband left desolate in the city during the time his family is at the seashore or in the mountains. If the idea develops, as it is hoped, it is expected that summer cases of dyspepsia will be minimized and the so-called servant problem solved, at least in part.

An order in Council has been passed providing that, except in special cases, extra pay will be dispensed with in the Canadian Navy. This action has been taken on the advice of the technical officers, who represent that a more generous scale of pay is provided in the naval service of Canada than in the Imperial Navy, and that in most cases extra pay can be dispensed with without hardship.

The Editors of Ohio Have Had Their Eyes Opened

Ohio editors have been visiting Western Canada. Ex-Congressman John J. Lentz, said:—

"You are getting all our best farmers out here to look over your country, and we never get them back again.

"From what I have already seen I am prepared to state that the reports have underestimated rather than overestimated the opportunities."

W. W. Aikens, editor of The Evening Star, of Franklin, Indiana:—

"There is no question about it, Canada is wonderful. Fort William and Port Arthur, which I had pictured as little ports on the lakes, simply took my breath away with their size and busy attitude."

Mrs. C. C. Day, historian of the Buckeye Association:—

"I feel that this Canadian trip will prove one of the most interesting that I have ever taken. No matter where I go down through the middle States I hear stories of the wonders of Canada."

R. W. Parmenter, of The Lima Advertiser:—

"You have the best of immigration officials a country could have. They are around through Ohio picking the flower of our stock of farmers, and these farmers never return, once they get a look at what Canada offers them."

BEES HAD POSSESSION

A swarm of bees, supposed to belong to the experimental farm, Ottawa, attacked a grocery store owned by Geo. Hopper in the centre of the city, a couple of miles from the farm, and took possession. Several children were stung and business had to be suspended, while the bees sampled everything sweet in the place. Rev. G. Watt Smith, of the First Congregational Church, who is himself an apiarist, succeeded in luring the visitors into a large box, solving the problem for the storekeeper.

Services were held at her grave by Rev. R. Clements of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union.

At a banquet last night many Canadian workers in the Christian Endeavor cause spoke, including Miss E. Hall of the Quebec Union, and Thomas Brann of the Ontario union; Dr. Bernard Clausen of the New York State union, Karl Lehman, interstate secretary, and Dr. Clarke himself. The founder related many interesting phases of the movement in the world, stating that now in every remote corner some devotee of the cause could be found.

IF YOU ARE SICK YOU CONSULT A SPECIALIST

WHY?

Because he has made a special study of the disease you are suffering from, and from the knowledge gained by years of experience knows just what treatment you require.

If you are going into a law-suit, you do the same—consult the best lawyer you can get, and find it cheap in the end.

Now, when you are considering taking Life Fire or Accident Insurance, do you not think it would pay you to consult one who has had many years experience in that profession, and whose knowledge would be of use to you in enabling you to get the best value for your premiums, with the most liberal policies and absolute guarantees?

If you want what is best in Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, you can get it by calling at, or phoning to

That's what a customer asked us recently about a patent medicine we had sold for years, and we were forced to admit that in reality we knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising.

Some of the claims made were so extravagant that, of course, we could not take them seriously. This is the reason why we strongly recommend our own preparations.

TASTY MILLINERY DRESSING OF THE SEASON'S STYLES

Local Openings Show up Prominently and Reflect Great Credit on Window Dressers.

It is rather a coincidence that the first day of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition should be on the same day as the annual Autumn millinery openings. The latter opened this morning under the most successful and enthusiastic conditions and many are the complimentary remarks that are being passed upon the beautiful and attractive window displays of the various local centres of the millinery art. The skilful efforts of window trimmers have been exerted to the utmost to please the eye and invite the patronage of the ladies of the city and marked success has crowned their efforts. Some of the windows are mazes of color and beauty, calculated to dazzle the eye and cause the intending buyer to hesitate as to which is the most suitable for her.

The collection of hats and gowns for this fall is most remarkable. All the very latest ideas in style and color, right from the centres of the cosmopolitan millinery trade are shown in the windows and in the mantle and hat departments of the local stores.

CRESSMAN'S

Cressman's Company Ltd. have a very striking looking window display arranged in such an artistic manner as to immediately attract notice. The architectural design consisting of different sized pillars is made to represent marble. The central feature is a large mirror draped with tan silk velour of a rich autumn tone. Two lower pillars support jardinieres filled greens and maiden hair ferns, of Autumn tints. Two pillars supporting large white globes give added effect when illuminated at night.

The noticeably rich tones of the goods exhibited combined with the rich settings, present a very pretty effect. The hats are indeed charming results of high class millinery skill and are most attractively shown. There are two very handsome gowns especially, one a black velvet and one of a satin, in an apricot shade.

The south window is confined to ready to wears. The decorative features of this window are a white column with pillars supporting a large globe. A small table of peculiar design, to represent stone, gives added effect. The adorning features in the north window are similar to the south. It is confined to a display of exclusive suiting lengths, with suitable trimmings, of velvet braid and buttons.

The special interior exhibits are neatly and effectively arranged, and welcome inspection. Each department is making a special display, and the fashion loving women of Peterboro will find all the latest style tendencies of the season.

ROBERT FAIR

Robert Fair and Company have spared no pains to present a most effective and clever window design and display. Nothing but the very latest and most popular styles in hats and gowns are shown, and those that will be the reigning modes this Fall. For the opera goer, there is shown the newest thing in opera cloaks, in a tan shade with appropriate braiding.

The background for the south window is a rich green velour draped with marquisettes and fancy voiles. The base is of the new Coronation blue. The north window contains suits and costumes particularly adaptable for this fall. All the different Autumn mounts are also shown.

The popular hats this Autumn will be a nobby Pierrot hat of white, with mount and trimmings of banana velvet. Another is a large ciel blue hat with ostrich feather edge and rose buds. Then comes a black trimmed velvet with feather bandeau finished with large rose. A very pretty style is one of velour beavers and stitched felts. These enumerated are among the very smartest of the season.

THE BEE HIVE

The Bee Hive has a striking looking window in which the color scheme is all of Patti green. It contains a handsome and classy looking waist of the same color. Some nobby hats of green are also shown. The other window contains two suits of the latest mode, one is of black velvet, and looks particularly neat.

MISS McGIVERIN

Miss McGiverin has her display windows also invitingly filled with the very latest creations in the millinery art. Some striking looking hats of unique and becoming shapes are exhibited. H. Zacks, the ladies clothing store is also well stocked and contains all the latest novelties in ladies goods

RICHARD HALL

Richard Hall's ample window space has a very beautiful and new design and color scheme. It is attracting marked attention from all, and is the subject of much praise.

J. C. TURNBULL

As usual, the J. C. Turnbull company have put forth their customary efforts to reveal their exceedingly up-to-date and varied line of millinery creations to best advantage. One glance at their magnificent window display delights the eye and invites patronage. Gowns and hats are most effectively mirrored, the blending of colors giving a most wonderful picture. The north window contains some of the season's latest models and in the south window some natty and becoming fall suits are actively arrayed.

Gordon Hall, third son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hall, London street, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Last year a grant was made to No 2 road division of $50.00 to be spent on Webbers avenue. It being too late in the fall, it having snowed on the day set for the work to be done, the money therefore was never spent.

On motion of Messrs. Morrow and Robson, road division No. 2 is hereby granted the $50.00 allotted to them year, and in addition $25.00 to be spent on the road near Arch. Lillico's. Total amount $75.00.

READY FOR FIRST DAY OF THE FAIR

Program of Entertainments Commence To-night, With Acrobatic Feats Vaudeville, Fireworks and Band Concert—Program for Friday

They are off!

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition opened to-day under the most auspicious and promising circumstances. The weather man handed out delightful weather, and with everything favoring the exhibition now, the outlook is highly optimistic.

EVERYTHING BUSY.

The scene at the Exhibition grounds is certainly one of activity and enthusiasm. Tents are rising every minute. People are rushing hither and thither all intent on their own particular business yet everything working smoothly and harmoniously. Out of the inevitable opening day confusion, order and working arrangements are rapidly being restored. If anybody should inquire as to who was the busiest man on the grounds, the answer that F. J. A. Hall was, would be quite correct.

SOME EXHIBITIONS

At the south end of the grounds is the large poultry exhibit tent. The miniature railway is again on the grounds and will undoubtedly be one of the best investments and amusements on the grounds. J. J. Turner & Sons have a house tent erected. Some of the other exhibitors who have tents up are the Ontario Department of Agriculture, exhibit of G. A. Gillespie, R. M. Roy and Louis Mendel's photo exhibits. The Canada Malleable Steel Manufacturing Company, the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and the Empire Cream Separator Company. There are ice cream and refreshment booths galore. Nobody need go hungry or dry. Prominent among these booths is the ample tent in charge of the Ladies' Aid of Knox church.

PROGRAM FOR TO-NIGHT

To-night there will be a grand illumination commencing at 7 p.m. All the buildings will be open.

The 57th Regiment band will be on hand, and a choice program will be given. Right in front of the grand stand a splendid and complete vaudeville performance will be given in three acts. The evening performance will conclude with a grand display of fire works on a most pretentious and spectacular scale.

FRIDAY'S PROGRAM.

10 a.m.—Poultry will be judged in the poultry tent.

See agricultural demonstration tent.

A first class meal can be procured on the grounds in the big dining tent of the W. A. of All Saints' church.

1 p.m.—Judging of halter horses in classes Nos. 1 to 5 in small ring.

IN FRONT OF GRAND STAND.

2 p.m.—The first heat of the 2.22 trot or pace race (purse $150.00) will be run off. The judging of the harness horses will take place between the heats of the races in front of the grand stand throughout the afternoon.

The harness classes that will be judged Friday afternoon will be sec. 5, 6, 7 and 8 of Class 4, and sec. 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Class 6.

2.30 p.m.—First heat of the 2.18 pace or trot race; purse $200.00.

During the afternoon there will be six performances by the Bollini Troupe of trapeze and slack wire artists, the Carl Dammann Family of five famous athlets, and the comical trick mule.

4 p.m.—Dog race (dog to be driven by a boy) for a prize of $5.00 offered by Wm. Yelland, Esq.

LAKEFIELD GAVE SEXSMITH ONE OF HIS BEST MEETINGS

Big Audience in Town Hall Heard Three Conservative Speakers.

All meetings are alike for Mr. J. A. Sexsmith. The member for East Peterborough is marching ahead, meeting with success at all points. Bets are being made every day and indications point to a grand victory on Thursday, September 21st.

With Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P., and Mr. G. H. Ferguson, M.P.P., of Grenville, the Conservative candidate invaded Lakefield last night and was given one of the best hearings ever accorded him. The town hall was filled with a gathering of electors that followed the three speakers closely throughout their addresses and judging from the applause and attention, the arguments put forward made their point. Mr. Sexsmith speaks in most optimistic terms regarding his campaign and return to represent East Peterborough, and from all accounts he is justified in his confidence.

AFTER DELIVERY DRIVERS WHO DON'T TIE HORSES

Fine of $1 Attached to Three Cases — Richard McBride Goes Free.

Once again poor Dick McBride faced the stern countenance of Magistrate Dumble this morning. It will be remembered that some time ago McBride caused a disturbance in the Oriental hotel bar, which resulted in him smashing a mirror. Poor Dick cannot forsake his innate longing for the cheering liquid He is an old man and is very feeble.

"Are you prepared to pay the damages for breaking the mirror?" asked his Worship.

"I want to send to my cousin in Toronto," said Richard. "He will send me the money."

Dick waxed very garrulous in court then. He swore to never taste liquor again and would take his affidavit on it. "I haven't much longer to live either," he moaned. "I am an old man now."

"Well you can go now," said the magistrate, "providing you get right out of town. Richard poured out profuse thanks, during which he wished Chief Thompson happiness and prosperity and a few other things, until he was ordered to be quiet, when he stumbled out of the court room still mumbling his thanks.

UNTIED STEEDS.

Three delivery drivers and carters appeared in police court this morning for neglecting to tie their horses when left standing without a driver.

They all pleaded guilty and paid over $2 each. One driver said that he was only on the rig for one day and there had been no iron weight in the cart for him to use. His excuse didn't carry, however, his Worship bedetermined to make an example to offenders.

"The By-law means business and must be enforced," he said.

LIQUOR CASE.

License Inspector Stewart laid an information against a man named Franks for an infraction of the liquor by-law. The man was unable to appear in court and his case was adjourned.

CRITICISM OF TY COBB

A Sporting Writer Tells of Good Points of the Fans' Idol

John B. Foster, editor of Spalding's Baseball Guide, writes of Cobb.

"Cobb is a daring player, but he is not a foolhardy player. His quickness of thought is usually backed by soundness of judgment. He takes great chances, but figures them out like a flash. In a game in New York the other day, he batted the ball hard to centre. On the way to first he raced at top speed, ready to take chances if there was one open. He had his eye on the ball. When he saw the distance which it had travelled he calculated that his fleetness would enable him to beat the throw to second, and instead of turning first base with a wide swing, and in hesitation, he cut it short and barely lost a rod in the circle. Going to second he realized that he had to slide. The result was that he was there ahead of the ball. Exactly in little points like this is the difference between the ball player who is alert to the possibilities of the moment and the other player, who presumes that so and so will happen, and he may as well take it for granted. It may also be added that Cobb is a fine judge of his own ability to accomplish certain things on the field, and that, too, is a fine trait to be possessed by a ball player."

The tiniest of all the jockeys, Joe Plant, was a very popular winner of Danny Maher's Billiard Cup. Plant is so small that he only just managed to peep over the ledge of the billiard table. On being presented with the Cup, he turned round to a bystander, and said, "This'll just do for me to have a bath in."

LANGFORD AND JOHNSON

Sam Says He Will Make Jack Fight or Show Him Up a Coward

"I am goin' half around the world to get Mistah Jack Johnson," said Samuel Langford, of Boston. "Yessir, I am goin' to Australia to make him fight me or show him up as a rank coward. If Mistah Johnson can get Mr. Hugh McIntosh to give him $30,000, he'll probably agree to meet me, which means that I'll come back here with the championship of the world. But I'll not be satisfied that Mistah Johnson really wants to take a chance until I see him in the ring pullin' on the gloves.

"I've got an old score to settle with this cullud gen'leman. We met in Chelsea five years ago in a 15-round bout. I weighed 140 pounds then, while Mistah Johnson weighed 190. He was as much of an unknown as I was, and nobody outside of the Boston sporting men paid any attention to us. It was just after the fight started that I caught Mistah Johnson on the point of the jaw with a right hook and flattened him out on the floor like a flapjack. His eyes were rolling and he almost turned white. When he got up he looked scared 'most to death and hung on until the gong ended the round. After that he wouldn't mix with me and just stuck out his left hand, jabbing me in the face the rest of the way. The referee said he won on points, but you can bet that Mistah Johnson was glad when it was over.

"Ever since that night I've been tryin' to get him into the ring with me again, but he never forgets that punch in the jaw I gave him and doesn't want another. He knows I am 20 pounds heavier now, and he isn't lookin' for hard game. I could have stopped Jeffries myself in Reno in quicker time than Mistah Johnson did the trick. I stopped Bill Lang in six rounds, while Lang stayed nine with the champion. Mistah Johnson knocked out Jim Flynn in 11 rounds and I did it in one. Kaufman, who stayed 10 rounds with Mistah Johnson, positively refused to meet me at all.

"I figure I can beat Mistah Johnson because I'm the best man of my weight in the world. I can hit harder and know as much about the game as he does. It makes no difference how clever he is. I can find a way to get through his defence. Mistah Johnson don't like to get punched. His body is the weak spot. I am nearly six inches shorter, and I figure that I can reach his stomach easier than a taller man. There's no use fightin' for his head, because he's so tall that I'd have to waste many blows. But once I connect with his stomach I'll bring him down so that I can get to the jaw. I know how hard Mistah Johnson can hit, and I ain't afraid of bein' hurt. If he'd been a real slugger he'd have knocked Mistah Jeff out in half a dozen rounds. But he couldn't hit, and that made the fight go longer than it should."

NAPS, YANKS, DETROITS

Naps are to the Yanks What Yanks are to Detroit

If Detroit fails to win the 1911 pennant, they can blame their downfall chiefly on the Yanks. Chase's team, always easy for Detroit, has proven a mountain in the path of the Tigers this season. First crack out of the box New York came to Detroit and split even with that club in their opening series. In New York Chase's team beat Detroit three games in a row, and when they came to Detroit for their second series New York took four straight games from Jenning's men after Detroit had taken four in a row from the world champion Athletics, and made the same kind of a showing against Boston, while they took the series with Washington. On Detroit's last eastern trip New York won three out of five. The Yanks have been as easy for the Naps as the Tigers have been for them. Few are the games that Cleveland has lost to New York this year, and Hal Chase says that the Naps put the Yanks out of the pennant race.

"CY" HOOKER DEAD

"Cy" Hooker, at one time one of the best of the Buffaloes' twirling staff, died of tuberculosis. He was about 37 years old. Hooker was one of the best liked men on the Buffalo team during his stay. He had a fund of humor that kept him in the team even after his best services as a pitcher were no longer his to command. He finally had to leave the Herd, and for a while did well at some fraternal insurance scheme, but consumption had [illegible] and he gave up.

ARE IN BESIEGED CITY

Missionaries Are Cut Off in Chengtu But Are Safe.

Reports From Chinese Foreign Board Indicates That the Canadian and Americans Are Penned Up in Centre of the Storm, But Belief Is That the Garrison Will Be Able to Hold Out Against the Rebels.

Peking, Sept. 14.—Latest advices received by the Chinese Foreign Board and the foreign legations indicate that Cheng-Tu, capital of Sze-Chuan Province, is under siege, that most, if not all the missionaries are inside the walls, and that the city is garrisoned by 1,800 troops, who have had several engagements with the besieging forces.

A despatch from the prefect of Tsu-Chaun, which lies about 75 miles southeast of Cheng-Tu, dated Sept. 12, said that the troops were firing upon the rebels from the Cheng-Tu walls and that the besiegers had lost many men. The belief is held here that the garrison is capable of resisting the attacks of any number of organized rebels from the outside.

The Canadian Methodist Compound within the city has open spaces around its own walls. It is believed that the foreigners have taken refuge within this compound, which is considered the strongest and the most easily defended. Peking missionaries, who have been in former riots at Cheng-Tu, say that whatever Chinese troops were despatched to guard the mission would be stationed outside the compound and would not be permitted under any circumstances to get within the gates.

Whether the foreigners and the natives inside the walls are prepared to endure a siege is not known. The question of supplies is an all important one, and it is probable, in view of past experiences, that the missionaries have taken precautions against such a contingency. The missionaries, however, possess no weapons, unless they have been supplied by the viceroy. Every effort is being made to communicate with Cheng-Tu, but so far there has been no movement to relieve the city.

Foreigners here seem confident of the ability of the viceroy to suppress the rising. The southern section of Sze-Chuan continues loyal, although the natives sympathize with the opponents of the railway construction. All gatherings in Peking in sympathy with the revolutionary movement in Sze-Chuan have been dispersed by the police.

A despatch from Kia-Ting-Fu to the south of Cheng-Tu, says that the foreign missionaries stationed there have left for the Yangtse. These included three men and their wives and a woman doctor. The foreign gunboats have been unable to proceed above Sui-Fu.

Hankow, Sept. 14.—The native press publishes a report that the vice-roy's yamen at Chang-Tu has been destroyed and that many rioters have been killed. It is reported also that the foreigners have gone to Chung-King under escort.

The situation is considered very grave. The vice-roy has about 2,000 troops at Cheng-Tu and 3,000 altogether in the province. Reinforcements cannot reach Cheng-Tu in less than a month.

London, Sept. 14.—A Shanghai despatch to a London news bureau says it is reported that the entire province of Sze-Chuan is in revolt. The rebels are expected to declare their independence.

Poisoned by Ice Cream?

London, Sept. 14.—As a result, it is believed, of eating ice cream at the Western Fair on Tuesday, Mrs. F. Dagleisch of Chatham, is dead at the Victoria Hospital.

About nine o'clock in the evening, Mrs. Dagleisch was seized with convulsions. She was at once rushed to the City Hospital, where she died from ptomaine poisoning about five hours later.

A sister of the dead woman declares that the deceased ate no canned food for supper. Coroner Ferguson has ordered an inquest.

Thirty-Five Damage Actions.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Thirty-five actions demanding damages aggregating over $20,000, have been entered against the city by residents of the newly-annexed Longue Point Ward, who claim that they suffered damage to this extent through a fire which burned out twelve houses and tenements there, and which was only enabled to gain such headway by insufficient water supply and lack of protection against fire. They claim the city upon annexation should have installed adequate fire-fighting apparatus.

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 14.—The first big sale of the Shining Tree district was put through on Tuesday, when Mackenzie and Mann of Toronto, bought the Gosselin property for $300,000 cash.

This was the original gold strike in the Shining Tree district.

Within the next few days another big deal will be put through, when the Jefferson property will be taken up either by the Dome or another Cobalt company. The deal is waiting the refusal or otherwise by the Dome.

Strengthening Jamaica Garrison.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 14.—It is reported here that the British War Office is arranging to send very soon 12,000 European artillery and infantry to strengthen the local garrison in view of the increased importance of the station, which will come with the opening of the Panama Canal. It is expected that the navy yard at Port Royal, which was burned last spring will be reopened soon.

A Giddy Whirlwind.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 14.—A peculiar freak in Monday night's storm is reported from Chatham Township. On James Forsythe's place, on the ninth concession, a whirlwind tore a verandah from a newly-built dwelling and hurled it several yards away. The path of the hurricane described a small semi-circle, tearing gaps of fences, and hit the horse stable, part of which it wrecked. It then turned another half circle in the opposite direction and blew down the wind mill. No further damage in any part of the township is reported, and the whirlwind at Forsythe's seemed to merely trace a complete "S" and then cease operations.

May Order Bridge Closed.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 14.—The City Council may order Aberdeen bridge closed to all traffic, including street cars, unless the Chatham, Wallaceburg & Lake Erie Railway Co. comes to some agreement whereby they will help meet the expenses of repairing the bridge.

The bridge is now said to be in a very unsafe condition, owing to the heavy traffic carried over it by the railway company. The closing of the bridge would mean that all of the railway's northern traffic would be cut off right about the time the big business in sugar beet freight commences.

Big Coal Fire at Boston.

Boston, Sept. 14.—Thousands of tons of coal went in smoke when the coal wharves and pockets of the Batchelder Brothers and the F. C. Warren Coal Companies in South Boston were destroyed by fire late yesterday. The high northerly wind carried the flames in the direction of many large manufacturing plants and tenement buildings, but the fire was confined to the coal structures, which held 70,000 tons of hard and soft coal. The total loss is estimated at $75,000. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective motor.

Nine Bye-Elections.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—There are now nine vacant seats in the Ontario Legislature, the latest vacancy being brought about by the nomination of W. F. Nickle, M.P.P., as Conservative candidate for the House of Commons. The seats lacking members are South Bruce, Centre Bruce, North Brant, North Wentworth, Lennox, Ottawa, Port Arthur, Kingston, West Victoria. All the seats are Conservative with the exception of South Bruce, where R. E. Truax resigned to be the Liberal candidate in the federal fight.

Alarming State of Affairs.

Montreal, Sept. 14. A report was made to the civil health offices yesterday morning by the doctors of the Provincial Board of Health concerning the alarming state of wells throughout the rural districts. The provincial officers have made a thorough investigation and found that the wells are a prolific source of disease. Many artesian wells are found to be contaminated with typhoid germs.

Bourassa Sues For Libel.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Henri Bourassa yesterday entered an action for $10,000 damages against L. A. Rivet, Liberal candidate in Hochelaga, for alleged defamatory libel. The libel suit is the result of certain statements said to have been made by Mr. Rivet in the course of a campaign speech, Sept. 6, to the effect that Mr. Bourassa was being subsidized to the extent of $200,000 by the Conservatives and Orangemen of Ontario, this sum being supposedly devoted to the interests of Le Devoir, the official organ of French-Canadian nationalism.

Extremists In Control.

London, Sept. 14—The Railway Commission yesterday heard the testimony of several non-union workers who said that if the unions were recognized all of the non-union men would be compelled to join unions or lose their liberty. They complained of the manner in which union officials treated non-unionists.

They admitted they believed that if unionism were carried on properly it would be a grand thing, but said that the unions had been captured by Socialists, who used the unions to advance their own views. Unionism had been completely changed in the past few years, they said.

The extremists had got hold, and the men were bound down and had lost their manhood and everything else. It was the policy of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants to keep up the spirit of unrest, because unionism flourished thereby.

Schoolboys on Strike.

London, Sept. 14.—Young England appears to be in a state of unrest following the example set in the recent strikes by the laboring classes.

There have been strikes of schoolboys at London, Liverpool, Manchester, Hull, Sheffield, Grimsby, Llanelly, Bradford, Ashton-Under-Lyne, and even in Scotland, at Leith.

The boys drew up manifestoes, held demonstrations, and engaged in picketing, just like their elders. They object to the use of the cane by schoolmasters, and also want an extra half-holiday on Wednesday afternoon.

At Islington on Tuesday the boys smashed the school windows with stones, and in Hull there was promiscuous stone-throwing, with much damage to windows in the neighborhood.

In most places, the strikes have collapsed and canings have been in order.

BETTER BEWARE OF SIR WILFRID

He is Trying to Lull the Feelings of the Employes

WARNING TO EMPLOYERS

List Not to the Man Who Talks Moderate Protection from Neither Conviction Nor Principle

It has been frequently stated during the past few weeks by members of the Government, their candidates and their newspapers, that the present reciprocity agreement does not affect manufacturers, and further, that it is not the intention of the Government to lower the tariff on manufactured goods. After lauding the agreement as one calculated to bring higher prices to the farmers, Liberal advocates of the pact now proclaim that it will mean cheaper food for the consumer. Thus they seem to have accomplished the difficult feat of facing both ways at the same time. For the guidance of those manufacturers and their employees who from friendly feelings to the Liberal party, are inclined to be lulled into a security which has no foundation in fact by Sir Wilfrid's recent reassuring statements, attention is directed to the following excerpts from speeches delivered by him during the past year:—

Attitude to Manufacturers

In the discussion of the pact immediately following its presentation to the country, the Government sought to hold the upport of the manufacturers and their employees by threats. They were to be bullied into supporting it by the fear of greater reductions in the tariff, by the increase of the British preference, and other means. But the revolt against the agreement was so far reaching, particularly in towns and cities, that these methods had to be abandoned. Then began the policy of guile. If the industrial classes could not be awed into submission, perhaps they could be cozened by promises and kind words and a lavish distribution of Government business.

And so, beginning in March last, a decided change of front became noticeable in the attitude of Government followers when addressing meetings in urban centres where manufacturing operations are extensive. Of course, these addresses differ materially from those given in agricultural districts. In their alarm at the opposition to the agreement that has manifested itself all over the country we find Sir Wilfrid Laurier going out of his way at Sherbrooke, Que., the other day to reassure the industrial classes. Various henchmen of his at Berlin, at Woodstock, at Guelph, and other places, have done likewise. That this eleventh hour conversion to the principle of moderate protection is sincere is more than doubtful. It savors more of a vote catching device, a scheme by which a few political chestnuts may be pulled out of the fire than of honest conviction. This becomes evident when we contrast Sir Wilfrid's recent speeches with those delivered in the West last summer:

The Song of the Farmer

Listen now to Sir Wilfrid Laurier when facing farmers. Addressing the farmers of Saskatchewan in August, 1910, he said: "Protection is a great wrong, and makes millions dishonest one with another. It makes the individual selfish and dishonest, and inculcates the vicious principle of expecting value where none is given."

Again, at Winnipeg, on August 12th, 1910, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "You are all Free Traders. At least, if there are any Protectionists among the farmers of the West they have not dared to show their colors. I also am a Free Trader of the English School. Fox, Gladstone, Cobden and Bright are my models."

These utterances were simply a recurrence of his Winnipeg speech of 1894, when he said: "We stand for freedom. I denounce the policy of protection and bondage; yes, bondage. I refer to bondage in the same manner as American slavery was bondage. Not in the same degree, perhaps, but in the same manner. In the same manner the people of Canada, the inhabitants of Winnipeg especially, art toiling for a master who takes away, not every cent of profit, but a very large percentage, a very large portion of your earnings for which you sweat and toil.'

It is quite evident that Sir Wilfrid talks Free Trade where it will pay, and he promises protection when he expects it to prove profitable. It simply is a question of whether the free trade or the protectionist elements can offer him most.

The Grain Growers

Protectionist Liberals must surely see from the foregoing that protection is not a matter of conviction or principle with Sir Wilfrid and his party to-day. Of late the free trade element has been exercising greater control over him. If reciprocity prevails, he will be under their control, beholden to them for his victory, and consequently ready to do their behests. There is no mistaking the intentions of these people. Listen to the Grain Growers' Guide of July 26th last: "It (i.e., the ratification of reciprocity) will also be the first serious blow in half a century to the iniquitous protectionist principle. The Canadian farmers will have better prices for a large portion of their products, and in addition will be placed in a position where they can demand the removal of protection from the manufacturing industry. When the reciprocity agreement has been in effect for twelve months the farmers of Canada will all be convinced (as most of them are now) that reciprocity is a delusion. They can then say to the Government quite consistently, "We can prosper without protection, and so can the manufacturers. Down with the protective tariff." Reciprocity is but the first step towards wiping out the trade barriers between Canada, the Mother Country and the United States, which are of benefit chiefly to those industries that prey upon the common people. It also marks the first victory of the organized farmers in their fight for a square deal. Inspired by this conquest, the organized farmers can go ahead, encouraged by the knowledge that they are a real power in Canadian affairs, and that with the continuation of their educational propaganda they can compel Parliament to remove all concessions to special privilege. The fight for justice has only begun, and will not end till Canadian industries stand upon their own feet and not upon the toes of the Canadian people."

Remember that the Grain Growers' Guide is the official organ of the Grain Growers' Association of the Prairie Province, which has branches in every town and hamlet in the West. This official organ has a circulation of 25,000, is published weekly, and is filled every issue with the most virulent and unwarranted attacks on protection and the manufacturers. To the Grain Growers' Guide every manufacturer is a robber—assasin, and protection the bludgeon with which he kills his victim, the farmer. The Grain Growers make their understanding of reciprocity quite clear. It is the first breach in the wall through which they will press with renewed vigor for immediate lower tariff and ultimate free trade.

Beware of Tariff Tinkering

Last year 1,000 grain growers in their first raid on Ottawa, stampeded Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party into reciprocity. This is admitted by Liberal politicians and boasted of by the Grain Growers' officers.

As a sane, honest business man, believing in moderate protection, as one who has hitherto, if you will, supported the Liberal party, do you think Sir Wilfrid's policy in the future will be in accord with the views he expressed to the Grain Growers in the above speeches, or with those expressed to the industrial classes more recently?

Do you think that the visit of 2,000 grain growers to Ottawa this December, which is already projected, will be barren of further tariff reduction if Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Fielding control our fiscal policy then? Whose industry will suffer next? Will it be mine? These are the questions every manufacturer must ask himself if the Liberal party, which is trying to face both ways on this question, is returned. No one fears sweeping reductions. Happily the revenue necessities of the Dominion prohibit such action. But reductions here and there, as in the past few years, bring ruin in their wake not only to the manufacturer but to all those dependent on industrial enterprises.

As a conscientious moderate protectionist, as one who believes that our present fiscal policy is fair to all classes, and that it is building up the Dominion on sound lines—and what else can one believe—are you going to support tariff tinkering or tariff stability? Will you vote for Sir Wilfrid and a party that is weak-kneed in support of protection, or will you vote for Mr. Borden and his party who have courageously committed themselves, in the face of many obstacles, to moderate protection? There is only one answer for every one who calls himself a protectionist. Lloyd Harris, Hon. Clifford Sifton, W. M. German, Robt. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, W. K. George, R. S. Gourlay, John R. Barber, Georgetown, and a host of others are not afraid. Are you?

Just a word to the artisan! Your interest is inextricably bound up with that of the manufacturer. Moderate protection during the last ten years, by forcing a host of American industrial establishments to operate branch factories in Canada, has given you a greater choice of work and higher wages. The mere mention of reciprocity has arrested the movement of American factories to Canada. It will cease altogether if the agreement comes into effect, because the American industrial interests will force reciprocity in manufactured products within ten years.

Over in the United States to-day thousands of skilled workmen are out of jobs. Do you want them to come to Canada and share your prosperity? Reciprocity in natural products with the United States means reciprocity in hard times. Reciprocity for you will prove just as injurious to you as it will to the manufacturers. Vote against it.

A vote for Strattonism is a vote for Pugsleyism—and both are synonymous.

DUSTBANE

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the "secret" method of making such trade agreements, whereby citizens and even members of parliament are denied the right to make effectual protest against the terms, before ratification.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian working-men.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

A DAMAGING BLOW

That Is What Reciprocity Would Mean to Canada

Sir William C. Van Horne has expressed his strong opposition to the reciprocity pact in the following terms:—

"I am opposed to Reciprocity:

"Because it would destroy our fiscal independence as regards our tariffs;

"Because it would loosen the bonds which bind Canada to the Empire and ultimately destroy them;

"Because the underlying idea on the part of our American neighbors is our estrangement from the Empire which would be a long step towards annexation;

"I am opposed to Reciprocity:

"Because it would undermine the foundations of our trade and manufactures which have been laid with such effort and success in the last twenty-five years;

"Because it would be a most damaging blow to the magnificent Canadian merchant marine which has been built up in these same years;

"Because our trade per capita is three-fold that of the United States, and Reciprocity and its natural results would surely bring a common level;

"And I am opposed to Reciprocity because we don't need it now, having made our own way to success and prosperity."

Four Dead In Wreck.

Cleveland, Sept. 14.—Four are reported dead and several injured in the wreck of a work train on the New York Belt Line, which occurred in the eastern part of the city last night.

One body was taken from the wreckage of the engine and another is said to be under it. Eleven injured have been taken to one hospital and seven more are in the debris. All of the injured are foreigners.

Dead Thrown From Car Windows.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 14.—A despatch to The Novoe Vremya from Constantinople describing the horrors of the cholera epidemic in Macedonia, says that soldiers are crowded in locked cars when ill and left without water or medical aid. On the Mitrovitza Uskup Railroad living and dead victims of the cholera have been thrown from car windows by their comrades.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Decided improvement in the flour trade, including exports from St. Louis, Minneapolis and Chicago, brought about a rally to-day in the price of wheat. Closing figures were the same as last night to 1-4c up. Corn showed a net gain of 3-8c to 1-2c to 1 3-8c; and oats an advance of 1-8c to 1-4c. The end of the day left provisions 2 1-2c to 7 1-2c higher in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day unchanged to ⅛d lower than yesterday on wheat; and ⅛d to ¼d higher on corn. Paris closed ½c to ¼c lower on wheat. Berlin ½c higher, Budapest 1¼c lower, Antwerp unchanged.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 1200 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 200 calves. A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle, and prices declined ¼c per hundred, which was due to the larger receipts, especially of the lower grades, which had a depressing influence on the market for choice stock, altho the supply of such was not in excess of the requirements. At the lower range of prices the demand was fairly good from both butchers and packers, and a good clearance was made.

Choice steers sold at 5¾c; good at 5¼c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per pound. Cows and bulls were ¼c to ½c per pound lower, the former selling at 3¼c to 5c, and the latter at 3¼c to 5c per pound.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs on account of the fact that the offerings were much smaller than they have been of late, for which the demand was good, and a fairly active trade was done. Lambs sold at 5¾c to 5¾c, and sheep at 3½c to 3¾c per pound. The demand for calves was good, at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The run of hogs was much larger than expected, and in consequence the tone of the market was easier, with sales at $7 to $7.50 per 100 pounds, as to quality, weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the supply of live stock for sale consisted of 375 cattle, 475 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 200 calves. A fair trade was done in all lines, and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, with the exception of hogs, of which selected lots sold at $7.65 to $7.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

NORWOOD RESIDENTS MOURN THE DEATH OF BOLD HILL

Mr. John Lillie Also Called Away—Good Meeting for Mr. Sexsmith.

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, Sept. 12.—Bold Hill is no more. He who has for the past thirty or forty years travelled up and down the roads of this vicinity making his regular calls on his various acquaintances, and amused the children and grown-ups by his quaint habits and innocent and inoffensive manners, has gone to his long rest. For many years Bold has made his home at Mrs. Parker's, adjoining the village, and passed his time visiting throughout the county. For the past year or two old age has been telling on him and his wanderings have been confined to a short radius from the village. Since early last spring Bold has been confined to the house, and on Tuesday this week death removed him from amongst us, and the place that has known him so long will know him no more.

Deceased was very old. It is said that he was almost a centenarian.

Mrs John Lillie, who has been ill for some time from apoplexy, passed away at his home here on Spring street on Saturday last, at the age of 71 years and three months. Mr. Lillie came to Norwood about seven or eight years ago to engage in the insurance business with Mr. T. J. rDain, but for some reason the partnership was short lived and he soon started business on his own account, and has by his close application to business and genial manner, been able to work up a nice business. Mr. Lillie and his family were a worthy acquisition to the village of Norwood, and by his death Norwood has sustained a serious loss. Mr. Lillie has since his coming here, been a valued member and worker in the Presbyterian church, as were the other members of his family. The remains were taken to Morrisburg, his late home, on Monday morning on the early train. Mrs Lillie and her son Ashton accompanied the remains. The family have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their sad bereavement.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The village council met on Wednesday evening last, September 6th, at the council chamber, Reeve A. Breault in the chair; Councillors Blake, Watson and Hendren present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Accounts passed were: James L. Johnston, work, $1.50; salary, Aug., $16.66.

By-laws for the village levy for 1911 were put through their several readings and passed. The rate fort he year was struck as follows: High school rate, 3 1-10 mills; public school rate, 8 9-10 mills; high school debenture rate, 1 3-10 mills; cement by-law debenture rate, 1 3-10 mills; county rate, 2 8-10 mills, House of Refuge rate, 4-10 mills; village rate, 6 mills; rate for 1911, 25 7-10 mills.

MORE VOTERS.

Court for the revision of the Norwood voters' list for 1911 was held on Saturday afternoon last before His Honor Judge Huycke, of Peterborough. The following names were added to the list as M.F. voters: Thos. Moffat, Donald McTavish, Wishart Weir, Perry Kempt, Wm. Puffer, polling sub-division No. 2; Wm. Stares, polling sub-division No. 1.

SEXSMITH'S BIG MEETING.

Mr John A. Sexsmith, M.P. for East Peterborough, and Conservative candidate in the present election campaign, held a rousing meeting in the town hall, Norwood last night (Monday) when a full house gathered to hear the political questions of the day dealt with in an able and forcible manner by the candidate and Mr. Ferguson, M.P.P. Mr. James Andrews, president of the East Peterborough Liberal Conservative Association occupied the chair. Dr. Ford of Norwood, gave a short address, which was followed by Mr. Sexsmith. Mr. Sexsmith's address was full of argument in favor of the home market for the Canadians. The hearty applause that his remarks elicited throughout his address showed that the audience was in sympathy with the views expressed by the worthy member for East Peterborough.

The meeting broke up at a late hour with hearty cheers for the King, Mr. Borden and Mr. Sexsmith.

SEXSMITH NAILS BIG GRIT CANARD; A GARBLED STORY

His Whole Speech on the Budget in 1910—Was Not in Favor of Reciprocity — Extracts Purposely Misleading.

Recent issues of the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner contained a quotation from Mr. J. A. Sexsmith's speech on the budget in the Commons on Jan. 13th, 1910, (which also appears among Mr. Kerr's advertisements in the riding), whereby it was made to appear that he was in favor of reciprocity at that date. This Mr. Sexsmith emphatically denies, and the following extracts from his able speech will prove that instead of advocating reciprocity, he was endeavoring to obtain for the farmers equal rights with the farmers of the States regarding certain natural products. The following is his speech on that occasion as taken from Hansard;

"As has been pointed out the balance of trade against us with the United States is something to be deplored. I have here a statement of our exports to the United States and our imports from the United States, and in the table I have been careful to include only purely agricultural products which are of interest to the farmers of Canada and of which we produce an abundance in this Dominion. The first table shows as follows;

Imports from United States to Canada. 1909.

Total breadstuffs, under duty	$11,425,804
Total breadstuffs, free	3,795,734
Total	$15,221,538
Green apples	224,896
Total provisions (lard, butter, cheese, etc)	3,791,939
Animals, not including animals for export	960,584
Hay	136,738
Vegetables	795,791
Grain products, bran, flour, etc	421,639
Total agricultural products	$21,546,125

Now the market gardeners of the United States have a market of 80,000,000 people in their own country and the market gardeners of Canada have a population of, we will say between 7000000 and 8,000,000 people to supply, but the market gardeners of the United States are protected and the market gardeners of Canada are not equally protected, and the market gardeners of the United States have been able to send to Canada vegetables to the value of $795,791. Now I have here a table showing the Canadian exports to the United States, and I have taken similar articles to those mentioned in the former table of the United States exports to Canada.

Canada Exports to United States.

Animals living	$ 1,796,992
Total breadstuffs	2,542,969
Fruits	390,670
Hay	35,008
Provisions (butter, cheese, eggs, bacon and ham	382,118
Total	$ 9,695,076
Total trade, exports and imports	$285,265,717
Imports	$192,661,360
Exports	92,604,357
Difference in favor of United States	$100,057,003

It will be seen, therefore, that the Canadian farmers and market gardeners have been able to sell to the 80,000,000 population of the United States only $5,695,000 worth of these natural products, while the American farmer and market gardeners have been able to sell to the 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 Canadians $21,546,000 worth. Thus, the farmers of Canada are to this extent forced out of their own market and obliged to pay the freight for the transportation of their products to other markets of the world. That is the kind of treatment the farmers of Canada are receiving from this government all along the line. I remember from my boyhood days hearing the Liberals when in opposition talking about capturing the markets of the United States for the Canadian farmers and having reciprocity. The Liberals are in power; have we reciprocity to-day?

Mr. Edwards—They forgot all about it.

Mr Sexsmith—Yes, they forgot all about it and the balance of the trade between us and the United States is to-day $98,000,000 worth in their favor, deducting the imports of bullion. I contend that the United States last year took that amount of money out of the pockets of the people of Canada and carried it away to their country. I do not believe there is a minister in the cabinet to-day who would conduct business privately with a man who always wanted an advantage of from ten to twenty per cent. and yet that is the system under which the people of Canada are forced to do their business with the United States. I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am no a high protectionist, but I am an adequate protectionist. I believe in fair trade, and if the United States put up barriers against us I believe we should do likewise. Let us see how the duties on Canadian products going to the United States compares with the duty on United States products coming into Canada. The following statement willshow.

	Can. Duty	U.S. Duty
Hay per ton	$2 00	$4 00
Butter per lb.	0 04	0 06
Cheese per lb	0 03	0 06
Bacon & hams a lb.	0 12	0 15
Eggs per doz.	0 03	0 05
Barley per bush.	0 15	0 24
Potatoes per bush.	0 20	0 25
Oats per bush.	0 10	0 15
Peas per bush.	0 15	0 40
Beans per bush	0 25	0 45
Wheat per bush	0 12	0 25

Any fair minded member of this House will admit that there is nothing fair about that for the farmers of Canada. I do not think that the government have at all taken into consideration the interest of the producer. Had we a similar tariff to that which they have in the United States on these articles they would not cost the people of this country one dollar more.

In conclusion I would advise the government to take a little more interest in the farmer and spend a little more money upon them. . . I had no intention at all of making any remarks on the budgett but I was compelled to do so because of the indifferent way the agriculturists and laborers of this country have been treated and because of some of the remarks which have been made recently in regard to this matter. I would ask the government at the first opportunity to see if something cannot be done to protect the markets of the farmers and the market gardeners of Canada."

GLASSES MAKE ALL THE WORLD SEEM BRIGHTER

There is a sense of insecurity to those whose sight is dim. Some persons run the chances of injuring their eyes through the want of glasses. Many tell us it is a brighter better world since they were supplied with suitable Glasses. We help persons daily to brightness and comfort.

LAURIER'S RACIAL APPEAL IN QUEBEC---HOW GAME WORKS AGAINST BORDEN

La Presse's Inflammatory Appeal on Behalf of the French Premier—Why Borden is Detested in Quebec

Who says Bourassa? Who are they who talk of racial and creed appeals against Laurier? If the average British citizen of Canada wants to be convinced as to what Laurierism stands for in Quebec, he should read the French newspaper, La Presse, chief of the Laurier organs. La Presse says that the return of Mr. Borden would inevitably mean the triumph of imperialism, with participation in the wars of England and its song of Dreadnoughts.

In the extract given below from La Presse, British Canadians can see what the Laurier appeal to Quebec is. Read it carefully. Is there any stronger reason why Mr. Borden should get your vote? Is there any indication in this that Bourassa will cut any figure in the strong and imperialist government? This is a Liberal paper's estimate of what Laurier has done and is doing—from the Toronto Globe of Quebec.

"HE has just given a definite check to the imperialism which has threatened us for so long by MAKING EVEN ENGLAND recognize the INDEPENDENCE of OUR navy.

"HE has achieved the great work of our commercial liberty in negotiating with the United States a reciprocity treaty.

"Lastly and ABOVE ALL, he has given our race an immortal eclat, glorifying it in HIS person in the eyes of the British empire and of all Europe.

"What other statesman has done so much? Where are the works of those who are fighting him to-day? Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the age of 70, after a life devoted to his country, has the right to count upon a LAST recognition from his compatriots. The province of Quebec, in denying him, would commit an act of BLACK INGRATITUDE. It would commit a CRIME. It would be a mistake.

"The province of Quebec has nothing to gain and everything to lose by defeating Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"Who would be put in his place? It would not be Mr. Monk. It would not be Mr. Bourassa.

"THE NEW PRIME MINISTER of the Dominion WOULD BE INEVITABLY MR. R. L. BORDEN, and then in place of a navy essentially Canadian and OVER WHICH ENGLAND HAS NO RIGHT, we would see the triumph of jingo imperialism with participation in the wars of England and its song of Dreadnoughts. Then in place of the reciprocity which the Canadian farmer and workman have awaited so long, we would remain in the statu quo so strongly defended by the trusts.

"THEN IN PLACE OF A FRENCH-CANADIAN PRIME MINISTER, WE WOULD HAVE A PRIME MINISTER WHO UNDERSTANDS NOTHING OF YOUR ASPIRATIONS and who already has promised to the voice of Toronto, that is to say, to the voice of fanaticism, a preponderance in the councils of the nation.

"SHALL WE BE MORE ADVANCED IN THAT WAY, FRENCH-CANADIANS? Which of two men do you prefer to see at the head of the country after September 21st, Laurier or Borden? Let us remember this well on the day of the vote. Every vote given against Laurier is a vote given for Borden, a vote against Canadian autonomy, a vote against reciprocity, a vote against French-Canadian PRESTIGE. Let us be proud to keep at the head of Canada as long as he lives, the most illustrious of our compatriots, Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

LAVA RIVER IS RESISTLESS

Two Italian Towns Left to the Molten Rock.

River is 50 Feet High——Many Are Burned

Catania City, Sept. 15.—The 20,000 citizens of Castiglione and Francavilla turned their backs on their homes yesterday, fleeing before the advancing flood of lava from Mt. Etna. Both towns are threatened with destruction.

The discharge from the crater and new fissures increases in volume. The main stream, pouring down the northeastern side of the volcano, has made its way sluggishly about and over the foot hills toward the base, crossed the railway and invaded the valley of the Alcantara.

To-day the front, fifty feet high and a third of a mile wide, broke over a long declivity, and gathering velocity, forced the peasant dwellers into its path to make a hurried retreat. It spread throughout and burned the orange and lemon groves, and engulfing many springs in the neighborhood, cut off the water supply of several villages.

When the stream was within three miles of Castiglione and Francavilla the people collected their portable property and with their farm animals and household pets, made for the higher places.

A Youthful Burglar.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—Emile Harpin, the 19-year-old lad, who was arrested by Detectives Mercier and Fafard, charged with breaking into twenty residences, pleaded guilty to all the charges, and stated that he had no accomplices. Detective Mercier deposed that when he arrested the lad, he had 200 keys in his pocket, and when he searched his room he found $2,000 worth of jewelry. He will be sentenced by Judge Choquet on Monday.

PREMIER IS SHOT

Shooting in Russian Theatre Borders on Tragedy—Czar Was Present

Special to the Review.

Kieff, Russia, Sept. 15. — Premier Stolypin lies in the hospital in a critical condition as a result of dangerous injuries he received while attending a gala performance at the opera. Without any warning he was shot by lawyer named Bogrof, one bullet piercing his lung and liver and touching the spine, causing paralysis of the lower extremities. Another bullet wounded one of his hands. The Czar was present at the performance but no attack was made on him. The audience almost killed Bogrof on the spot.

MATRICULATE ON INSTALMENT PLAN

An Important Announcement to Young Men From the Y. M. C. A.

By virtue of a new regulation approved by the Minister of Education young men who are engaged in business have an opportunity now to secure their entrance to the University while still engaged in their every day work.

Heretofore the matriculant has been obliged to take eleven subjects at the same time, and pass in eight, and this has precluded the student whose time for study was limited from entering.

The new regulation provides that a candidate who is actually engaged in a mercantile, industrial or other occupation may present himself for one or more subjects at any July or September examination. At any such examination he will receive credit for a subject or subjects on obtaining 40 per cent in each paper, and an aggregate of 60 per cent. of the total marks assigned to each subject or subjects.

Under these conditions matriculation must be completed within four years. In order to secure credit for the subjects written the candidate immediately on receipt of his departmental statement of marks, must return the same to the Deputy Minister of Education, accompanied by a certificate from his employer.

Already a few young men of ambition have applied to the Y.M.C.A. asking that a class in matriculation be carried on this season, and the association is very anxious to do so. The cost of carrying on such a class is very high and the General Secretary, Mr. H. M. Gilchrist is at present investigating to learn whether or not it will be possible to attempt this very important work this fall and winter.

In view of the present financial condition of the association, unless some other source of revenue is discovered the class would have to be self supporting in which case it would be necessary to have at the very least 20 members in the class.

Such a class would extend over two years and probably all of the students would be able to take their matriculation at the end of the second year. This of course, would require close application to study. It would mean 10 hours a week of class work and much home study.

The subjects studied in the first year would be English literature, English composition, science, junior French, junior Latin and junior Algebra. The student would be expected to write off the first three of these subjects next July.

CLIFFORD SIFTON PREDICTS THE DOWNFALL OF LAURIER

Says That It Is Being Pressed Home To Him in Campaigning That Government Will Be Defeated—Conservative Gains in Eastern Part of Canada—Landslide Coming

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 14—Hon. Clifford Sifton, who arrived here this afternoon, predicts the downfall of the Laurier Government. In an interview he said: "As a result of my personal observations during this campaign, the fact is more and more pressed home to me that the Conservatives will be returned to power and that the Laurier Government will be defeated. This is the first public statement of such a kind that I have ever made, and I am doing this because I have faith in what is going on around the country — what I see and what others are seeing. The Conservative campaign will be one of victory. They will make considerable gains in Ontario, the Maritime Provinces and Quebec, and they will hold their own in the West."

STRATTON SAYS RECIPROCITY WOULD PUT IN JEOPARDY THE PEOPLE'S BREAD AND BUTTER

Herbert Stratton of Port Hope, Cousin of J. R. Stratton on the Stump Against Reciprocity—Says it Will Ruin Him — Couldn't Make a Living Against American Competition.

Herbert Stratton, a first cousin of J. R. Stratton, is a vegetable and fruit grower on the Lake Shore road, near Port Hope. Although a first cousin of the reciprocity champion of Peterborough, he has not hesitated to work and speak against reciprocity from the platform in that riding. At a meeting in Port Hope of Conservatives, Mr. Stratton dealt at some length with the injurious effects of reciprocity, on the fruit and vegetable growers particularly. He said it would put people's bread and butter in jeopardy.

As reported in the Port Hope Times, Mr. Stratton gave a practical talk on the injurious effects of reciprocity on his business and showed how he had been twice hit this season by American competition. He had been in the custom of selling asparagus to the Oshawa canning factory at 10 cents a pound. Six tons had been sent in from the United States, and sold at a ridiculously low rate. He could not compete with the price and make a living. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has said that reciprocity would benefit the farmers, but latterly he said it favored the consumers. The speaker said it was time to take action when people's bread and butter were in jeopardy.

Mr. Stratton told how he was getting a good price for tomatoes, but this season tomatoes from the United States flooded the Montreal market. He had sent to Montreal 24 baskets, and had only netted 3 cents each on them. He exhibited one of the American baskets, which held about twice as much as the Canadian

Mr. Stratton said that the Maryland strawberry arrived here three weeks before our earliest berry was ripe. A quantity of strawberries had been brought in this season, although the duty was 3 cents a basket. Under reciprocity, owing to the Americans being three weeks earlier, they would get the cream of the Canadian market, which was the early market, and we would get the tailings. As in the case of strawberries, so in regard to other fruit, they were able to produce cheaply, owing to favorable climatic conditions. No care was necessary in the winter, and there was no loss from frost-killing.

Canada, according to the speaker, could not compete with the American apple. Millionaires in Kansas and other States had orchards of one thousand acres in tract. The Americans wanted Jonathans, Orange Pippins and Ribstone, which our climate would not grow. The only apple that we produce that the Americans want were the Northern Spy, and they would pay more for this kind in England.

Mr. Stratton showed that in regard to fruit that owing to intense competition in the Northern States, the aim is to produce quantity rather than quality to meet local demands.

Mr. Stratton said that the Liberals were making disparaging remarks about a combine among canners. He thought the canning factories were was a great benefit to farmers and gardeners. He remembered the time when if a man had one-eighth of an acre of tomatoes most of them would rot on the grounds because there was no market.

On motion of Mr. C. A. Merrifield, seconded by Mr. James McLean, that Mr. Stratton be tendered a vote of thanks for his instructive address, of which the foregoing report is only the barest skeleton. This motion was carried by a standing vote.

Mr. Stratton said he had been a subscriber to the Rural New Yorker for ten years. It quoted clover at $2.50 per bushel, while it was selling here at about seven dollars a bushel.

CANADIANS ARE SAVED

Several Missionaries Have Reached Chung King.

Relief Expedition is on Its Way Now:

Chung-King, Sept. 15.—The revolution is fast gaining ground. It is believed that no food has entered Chengtu for many days, and probably already the besieged are on short rations. Heavy firing is reported from that quarter between the loyal garrison and the rebels, among whom there are probably many soldiers.

Among the missionaries who have arrived here in safety are the Canadians stationed at Lu Chow, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. P. Jeliffe, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ferguson and E. R. Brecken. Lu Chow is about 150 miles to the southeast of Chengtu

Relief For Chungtu.

Peking, Sept. 15.—Unpublished edicts order a large force of Wu-Cheng troops to leave immediately by the quickest route for Sze-Chuan and Tuan-Fang, director-general of the Hankow-Sze-Chuan Railway, who is expected at I-Chang to-day, to hasten the movement of the troop train. The arrested ringleaders of the rebellion include the president and vice-president of the Sze-Chuan Provincial Assembly. The latter was arrested at Hankow, whither it is believed he had journeyed with the intention of fomenting an agitation in Hupeh Province.

The relief force from Wu-Chang will take four weeks at the best to reach Chengtu and the full gravity of the situation in the capital of Sze-Chuan Province is now realized.

Chicago Labor Peace Pact.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—An agreement reached Wednesday night between rival factions in the plumbing and steamfitting will bring to an end a strike called against each other, which has prevailed nearly a year, has cost the building industries of this city millions of dollars, has entailed the murder of at least three men, the kidnapping or assassination of a fourth and the beating and maiming of more than 100 others.

The A. F. of L. convention, to be held at Atlanta, Ga., will straighten things out.

Farewell to Grey.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—The Canadian Club of Ottawa will tender Earl Grey a farewell banquet on Sept. 27 in the Parliamentary restaurant.

It is expected that the function will be attended by a majority of the men prominent in the public life of the Dominion.

KERR TRIED TRICKERY, BUT WAS BEATEN TO A FRAZZLE

Grit Candidate's Game to Get Speaking Advantage a a Boomerang—Crowd Went With Sexsmith.

F. D. Kerr turned a Stratton trick at the nominations in Norwood yesterday, but he got left, and lost both ground and votes through trying to be too clever. The Grit candidate had rented the town hall, where the nominations were to be held. When Mr. Sexsmith's name was put into nomination, there was some discussion as to how the speaking should be conducted. Mr. Kerr claimed that as he had rented the hall, he had the right to dictate what order the speakers should take, although it is the rule that the member, if standing for re-election shall have the opportunity of following the other candidate.

Mr Sexsmith refused to be forced in this high-handed manner to speak first, and although the electors sided with him, Kerr persisted.

Finally Mr. Sexsmith moved out to the bandstand in front of the hall, and the majority of the crowd moved with him. Fully seventy-five per cent. of the electors went outside to hear the Sexsmith side of affairs, leaving exactly 50 people in the hall. The cheers for Sexsmith showed which way feeling went. The candidate gave a great address on the reciprocity agreement, and was supported by Dr. Evans of Toronto, in a most able manner.

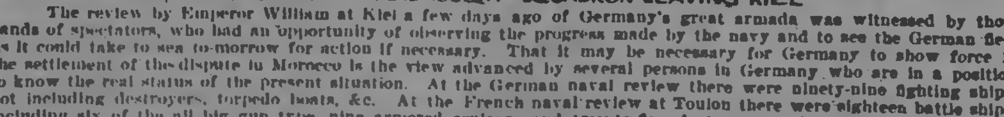
The Kerr trick meant that what Kerr had to say was heard by only a portion of his own followers, and that Sexsmith captured the nomination meeting, just as he will capture the whole riding next Thursday.

Taft on Tour.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 15.—President Taft leaves this evening for a speaking tour, during which he will cover 13,000 miles. The "swing" beginning in Boston will take him to twenty-four states and wind up in Washington on November 1. In eighteen of the states the President has addresses scheduled either at banquets or in halls and in the others he will address crowds from the rear platform of his car.

While Mr. Taft plans to avoid the more contentious political questions, and treat of reciprocity, the arbitration treaties, marriage and divorce, conservation, financial reform, the Panama Canal, reform in judicial procedure, it is likely that the exigencies of the situation will force him to devote considerable time to the tariff question.

HINTS OF WAR OVER MOROCCO AS THREE NATIONS REVIEW FLEETS



THE FIRST GERMAN DREADNOUGHT SQUADRON LEAVING KIEL

The review by Emperor William at Kiel a few days ago of Germany's great armada was witnessed by thousands of spectators, who had an opportunity of observing the progress made by the navy and to see the German fleet as it could take to sea to-morrow for action if necessary. That it may be necessary for Germany to show force in the settlement of the dispute in Morocco is the view advanced by several persons in Germany who are in a position to know the real status of the present situation. At the German naval review there were ninety-nine fighting ships, not including destroyers, torpedo boats, &c. At the French naval review at Toulon there were eighteen battle ships, including six of the all big gun type, nine armored cruisers and twenty-five destroyers and torpedo boats. At the recent British naval review at Portsmouth there were 170 war ships of all classes.

Sold Horses, But Kept Woman.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—Not content with having stolen a team of horses from a man named Mitchell at White River, Vermont, Frank Dickey, so say the police, eloped with the man's wife and came to Montreal with her after disposing of the horses in the United States before his departure.

He was living in the city with her when word was sent from White River, saying that he was believed to have come here and asking that he be arrested and held for extradition. He was located by Detective Cowan on Wednesday and having waived extradition, leaves under escort for Vermonth some time to-day.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000.

AN ELECTION ADDRESS

Mr. Stratton has issued a new address to the electorate which contains so many glaring inconsistencies and evasions that it is almost impossible to pass it over. Let us consider some of them for a few moments.

Mr. Stratton says: the reciprocity agreement does not injure or disturb any industry or factory or workman in Peterborough or elsewhere."

What about the Matthews Company which it is admitted by all will be adversely affected. Why did Mr. Matthews go to Ottawa to protest against reciprocity? How is it that the Massey-Harris Company in Brantford, the Cockshutt Plow Company, the Verity Plow Company, and six other industries are affected. This statement is unequivocally false, and a downright lie.

Mr. Stratton says: The mutual effect of freer trade in natural products and protection for our workingmen, manufacturers cannot fail of being beneficial by giving the workingmen cheaper living and the manufacturer a more prosperous home market."

The Toronto Globe says that it is not possible that the farmer will submit to sell in a free market and buy in a protected market. If the farmer must sell against American competition he will demand that in fair play, he must buy with American competition. By the way, the farmers who are voting for reciprocity are doing so because they believe prices in the United States, to be so much higher than in Canada that they will reap the advantage of better prices all round. Will this mean lowered costs of living for the workingman.

Mr. Stratton says: Reciprocity will reduce the cost of living from twenty-five to thirty per cent."

The poor farmer. He must really be going out of business, or will move to the United States, where those higher prices exist.

Mr. Stratton says: The relief to producer and consumer should be almost immediate. Nobody ever saw the cost of living increased by the removal of two food taxes."

The tax which would be abolished by Canada under present imports amounts to 40 cents a year, per head of population. Is that worth while, to bring in the American competitor, and do the workingman out of work? What is 40 cents a year when you transfer to the United States railways a lot of Canadian traffic, when you send your raw materials to the United States to be manufactured, when you invite American interference in Canadian affairs, the way it has been invited by Laurier in this election?

Mr. Stratton mentions as exhibitions of Liberal loyalty the British preference, the South African contingents, the Canadian navy.

What are the facts? The British preference arose but of no desire to help Britain, but from a desire to get even with the United States, which now the Laurier government is fawning on. The South African contingent was sent by Laurier, only when the voice of British Canada forced him, though it aroused the feeling of Quebec against him; the Canadian navy is no evidence of loyalty. The Canadian navy is merely the desire of Laurier to preserve in his hands for political purposes the right to say whether Canada shall or shall not assist Britain in time of need. The navy is a joke.

There is scarcely an item in the whole address that cannot be dissected, and shown to be either false, or misleading, or suppressing facts, or playing on the ignorance of people with regard to the real conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The end of Laurier draws nigh. A few more days until the Borden government is being formed.

The official dog catcher of Denver says he has been bitten two thousand times. Is he a native of these parts?

Hon Clifford Sifton says that the people of Canada will have to sleep on their arms if they wish to maintain their national independence.

The election in Thunder Bay and Rainy River has been postponed until Oct. 12th, by the returning officer. There is great indignation at this in the riding, because the Conservatives say that they had the Liberals beaten by two thousand votes.

The Stratton organ is being distributed all over the city, but, the votes for its base and reciprocity are not being manufactured in overtime in any of our flourishing manufacturing institutions. The votes were decided some time ago, and it is now too late to change them.

William German is returned in Welland by acclamation. He is the Liberal who opposed reciprocity in parliament and in his constituency. The county of Welland is close to Buffalo—that great American market—but in Welland the Liberals could not get a reciprocity candidate who could stand against German. Surely no greater evidence of the strength of anti-reciprocity feeling could be given.

Rev D. C. Hossack, the independent candidate in South Toronto, who was running on an anti-reciprocity, Ne Temere platform, has dropped out. Hossack was wise. He had no chance of election himself, and merely weakened the cause of the anti-reciprocity candidate, Claude Macdonnell. In our method of handling politics, third candidates do not amount to much beyond serving to weaken one or the other of the regulars.

The nomination of W. F. Nickle, M. L. A. in Kingston, practically means handing that riding over to the Conservatives. The Conservative newspaper in Kingston, the Standard was violently in favor of reciprocity for a long time, but Mr. Nickle is against it, and the Conservatives there are against it. The Standard is in a peculiar position, but it got itself there through its own lack of foresight and in being out of touch with Canadian opinion. It is satisfactory to know that the Conservatives will win the seat without any particular help from the Standard as regards reciprocity.

Mr. Stratton is circulating dodgers containing his remarks at Bensfort regarding hwat he is pleased to term the "Turn-coat Tactics of J. H. Burnham." We don't know that this is at all likely to hurt Mr Burnham's prospects in the election. The issue to-day is too clearly defined before the people. Mr. Burnham says that he is perfectly friendly now with Roman Catholics as well as with Protestants. He has no enmity towards them in the least, and anyone who knows his views, knows this to be true. These remarks are quite in keeping with the brand of campaign arguments handed out against Mr. Burnham—who, by the way has not made personal abuse of Mr Stratton the keynote of his election addresses.

The Bourassa scare won't work with the British imperialists. In the first place, Bourassa is merely fighting the devil with fire—meeting Laurier on the same battleground of appeal to creed and race prejudice. The Nationalists don't want any navy, Mr. Borden is not in favor of a Canadian navy, Mr. Borden was in favor of a straight contribution to Great Britain's navy, which would in no way involve Canadian autonomy and would not necessitate constant care looking after cast-off vessels of the admiralty. For practical utility to the empire Mr. Borden's plan was of far greater service to the empire, and it would have avoided giving rise to the wild outburst of feeling in Quebec that Laurier has caused by his effort to steer between the rocks. Laurier has merely himself to blame for the whole business.

W. T. GRENFELL TO BOY SCOUTS

The Labrador Explorer's Watchword, Learn to Keep Your Eyes Open For Usefulness

Dr. W. T. Grenfell, of Labrador, wrote this letter to the Boy Scouts:

"I was reading to-day a letter from a man called Tertullian. It was written to his school, and the letter is nearly eighteen hundred years old.

"I expect you will hardly believe it, but the school was really and truly to prepare the scholars to meet martyrdom bravely, and not to flinch at the suffering.

"Here is a thing he says: 'An overfed body may be good for the beasts, but it is no use to God.'

"A wink is, or should be, as good as a word to a Scout, so you know what I mean.

"If you are to be plucky and brave, and 'worth while' when trouble comes, you must keep yourself hard and fit.

"Some silly fellows think that religion is all cant, but before we laugh, let us show that we can do better than those poor, brave Christians in Nero's time, who went to the schools for the martyrs.

"In Labrador we have got no penny blood-curdling novels and five editions of a newspaper a day. Lots of our boys can't read and write. But they can endure hardness like good soldiers.

"Last winter one boy of fifteen was left with two teams of huge Eskimo wolfish dogs, while the doctor and his men travelled off to kill some deer.

"He was warned not to move, or they would possibly be lost. As it happened, the men got parted by heavy snowstorms and only found a house fifty miles away on the third day after. They at once sent a gang of men to look for the boy. Do you think he had run away all that long time, and during those dark, cold nights? Not a bit of it! He was just where they had left him. That's the kind of scout the world wants and God wants, too—not a man to talk a lot, but one who is loyal and can be counted on.

"If you want a good hymn to stir the blood and pluck of the youngest Scouts, I would suggest one that begins, 'Only an armor bearer,' and the refrain is:

"Surely my Captain may depend on me, Though but an armor bearer I may be."

"He may not be big, but a Scout must be faithful, and he's as good as ten men.

"I've had to look old Father Death in the face once or twice, and there is nothing in the world that helps you to keep cool and give him the slip like not having the skeleton of an impure life to weaken you and trouble you. The best thing in the world isn't gold and silver, or food and clothing—no, not by a very long way.

"If I left a watchword with you, brother Scouts, it would be, 'Learn to keep your eyes open and to see chances where you can be useful.' You'll have a life then and a career behind you that kings will envy in vain."—Ex.

NEW USE FOR GUINEA-PIGS

They Clear a Lawn of Grass and Weeds Like a Mower

A novel experiment has been tried in England in which guinea-pigs were substituted for the lawn-mower and weed-killer on private lawns and golf grounds. These little animals clear a lawn of grass and weeds as closely as if a lawn-mower had been run over it. A low wire barrier is arranged around the lawn and a number of guinea-pigs are turned into the enclosure, or a passage made from their hutch to the lawn. According to an English paper, the animals attack at once all the worst weeds—the plantains first, then the dandelions and daisies. These broad-leaved plants, which no mowing-machine will touch, are killed by the persistent cutting of the guinea-pigs' teeth. When they have finished the weeds, which are broad-leaved and succulent, they proceed to the grass.—From Our Dumb Animals.

LIGHTLY TAXED TOWN

Walkerville still maintains its position as the most lightly taxed town in Canada, the rate for the year being fixed at thirteen mills. Last year's rate was 11 6-10 mills. The slight increase now is due to the cost of building new sewers and an increase in public school estimates.

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—Last Thursday night Walter Leyden's barn in Louth Township was burned, and John Stanton, a well-known resident here, was arrested, because several witnesses swore they saw him in the neighborhood. Yesterday he had his preliminary trial. He declared he was in Toronto Thursday night, and a well-known citizen says he came home on the boat with him Friday evening.

The Least Fuel. The Most Satisfaction

When You Burn the Coal See That You Get the Value

It requires no argument to prove that the range you can use every part of, at the same time, is the range that will give you the full return for the fuel you burn. On the

HAPPY THOUGHT

Range you can use the oven and the top of the stove at the same time. While ironing you can have a batch of biscuits in the oven, and when baking you can prepare dinner without cooling the oven. This is the only way to keep down fuel bills and the only true range economy. The Patent Damper regulates the heat so that it can be used on any part of the range or on all the range.

Everywhere the Happy Thought, by its many labor saving devices, is lightening the work of the housekeepers. Its efficiency is the result of the care taken to construct it and it amply justifies anything said in its favor by those who have used it.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

George got a look into "the ram pasture" when he passed down the corridor. It was a bare room, with field beds on the floor. Some of the men were lugged there and thrown upon the beds to sleep it off. Most of them were sufficiently awake to eat supper in the dining room, with its tin dishes, its bare benches and tables covered with oil-cloth. George managed to eat there, too. And he was careful to get a seat as far away from Bill Kyle as possible. That gentleman was getting on to his nerves. That Mr. Kyle went promptly to sleep when they retired together in the one room available in the house, and snored continuously and kept him awake did not seriously trouble George. Mr. Kyle's coffee-grinder noises were preferable to his line of conversation.

In the morning, they were away early over the rough road, in a rough train, and with their rough crew.

There was one battered car for passengers. It had benches without backs. It played "snap-the-whip" at the end of a train made up of log carriers — skeleton cars, loosely shackled.

George had hard work to edge himself into the car. It was packed to the doors. There had been important new arrivals on the train that passed through Skiticock in the early hours of the morning. These were the two bands of music that Governor Harriss had ordered. Their gay uniforms constrasted strangely with the rough clothes of the woodsmen. Governor Harriss marshaled them pompously, and lavished much attention on a gentleman whom he introduced as "Squire Thurlow, orator of this solemn occasion, gents." Lastly, the master of ceremonies had careful eye out for a huge box that was set across one end of the car. He consented finally to allow men to sit on it, but impressed on all that Cornelius Corran's thousand-dollar coffin was inside that box and must be respected accordingly.

Toward a trunk that had been loaded on board the car, Governor Harriss did not display as much respect. He ordered it to be taken off.

"I'm running this occasion, and we need all the room," he said. "And who in the name of the wall-eyed Horace is it that's carryin' a trunk into the woods, anyway? Trunks don't belong in the woods."

"That's my trunk," stated George. "And I want it taken along to-day." He was thinking of the precipitate Niles and Smart, and realized that if he managed to catch up with them at Corran-cache they would not be inclined to wait another day for the trunk that contained his woods' equipment. He had a wordy battle with the governor, and prevailed only because the men who sat on the trunk had anchored it, and did not want to give up their seats.

When the train started away, scores of men were stradding the spreaders of the log cars at the risk of their necks. Another score clung to the roof of the passenger car.

There seemed to be a general hankering for music in the crowd, and men pleaded with the bands until they were hoarse. But the men with the instruments could not lift their elbows. Then, the little group on Cornelius Corran's coffin decided to try their voices in old Doberry's "Come All Ye." It was familiar enough, so that all joined the third time it was sung, and it furnished melody for most of the trip, except for the intervals, when the choristers refreshed themselves from their bottles.

George had those words dinned into his ears so many times that he could never forget them:

Oh-h-, come all ye bean-fed larrigan lads
And listen unto me.
I'll sing a song to the tune we played
With a cross-cut on a tree.
When we whooped along, a hundred strong,
With a hotfoot down the middle:
A-dancin' wide and a-kickin' high
To the tune o' the gashin' fiddle.
Slivers, and sawdust, and swagon
stew,
Rip-fa-duddy, we're Corran's crew!

"You see, son," growled Kyle, in George's ear, "they ain't forgettin' old Cornelius in this country. I can see that you're a pretty good pussy-foot, and know how to keep your mouth shut as well, but you've got to play smoother than the big bosses up Montreal way realize, if you're goin' to get away with any of the plunder that Cornelius left behind."

It was a persistency in an insulting belief that stirred George, sick with sleeplessness, and harried by the din of voices in that stifling pen, to curse him soulfully.

"You'll do for what they want of you, I reckon," indorsed Mr. Kyle cordially, after listening. "I can see that you're hidin' quite a lot of brimstone under a pretty smooth shell."

The forester plunged into the press, and forced his way apart from his tormentor; and the men whose feet he trod upon, swore behind his stalwart back.

It was respite after agony when that sluggish serpent of a train wormed its way out of the woods and jangled down into the broad, river valley where Corran-cache huddled in its clearing. He burst out of the car among the early ones, struggling as one struggles to come to the surface of the water.

He narrowly missed being flattened by his own trunk. First of the baggage, as though it contaminated the car, it came out of the side door like a projectile. It was plain that the man who threw it had the full strength of his convictions that trunks did not belong in the woods. It struck on one corner, and its seams started with protesting squeal.

"Got a school ma'am on board?" demanded the station agent of the crowd that came flocking out of the car door, each man with his stuffed mealsack on his shoulder. The agent was patting the tunk. In his sudden little panic of embarrassment, the forester hurried up the platform toward the station. It was relief to get away from those grinning faces. He would claim his despised trunk when they had scattered. The agent up ended it, jounced it along on its corners in a few emphatic revolutions, and then started to drag it. A sprinkling trail of some black substance that issued from a broken corner marked its course.

One citizen who had early noticed that trunk to scoff at it was among the last to leave the car, his legs not being of the surest, that day. He espied the trunk departing. Then, his eyes followed back along that black trail that ended at his feet. He picked up a pinch, eyed it, smelled at it. Being still in doubt, but mumbling certain suspicions, he scratched a match and dropped it upon a considerable deposit of the black stuff that the trunk had shed at its impact on the platform.

The experimenter's suspicions were confirmed.

The black stuff "flashed" with a vicious hiss, and fire ran along the trail.

"Powder!" yelled the man who had convinced himself.

The station agent saw the chasing serpent of the blaze just in time to throw himself over the edge of the platform and duck his head. There was a breathless instant, every eye in Kyle's crew on the trunk; and then the fateful piece of baggage exploded "Erupted" might be the better word. Never were the passenger's secrets of property so instantly opened to the world.

Following the muffled "boof!" of the explosion, the air was alive with belongings. Blazing shirts took sudden flight, and looped themselves over the telegraph wires. Clothing alighted on the log cars and smoked and smoldered. Men dodged mysterious missiles that whizzed past, and ran and recovered them, finding them to be brushes and razors and toilet articles, of whose nature the simple habits of the woods had not informed the finders.

They came bringing these back to George, who stood staring at this wreck in a state of mind that combined astonishment and ferocity.

A certain tall man made the most notable capture. He had been lounging against the side of the station when the train came in. He saw a pair of hunting boots coming his way. They were tied together by the lacings, and revolved about each other in their flight. The tall man stuck up one gaunt arm and picked them out of the air by the lacings. The owner was standing beside him, but the captor made no move to return the shoes.

Rushing Away From the U. S.

New York, Sept. 15.—Steamship men, and those who study industrial conditions, are watching with interest the outgoing tide of steerage passengers. Already the number for the year exceeds by 75,000 the number for 1910. During the next three months the tide will be swelled by the great army of laborers who return each year to their homes in Southern Europe to await again the coming of warm weather.

No good reason has yet been assigned for the present extensive movement in the steerage.

Not since 1908 have so many aliens departed from the port in the same time. In that year conditions were unusual, for it was a period of unrest in the financial world.

Steamship men believe that the movement must forecast a reduction of labor by some of the great employers.

Don't Want Girls to Leave.

Basse Terre, Guadeloupe, Sept. 15.—The emigration of natives to be employed as servants in Canada has aroused popular indignation. Yesterday the commissary of police prevented the embarkment of six girls, who were under age. The steamer Korona Wednesday night refused to take on board seventeen other servants engaged for Canadian points.

When the would-be emigrants left the pier they were hooted and chased by a great crowd.

Desperado at Bay.

CRADLE OF METHODISM

Old Historic Structure Near Picton Will Be Preserved

The historic Methodist chapel at Hay Bay, near Picton, has been taken over for future preservation. This was the first church built in Upper Canada. It was erected in the summer of 1792, under the direction of Wm. Losee, pioneer Methodist minister in Canada, the first itinerant Methodist preacher. It was enlarged and rebuilt in 1834, and was used until 1860, since when it has fallen into disuse. The last General Conference, however, voted to have this cradle of Methodism brought back and preserved as a relic. In 1860 the church was sold for $50 to be used as a granary.

Dr. Carman, Superintendent of the Methodist Church, was the speaker of the day when the old church was formally brought back to Methodism. "Here is a church, the mother of them all," he declared. "The seed sown here in times gone by has borne an abundant harvest. It is not only in the church, but in the county and its citizenship. Near this place is the ruins of the homestead of Sir John Macdonald." Dr. Carman sketched scenes from the late Premier's lifework for Canada, relating much oof interest pertaining to his early life. "Humble enough now, but then a cathedral of Methodism" was the description Dr. Carman gave of the building, which is a great square frame structure. Inside are the original rafters and huge timbers characteristic of pioneer life. "It is expected," he said, "that this will be a veritable Mecca of Methodism, here on the shores of Hay Bay, the scene of the primal settlement of Canada."

Three collection boxes used in the beginning were the only original furnishings. The pulpit and pews have been destroyed. Hand-wrought nails out of the old beams were distributed as souvenirs.

DEATH OF A VETERAN

Colonel Bog, Picton, was the Father of the 16th Regiment

Lieut.-Colonel Bog, "Picton's Grand Old Man," who died recently at the age of 85, was the father of the 16th Regiment. He was born in Montreal on December 18, 1826. Col. Bog left Montreal in 1836 to live in Prescott. Here, as an eleven-year-old lad, he witnessed the Battle of the Windmill, one of the most stirring events of the Rebellion of 1837-38. Since 1842 Col. Bog's home had been in Picton. In December, 1862, he was instrumental in raising the first company of volunteers forming the nucleus for the subsequent 16th Battalion. In 1865, at the close of the American Civil War, for the purpose of quieting the disorders and troubles arising from the St. Albans raid, a company of the 16th, under Major Bog, was ordered to the frontier and stationed at Hemmingford, Que., for several months. Col. Bog was out with the battalion during the Fenian Raid in 1866. On the retirement of Col. Ross from the battalion Col. Bog was given command and served for eight years as commander. He was retired in 1894, retaining rank, after 32 years' service. He held Queen Victoria's decoration for long service and the Fenian Raid medal.

ARCHDEACON'S BROAD VISION

Hudson Bay Express Soon to Leave Toronto His Prediction

Archdeacon Renison of Moose Fort, Hudson Bay, expressed the opinion that natives should be employed for the purpose of conservation. The Indian, says the archdeacon, is a post graduate in the university of nature. The signs of the trees and the silent voices of the night have their meaning for him, and therefore the native is more fitted for the task of forest ranger than is the graduate of some city university.

That the day is not far distant when a Hudson Bay express will be leaving the Union Station, Toronto, is the opinion of Archdeacon Renison, who has a wonderful story to tell of railway development in the north. He considers that the water-power facilities of Northern Ontario are second to none on the continent. The Abitibi, the Frederickhouse, the Metagami, and the Grand Hogg Rivers, each having many fine waterfalls, are within fifty miles of each other. On this account alone, the archdeacon believes that there is a great future in store for Northern Ontario.

IF YOU ARE SICK YOU CONSULT A SPECIALIST

WHY ?

Because he has made a special study of the disease you are suffering from, and from the knowledge gained by years of experience knows just what treatment you require.

If you are going into a law-suit, you do the same—consult the best lawyer you can get, and find it cheap in the end.

Now, when you are considering taking Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, do you not think it would pay you to consult one who has had many years experience in that profession, and whose knowledge would be of use to you in enabling you to get the best value for your premiums, with the most liberal policies and absolute guarantees?

If you want what is best in Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, you can get it by calling at, or phoning to

BUSINESS ABILITIES

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir—Mr. Burnham is attacked by Mr. Stratton in last night's Examiner to the limit. But when Mr. Stratton says that Mr. Burnham has no business experience, he ignores the fact that Mr. Burnham managed an estate of over one hundred thousand dollars for many years in a most successful manner.

Some of Mr. Stratton's ventures, such as the Shovel Works, indicate great business ability—I don't, think.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF THE NEW BOSTON CAFE

The handsome and brilliantly lighted Boston Cafe opened its doors last night for what was a pronounced successful first night. The efforts of Mr. N. Douros, in giving the city a thoroughly modern and up-to-date cafe won instant approval and the large staff of obliging waiters were kept busy till a late hour.

There is something interesting about the Boston Cafe. The show window, with its dressings of appetizing bill of fare edibles, attracts at once. The interior is spotlessly clean, but only in keeping with the first law of the management. Music and flowers assisted in the gay scene last night, Mr. Cyriel Davey, presiding at the piano.

The Boston Cafe is now ready to cater to all demands of the busy public. Full course meals, in the dining hall and lunches at the counter will be served, with the best of satisfaction.

WAR OF THE ROSES IS DECLARED AT THE Y.W.C.A.

First Social Gathering of the Season — Campuign for Members.

The very spirit of good will and welcome radiated from every room and from every face of the one hundred members and friends of the Y.W.C.A. who met on Tuesday evening for the first social gathering after vacation.

The large, beautiful rooms were attractively decorated with rich autumn foliage and flowers, the big grate fire in the reception corridor adding to the warmth of the welcome tendered Miss Shuttleworth, the new associate secretary, who comes to her new field with both training and experience.

After a pleasant social hour the following program was enjoyed:

Piano Solo—Miss Leslie Horner.
Vocal Solo—Miss Ruth Dawson
Reading—Miss Jean Jackson
Vocal Solo—Miss Ida Sanderson.
Recitation—Miss Kathleen Martin.
Miss Helen Davies accompanist.

The real business, however, of the evening commenced with the close of the musical and literary program, when Miss McCalla presented the new class schedule for the year, which appealed to all classes, having been arranged for in dressmaking, shirtwaist, cooking, home nursing and home hygiene, with a weekly evening with the English novelists and a full schedule of gymnasium classes, also weekly club meetings and social ohuras.

After the comprehensive and attractive program for the year had been clearly presented, war was declared. This war is nothing more or less than a keen membership campaign for five hundred new members. Four teams have been arranged, the Red, White, Yellow and Pink Rose teams. The campaign will be pushed vigorously and enthusiastically for seventeen days, the contest to close at 9 o'clock on the evening of September 30th.

There is no age limit. Anyone from ten to eighty years of age may become a member by the payment of $1.00; juniors, 50 cents. Give your name and get into the game.

THEATRICAL

MARKS' BROS.

The Ernie Marks Stock Co. played the great western drama, "The Girl and the Gambler," to a large house at the Grand last night. Mr. Marks took the leading role as Gewwhittaker Hay, the ordinary type of a henpecked husband. He has surrounded himself by a troupe of clever artists and their offering last night was received with great enthusiasm.

Between acts specialties by Franklin A. Brooks, the De Lunas, Lida Gardner and others kept the audience amused. Franklin A. Brooks in his little song hit, entitled "Love, Marriage, Divorce" was probably received with the most approval. He tells some funny stories.

To-night the latest New York success, "The Bowery Girl," will be presented.

"Baby Mine"

Concerning "Baby Mine," which will be seen for the first time at the Grand on Monday next, 25th, the London Telegraph, which many people consider the best newspaper in England, says as follows: "There was no doubt about "Baby Mine" last night. Laughter, which at first was sporadic and intermittent, grew and grew till no one attempted to hold out against it, and the theatre quaked. The convulsions were at their loudest till and after the curtain was down." That was the verdict on Baby Mine, the comedy which Mr. Weedon Grossmith has brought to the Vaudeville Theatre. Is there need to say any more about it? Sometimes, no doubt, having laughed, you repent when you remember what you laughed at, and feel it a duty to warn others from going to do likewise. 'Baby Mine" is a play which you may enjoy without afterwards feeling that you were a fool. It is ferociously ridiculous.

ELECTORS OF SMITH HEARD THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE

Good Meeting at Milburn's Schoolhouse — Bourassa's Part in Canadian History.

The Conservative candidate, Mr. Burnham, had another good meeting at Milburn's school in Smith last night. He spoke first and was followed by Mr. Kendry.

MR. BURNHAM.

Mr. Burnham said that speculation was general as to what part Bourassa would play in the future history of Canada. One thing was certain. He and his large French following were likely to make trouble. They were making it already. If Bourassa wrests Quebec from Sir Wilfrid or even breaks up the almost solid vote 58 to 11 now given for Sir Wilfrid by Quebec, then it will be wholly impossible for Sir Wilfrid to continue to lead the Liberal part. In fact it will quite plainly be necessary for the Liberal party to join hands with the Conservatives if they are to prevent Canada falling into the hands control of Bourassa. Mr. Borden has beyond question the strength of character and ability to lead a Canadian party opposed to forces now trying to break up both the Liberal party and Canada. An alarming feature of the present contest, is the appeal to race prejudice everywhere being made in Quebec. The cry is "support Bourassa and the French race" on the one hand and "support Laurier and French control" on the other. There can be no doubt that the immense advantage to the French race of a French premier of Canada is apparent. It is even better for French Canada than a Bourassa for what can Bourassa do but split things up unless he leads the Liberal party. There is one thing sure and that is that it will take strength outside of Quebec to keep Quebec, under Bourassa or Laurier, from being the one dominant power in Canada as she is now. There should be no one sectional dominant power. It should be Canadians, one and all. It is only necessary to take a good square look at things to see where we are. In 16 years the whole aspect of Canadian affairs has changed. A united almost solid Quebec will always beat a divided Ontario. Will Quebec divide? It is not our fear. It is our only hope.

MR. KENDRY.

Mr. Kendry, who was cordially received, said that he could not make a great many remarks as Mr. Burnham had said everything that need be said. He would, however, devote his time particularly to two things, the first being the attempt of the United States trusts to get control of Canada's resources and products and the other, the utter unfairness of asking the farmer to sell in a free market and buy in a protected market. At the present time he said Americans were groaning under the domination of the trusts. The state of the public mind in the United States in view of the immense falling off in trade and the severe problem of unemployment, was as everybody knows, bordering on revolution. How could anybody suggest it being of benefit to Canada, for us to put ourselves in the power of a country in such a condition.

Canada was happy, prosperous, free and British and long may she remain so. Prolonged applause.

The meeting was brought to a close with cheers.

COLLEGIATE GIRLS HAVE ATHLETIC ASPIRATIONS

Miss Cuffe Gets Office of Secretary by Acclamation What They Do.

The Girl's Athletic Society of the Collegiate Institute, held the annual election of officers yesterday evening and the following will hold office to the coming year.

President—Miss E. MacNamara.

Vice-President—Miss G. Moore.

Secretary—Miss Estella Cuffe (acclamation.)

Treasurer—Miss Mabel Brown.

This society in the local institute has been gaining in popularity every season. The girls throughout the school are becoming interested and are uniting to make it the best of its kind in the city.

The teachers are encouraging the pupils to take part in some recreation out of school and by joining a society of this nature they have ample opportunity. In the fall arrangements are made with the Y.W.C.A. whereby there can be an inter-collegiate basketball series among the girls. Paper chases are also a feature. In the winter there is a hockey schedule drawn up and the members get out and chase the rubber a couple of times a week.

The weight of evidence seems to indicate that none of us know as much as the law allows.

Big Barge Wrecked.

Cornwall, Sept. 14.—The Montreal Transportation Co.'s big barge Winnipeg, Captain Nelson Mallette of Cornwall in command, while in tow of the tug Thompson, struck on a rock in the Rapid du Plat, and punctured her side Tuesday night, while on her way to Montreal with 1,500 tons of coal coal for the Montreal Steel Works. The Winnipeg loaded her cargo at Ashtabula, Ohio. The tugs Thompson and Seymour made an effort to pull the barge into shallow water, but before they succeeded she sank in 35 feet of water. The accident happened about a quarter of a mile west of the head of the Farran's Point Canal. The captain and crew escaped with all their belongings. Captain Mallette has been navigating the St. Lawrence for 40 seasons, and this is the first time he has been in a wreck.

Woman's Brave Deed.

Toronto, Sept. 24. Mrs. A. Lowe, a widow, living at 90 Markham street, jumped into the lake at Sunnyside yesterday, and saved the life of a little girl, who tumbled into the water while playing on the sea wall there. Several men passively watched her heroic act.

Mrs. Lowe happened to be walking along the shore at the time. She and the child were pulled from the water by onlookers. The name of the child is not known, but the statement that the mother offered a check for $500 to the rescuer is authority for the belief that the little one's parents are wealthy.

TALK ON PITCHERS

Taking Man Out of Box Is Sometimes Too Abrupt

Now and then a little curiosity is expressed as to whether the modest pitchers obtain work enough to keep them in good condition. This doesn't refer to their physical condition, but to their pitching condition.

The custom has grown upon managers to shift pitchers in a hurry if they happen to be batted hard when the game is close. For that reason almost all ball teams are carrying more pitchers in comparison with the actual work that they do on a ball field than they ever did.

If occasionally one of the pitchers who happens to be hit hard were to be kept in the game instead of being sent to the bench it might be that the team would rally as quickly behind him as it would behind a fresh pitcher, and it has frequently been demonstrated in baseball that a pitcher may be hit hard in one inning and after that hold a team to almost nothing.

The policy which makes for almost immediate retirement of a pitcher when he happens to be batted hard, also makes for the destruction of his confidence. Probably this would have less bearing upon an old timer than it would on a youngster.

McGraw very frequently is slow to change a pitcher who happens to be hit, and it is largely for the reason that he wants the pitcher to have every opportunity to help himself out of the trouble into which he has fallen. There are days when the best pitchers are less effective than is usually the case when they are in the box.—Exchange.

LACROSSE SPECIALISTS

A Test in Toronto Which Illustrates the Value of "Stars"

A good goal-tend in lacrosse has always been a strong factor in the winning of lacrosse championships, and while the following story does not form this idea, yet it is a strong illustration of the fact that a player may be a star in one position and yet, with all his skill, be unable to make good in another. At Toronto Island the other night Kinsman and Manager-Captain Querrie, of the Tecumsehs, were arguing as to whether a goalkeeper or a home player had the advantage, resulting in a wager by Roy Kinsman that in five shots he could score more goals than Charlie Querrie. The chief took him up, and the team adjourned to the field, where a net was put up and Querrie went into goal. The shooting distance was only twenty feet out, and Kinsman only got two out of the five on the net, but one of them scored. Querrie got all of his five dead on and fast, but Kinsman blocked them all, and collected the ten-spot.

A YEAR OF RECORDS

The Best Time in Many Fields Had Been Moved On

The year 1911 will long be remembered in the annals of sport, and by many it is considered the greatest year that has ever been experienced by athletes and contestants of every nature. Already some forty records have been established, and as there is yet considerable of the sporting season to run these may be yet lowered or added to. Every branch of sport is represented, including horse-racing, yachting, automobiling, skating, walking, skiing, bowling, billiards, swimming and track and field events. The present crop of athletes, it is considered, is placing records on a plane where they will not be disturbed for years to come.

FAST CANADIAN STALLION

Hal B. Jr., 2.03, Is Now Well in the Lead

Hal. B. Jr., 2.03, is now the fastest pacing stallion ever foaled in Canada. He was not only bred in Canada, but has received all his education in this country, and by an out and out Canuck, Jimmy Easson, of Stratford. Last year Hal. B. Jr. went through the half-mile track meetings without defeat, and he finished up the season by beating a band of free-for-all horses, including Major Brino and the other cracks, at Akron, O. During the past winter he was raced on the ice, but was beaten a couple of races by the "queen of the half-milers," Jennie W., 2.04½. Still, in justice to the horse, it must be said that he was not in the best condition possible, as Easson underrated the class of horses he would have to meet, and did not get his charge up to concert pitch.

POLICE COURT

Blacklister Not Particular as to Extent of Punishment

Another blacklister was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge laid by License Inspector Stewart, of having been drunk while on the prohibited list. The accused was only placed on the list on Sept. 1st of this year. He could only hold out against liquor fifteen days. His case was enlarged.

He was served with his summons yesterday morning. Previously Mr. Stewart visited him and found him in bed at ten o'clock, with his boots and other apparel on, and a flask of whiskey beside him.

When the constable served him and inquired where he had procured the liquor, he replied that he wouldn't get anybody into trouble. He was reminded then that a man in Lindsay had been fined $15 and given three months in jail for not disclosing where he procured whiskey. The defendant replied that he didn't care if he got six months.

In the witness box the prisoner that he gave a man whom he did not know 25 cents to buy him a flask.

THE USUAL DOSE.

James Duffy, a young man was arrested yesterday for acting in a disorderly manner on the street. When he was placed in the cells he tore the bench up and tried to raise a disturbance. He pleaded guilty and was fined only $5.75.

TEACHING THE INDIANS

A Model Colony of Redskins in Northern British Columbia

One of the Indian colonies in the northern part of British Columbia has a population of about 100. Each Indian family has a separate house and garden or small farm, which is cultivated to the fullest extent and presents the most prosperous appearance. In addition the Salvation Army has established a sawmill, operated by water power, with a capacity of 5,000 feet per day. It is manned entirely by the Indians and turning out about 3,000 feet of dressed lumber per day. The profits of the mill's operation go to the Indians after a small deduction is made to pay for the cost of laying down the plant. About 200 acres are cleared and cultivated, and the whole colony maintain themselves with the aid of produce raised, the mill proceeds and other sources of revenue in prosperous circumstances. Recently a plough was introduced, and the whole village turned out to see it in operation, and each man wanted his garden ploughed in the same manner. Excellent social conditions obtain. Small fruits and vegetables of all kinds are grown in profusion. Cows and poultry are being introduced this year, and generally the whole plan is to educate the Indian in the white man's mode of life and teach him his manner of subsistence, and marked success has so far attended the effort.

HIS BUSY DAY

"Work!" exclaimed Jones, after a particularly hard day at the office. "Don't talk to me of work! What do you know about it, pray?"

Stay-at-Home Smith smiled thoughtfully. "Well, I know just a little bit," he said. "For instance, since I rose this morning I've put down a linoleum, laid three carpets, papered four rooms, set up a stove, swept out the hall—"

"My dear boy!" cried Jones, compassionately.

"—mended a chair," continued Smith, "made a couple of beds, set the table thrice, washed up the things afterwards, shifted a piano and a chest of drawers, and hung nine pictures!"

"Poor old chap!" gasped Jones, "Did your wife make you do all that?"

Woodstock, Sept. 14.—Two Pullman cars attached to the Chicago-Montreal express, east bound, due here at 5.25 a.m. yesterday, jumped the track two miles west of Ingersoll while running at a high rate of speed.

Both cars were swung across the tracks, and a complete blockade of the line was on for several hours. A number of passengers were in their berths and some were thrown out into the aisles, but beyond a severe shaking up and a few bruises, no one appears to have been hurt.

CANDIDATES SELECTED

Last Week of Campaign Is Now on in Earnest.

All the Ridings in the Country Except the Few Deferred Ones Have Named Their Champions Amid Scenes of Enthusiasm For Anti-Reciprocity Forces—W. M. German Is the Only Acclamation Member.

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Nominations were held all over Canada yesterday at noon amid scenes of enthusiasm on both sides and thus was ushered in the last week of one of the hottest campaigns in recent years. The remarkable thing is that in all the ridings in Canada only one seat is granted by acclamation, that of W. M. German, the Liberal anti-reciprocity candidate in Welland. Every Government seat in Quebec is being contested either by a Nationalist or a Conservative.

The candidates now lined up for the polls are as follows:

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the "secret" method of making such trade agreements, whereby citizens and even members of parliament are denied the right to make effectual protest against the terms, before ratification.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian workingmen.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FIRE DEPARTMENT WILL GIVE EXHIBITION AT FAIR

All Equipment to be Shown To-night—Fire, Water and Light Committee Met.

The Fire, Water and Light committee met at the fire station last night to inspect the new uniforms of the firemen.

There were present His Worship Mayor Morrow, Ald. Morgan, Metheral, Graham, Kernaghan and acting clerk F. Adams.

Chief Howard had the men lined up in dormitory, and after the committee examined the work of Mr. George Ball, the tailor, adjournment was made to the chief's office. Mr. Ball was to get a cheque for his account on the certification of the chairman. The chief's suit has not been completed yet.

At the request of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial exhibition, the fire department will give an exhibition turn-out to-night. All the apparatus will be utilized.

Ald. Morgan and Chief Howard leave on Saturday for the Fire Chief's convention at Milwaukee. For two days at the close of the convention they will be the guests of the civic officials of Chicago, where they will attend the International Municipal Congress. When the convention and congress are over Ald. Morgan and Miss Morgan and Chief Howard and Mrs. Howard will take a few holidays, when they will visit one of the largest poultry towns in the world, in southern Indiana. After visiting Kentucky they will return to Chicago and Detroit for a few days, from there Ald. Morgan and Miss Morgan will return to Peterborough, and Chief Howard and Mrs. Howard will go to London, Ont., for a few days.

The committee wished the officials a pleasant and profitable journey.

WM. ADAMS NOT SERIOUSLY INJURED BY DESPERADO

Is a Brother of Mr. Frank Adams, City Treasurer—Was After Kidnapper.

That the newspaper reports of his injuries were exaggerated, is the telegram which was received this morning by Mr. Frank Adams, city treasurer, from his brother, in Snowflake, Man., Mr. Wm. Adams, who took part in the chase after Henry B. Wilson, the desperate character who kidnapped Miss Price, a young school teacher, of Riverdale, and held her a prisoner in the woods.

Mr Wm. Adams is the proprietor of a large hotel at Snowflake, and has been in the west about sixteen years.

Press despatches yesterday stated that he was seriously injured, when Wilson turned and fired on his pursuers.

The telegram is in answer to one sent yesterday by Mr. Frank Adams,

MERITORIOUS PROGRAM OF PETERBORO FAIR; DIRECTORS ASK FOR HEARTY PATRONAGE

Last Night's Entertainment the Best in History of the Exhibition — Thrilling Feats by Acrobatic Artists—What's on the Bill for Saturday.

The crowds which filed away from the fair grounds at the conclusion of last evening's performance were thoroughly satisfied, and highly delighted with the class of entertainment that had been provided for their benefit and amusement. Everything glided off as billed, with clock work precision and although the midway was not actually thronged, there was yet an attendance that was satisfactory and greatly encouraging. Undoubtedly judging by the splendid start the fair this year will establish a record success.

THE SPIELER ON DECK

All the usual accompaniments of a fair were on the grounds. As you proceeded along the path lined with tents and booths, familiar fair ground cries assailed your ear. "Hoop-la, Hoop-la! right here ladies and gentlemen, have a try for the cigars, and similar exhortations coming from those in charge greeted your ear all along the line. High above all other noises, the shrill scream of the locomotive on the miniature railway made itself heard.

A FINE ENTERTAINMENT

The newly constructed grand stand was used last night for the first time and is a thoroughly serviceable and splendidly constructed piece of work. It was fairly well occupied last evening. Directly opposite the platform was erected on which the band were seated, and where the acrobatic performances and the other vaudeville acts took place. The varied program supplied by the 57th, enlivened things vastly and was an enjoyable feature. The acrobatic work was in itself a treat and gave the spectators an opportunity of beholding some marvellously clever work. It was worth the price of admission alone to witness Thrilling feats of strength and daring, performed in all conceivable and dangerous attitudes kept the onlookers on edge. The Luger brothers in their tumbling and balancing acts were especially clever and performed with practised ease and dexterity.

The trained pony and dogs were really funny and were very popular. Their evolutions and performances were wonderful, and done with almost human intelligence. Dutchy and his trained mule in their comedy work, were also good and won a goodly share of the applause.

GRAND FIREWORKS

A fitting wind up to the night's entertainment was the magnificent fireworks display. Beautiful showers of stars, brilliant rockets, pinwheels, and numerous other fiery shapes, illuminated the grounds for the space of perhaps twenty minutes. A particularly pretty thing was the form of a star. The letters "Good night" woven in fire closed the night's proceedings and the crowds gradually dispersed.

SATURDAY'S PROGRAM

8 a.m.—Grounds and buildings open to the public for general inspection of all live stock, poultry, special exhibits and inside exhibits.

1 p.m.—The judging of the harness horses in classes 1, 2 and 3; also Nos. 1 and 2, in class 7, special class for farmers, and the Bank of Commerce special in the small ring.

2 p.m.—The first heat of the 2.30 class, (Trot or Pace) race; purse $150.

2.30 p.m.—The first heat of the free-for-all; purse $200.00

Between the heats of the races, the judging of harness horse classes will continue throughout the afternoon. The classes to be judged will be 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 of class 5 and No. 2 of class 6, and 3 of class 7, and the special prize for the best pony turnout.

Handsome rosettes will be given instead of prize tickets in all the horse class.

3 p.m.—An Association Football match for the R. B. Hall championship Challenge Cup, which represents the championship of the county of Peterborough.

Full 57th Regimental Band giving a continuous programme all afternoon.

BIG CROWDS TO-DAY.

The crowds literally poured into the exhibition grounds this afternoon. Every street car available is being used to convey them. The attendance will certainly equal or surpass previous years. The scene at the fair grounds this afternoon was decidedly one of keen activity. Commencing shortly after one o'clock, the tide of humanity began to flow south; hundreds walked so rapidly were the cars filled. A constant stream of human beings filed into the grounds, and at two-thirty a genuine midway had been formed.

The threatening aspect of the weather in the morning, which turned to rain, tended to dampen the enthusiasm and success of the fair, but the sun shone out about noon, shedding cheerful rays of warmth in a most acceptable manner. The morning was occupied with the judging operations, which proceeded rapidly.

The horse races, which commenced at two-thirty, drew the crowds in the direction of the grand stand, which was soon filled to its limit. Those who could not gain entrance to it, massed themselves around the ring on either side of the fence. J. R. Stratton's outfit reached the grounds early and attracted considerable attention.

The 57th regiment arrived early and further brightened proceedings by their lively strains. It was almost impossible to escape being persuaded to have a try for the numerous prizes offered by the swarm of proprietors of games of chance. The three throws for a nickel at the wind man from the Philippine Islands attracted great crowds and created much amusement.

Some of the exhibits on the grounds, and in fact, all of them are splendidly patronized.

The program for this evening is as follows:

7 p.m.—Everything in full swing, a big and attractive midway, including A miniature railway, merry-go-round, and numerous high-class attractions.

Grounds brilliantly illuminated.

Six spectacular vaudeville acts which are free to all, by the Carl Dammann Family of Acrobats, the Bollini Troupe of Aerial Artists, and the funny trick mule.

The evening's program will be enlivened by the 57th regiment band, and will come to a grand finish by a second magnificent display of fireworks.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

Among the exhibitors, none perhaps is more active or has a superior plan for attracting attention or inviting patronage, than has J. T. C. Lang, the George street clothier. About the centre of the midway on the right hand side he has erected a neat large sized stand, on which his address, and cleverly worded advertising is displayed. The stand is designed to resemble the entrance to a residence. On either side of the main entrance are large arch shaped windows. Plentifully scattered throughout the grounds are signs, posters, and bill boards on which are engraved terse and well worded advertisements such as "It is a pleasure to please you," "No better than the best, but better than the rest," and "Our clothing is always made in the best way." The high grade class and quality of the clothing sold by this firm is attracting widespread attention from visitors and citizens alike.

DAIRY SUPPLIES

Mr. G. A. Gillespie has half of a large tent on the grounds at an advantageous position in which he is showing the improved Simplex link blade cream separators, of hand power sizes. The machines have been improved on and brought to a high degree of efficiency. The principal aim has been to increase the efficiency with a view to making the larger capacity hand machines more popular. The most striking feature of the new Simplex is its light running order. It cuts the labor of skimmed milk more than in two, because it does the work easier and in half the time. It is a compact, heavy, and substantial separator. It has a broad solid base and a body or frame of pleasing design that entirely encloses the gearing and all moving parts. The simplex offers more value for the money given for one, than in any other separator, even the cheapest mail order separators made. Mr. G. A. Gillespie is in charge of the exhibit himself and will be pleased to demonstrate its working qualities to all.

Fringes are at present one of the most important trimming features, and will be worn on almost everything

INSIFNIFICANCE OF MAN WITHOUT THE GREAT SOWER

We Should Return Thanks by Being Ever Ready to Enter His Kingdom—St. John's Harvest Festival.

Evidencing a deep interest throughout the service, a large congregation assembled at St. John's church last night, the occasion being the annual harvest festival. Few seats were vacant and the beautiful and significant service was carried out with an earnest display of thankfulness to the great Sower for the bountiful harvest and care provided for His children.

Appropriate decorations and offerings from the harvest fields greeted the worshipper on entering the edifice. The special preacher was the Rev. F. H. Hartley, of Toronto. Assisting Rev. Mr. Carpenter were Rev. Mr. Sawers, rector of St. Luke's, and Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Brantford, who is visiting in the city.

The preacher took for his text Ephesians, chapter 5, verse 20, "Giving thanks for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

He prefaced his sermon with a few remarks in which he stated that it was twelve years since he had the privilege and pleasure of standing in St. John's pulpit. Since then there had been many changes, and he noted great improvement, which did the congregation credit. He would, he said, never forget when seventeen years ago he asked for help to assist in his work in the back country. Nowhere was more kind help given than from the congregation of St. John's, and it was given with the proper spirit. He would never forget the affection and good-will expressed for him while he was at his work, and he was sure that his people appreciated the assistance given them.

Proceeding with his sermon, Rev. Mr. Hartley referred to the object of the service, which was to return thanks for a bountiful harvest. From all accounts the harvest of the North-west this year would be a banner one. Another object was to render thanks for the life given to us.

The preacher went on to show how utterly insignificant man was if left to himself, and how superior he was made by Him who was ever watchful. We should always remember these things and be ready to be, and do and give everything, even ourselves, to promote the extension of His kingdom.

The service was fully choral and the large choir as usual gave a good account of their part of the service. The festival coming so early in the season leaves small time for practice, but last night's singing was distinctly above the average even for St. John's choir.

E. V. Hall's thanksgiving anthem presents many opportunities for varied choral effects, which were all taken advantage of. It contains the famous soprano solo "He Maketh Peace," which was beautifully sung by Miss Helen Davies, who was heartily congratulated and thanked for her contribution.

The decorators showed great taste and skill and much time must have been spent on their erection. The chancel was in the hands of the Chancel Guild under the president, Mr. Rush, the nave, handled by Mrs. Rubidge, and a large party, the pulpit by Miss Hughes, the front by Mrs. Fessenden and the children's cross by Mrs. R. J. Devey.

The services will be continued on Sunday next.

The offertories at both services were given to the widows' and orphans' fund.

THE DAILY REVIEW

Dr. T. P. McCullough
166 Brock Street
Specialist Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat

VOL LXIII., No. 64. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1911 TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

You cannot vote for Stratton and Laurier without voting for an alliance with the United States; without inviting United States competition and interference; without abandoning the old policy that has made us prosperous; without, in brief, imperilling Canadian national destiny.

HOPE FADETH LIKE THE DAY

Oh, let us be joyful. Mr. Stratton has got to the stage where he sits in his office in the Examiner—he says in his nomination paper that he is a manufacturer—directs a member of the staff to come and interview him and then proceeds to dictate both questions and answers. Being a manufacturer, of course everyone knows what his product is. Mr. Stratton says that he looks at the situation hopefully. They say that while there is life there is hope, and Mr. Stratton is not dead yet politically—the funeral will not take place until next Thursday. So naturally he has perhaps some hope left. But it will be noticed that Mr. Stratton's answers to his self-directed questions are placed along a peculiar line, and that reading between the lines, he does not exhibit much confidence—the assurance that is his wont.

By the way, and this is just incidental to the whole business, Mr. Stratton says to himself "It is noticed that the Review is keeping up its campaign of slander." Then he answers, like a knight of the white plume, "Yes; just what you could notice. But nobody is paying any attention to it. I regard the Review as the best canvasser I've got. I owed a great deal to its help in past contests, this time I owe it a great deal more."

In the first place mark you, nobody is paying any attention to the exposures in the Review. Then it is the best canvasser Mr. Stratton has got. Ergo, what on earth sort of attention must the people of Peterborough be paying to his canvassers. In his own statement, the people are paying less than no attention to his own canvassers. But this was just one of Mr. Stratton's little slips.

He argues that as the Laurier government will be returned, it would be foolish not to send him back. But the Laurier government will be beaten, and Mr. Stratton is not wanted at Ottawa by either party. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. George Graham and Aunty Paterson may have, or may not have asked him personally to run again. Well, in a desperate situation such as the Laurier government has got itself into, perhaps they would be willing to accept even Mr. Stratton's support if the riding could be held in the Liberal column. It is necessary to keep it Liberal, according to the Grit leaders, at any cost—even at the cost of carrying a Stratton. But even J. R. Stratton, the political past master, the man who stops at nothing to gain his end, cannot convince West Peterborough that it should support Laurier, especially when that government is going down and out, as Clifford Sifton predicts.

The indications are that J. R. Stratton will go down and out next Thursday along with the Laurier administration, for one is on a par with the other. A vote for Burnham is not altogether a vote for whether he can get an old dredge brought to Peterborough for some repairs—it is a vote involving the biggest business issue since Confederation, an issue that will lead to endless trouble with the United States unless decided in the negative. A vote for Burnham involves such big consequences to the country at large, apart from the personal qualities or proclivities of either Mr. Stratton or Mr. Burnham, that whether Mr. Burnham sits four times or eight times "in the church on the hill" doesn't cut any ice, whatever; or even whether Mr. Stratton ever goes to look at the swimming holes where he used to soak in the sunshine years ago, that we were told about not long ago.

Considerable Progress Made.

Berlin, Sept. 16.—Considerable progress is believed to have been made last night toward a settlement of the controversy between France and Germany over Morocco.

The French ambassador last evening delivered to Foreign Minister Von Kiderlen-Waechter, France's reply to Germany's note and afterwards the two diplomats engaged in a conference lasting an hour and a half.

Dynamite Bridge.

Bilbao, Spain, Sept. 16.—The situation here growing out of the general strike continues exceedingly grave. Street fighting between troops and the strikers continued throughout the day and the strikers blew up with dynamite the Amoralla Railroad Bridge.

To add to the difficulties in the city, heavy storms have caused floods in the lower regions and food is becoming scarce.

AU REVOIR!

The frost is on the pumpkin
And its also on the plume,
Stratton's day is almost done—
Next Thursday ends in gloom!

ATTACK ON STOLYPIN SAID TO HAVE BEEN MADE BY JEWS

Revolutionists Seeking to Re Establish the Reign of Terror in Russia — Massacres Are Feared.

St. Petersburg, Russia, Sept. 16.—There have been sensational developments in the inquiry at Kiev into the shooting of M. Stolypin. The inquiry has declared the crime to be of revolutionary origin and carried out by an agent of the protective political police especially stationed in the theatre to guard M. Stolypin.

It is declared that this first attempt at a revival of terrorism was planned by the executive committee of the Jewish Band of Social Revolutionists and Finnish revolutionists, who, according to police information, recently federated. The rapid progress of the inquiry was due to the eagerness of the municipality to clear itself of a charge of reckless distribution of admission cards to the theatre.

Admission card Number 406, entitling its holder to a seat in the eighteenth row of the theatre, was found on Bogroff. It was issued by the municipality upon a personal request, signed by Inspector of Political Police Kuliabko and by him handed over to the agent of Bogroff. The municipality had taken the precaution to photograph Kuliabko's receipt, and in the face of this overwhelming evidence produced at police headquarters it was admitted.

Dmitry Bogroff is an orthodox Jew. He graduated from Kiev University in 1906. During his course there he joined the Social revolutionary group, which entrusted to him in 1907 several serious commissions. He was selected for the second attempt on M. Stolypin's life, but did not carry out his orders. Instead, he informed the police and betrayed a large number of his comrades, using the tactics of Eugene Azef, who in 1909 played the double role of leader of the revolutionary socialist and political spy to gain the confidence of the police chiefs.

May Result In Massacres.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 16.—The greatest anxiety is entertained here respecting the effect of the attempted assassination of Premier Stolypin upon the masses in South Russia, where the hostility to the Jews is most acute.

Reports are expected momentarily of anti-Jewish outbreaks, particularly in Bessarabia. In fact, unofficial reports to that effect have already reached the capital, but it has thus far been impossible to secure any confirmation.

It is unofficially whispered that the condition of Premier Stolypin is almost hopeless, that his injuries, while apparently small, are exceedingly dangerous.

This complicates the situation very much. The population in the south of Russia have for months been anticipating the Imperial visit, and have been worked up to such a degree of patriotic fervor that if anti-Jewish outbreaks occur at this time it is not easy to see how far they will go or how they can be controlled.

FRENCH INVENTOR LOSES HIS LIEF

Injuries of Air Conqueror Terminated Fatally

Special to the Review.

Verdun, France, Sept 16.—Edouard Nieuport, the inventer of the monoplane, bearing his name, died to-day, from injuries sustained through a fall yesterday.

Canadian Strike Law.

London, Sept. 16.—Hon. Pember Reeves, whose views of the present industrial troubles have been widely sought, does not consider the Canadian system of arbitration the right one for England because he says it deprives the trade unionist of his most valuable weapon, the power of striking at the shortest or without notice. It does not give the award legally binding on the employer, while it is of little use for the inquiry board between employer and labor, owing to the inability to give binding awards.

CHEAPER FOOD FOR THE WORKINGMAN & BETTER PRICES FOR THE FARMER--TWO SETS OF RECIPROCITY ARGUMENTS SIDE BY SIDE

The Liberal newspapers and speakers claim that the workingman will get cheaper food under reciprocity. They say that the removal of the duties will accomplish this, a removal amounting to what the Toronto Star (Liberal) figures out at 43 cents, per head of population per year. But if, as the farmers' papers assert, prices are higher in the United States for farm produce, without scarcely an exception, what good will that removal do, if the prices here advance to the proportionate level of the American price?

These contradictions are most glaring, and to say that the middleman is responsible is foolish, for "the packers and combines" do not touch many of the products concerned at all. Here are a few arguments for cheaper food from the Stratton organ, and a few figures from Farm and Dairy, the local agricultural weekly, demonstrating where the farmer and cattle raiser will get better prices in the United States.

THE EXAMINER:

The Liberal Government, which has stood by labour and the Unions, and has made Canada a white man's country, now seeks to give the workingman cheaper food, so that he can put more money in the bank.

Cheaper living and better wages for the workingman mean a better education for his family and better prospects in life for his children.

* * * * * *

It takes the taxes off what you eat—saves you something that way on every meal. Last year Canadians paid over a million dollars in duties on food imported from the United States.

More than that, it gives you leave to buy what you like, when you like, where you like, at the best prices.

J. R. STRATTON'S ELECTORAL ADDRESS.

Reciprocity will reduce the cost of living from twenty-five to thirty per cent. It will benefit the consumer in about sixty of the chief elements of his diet.

MR. STRATTON'S AFFIDAVIT

Copy of an affidavit filed at the May assizes in Toronto, dated May 3, as sworn before Hartley Dewart, barrister, in the case of Rex vs J. R. Stratton, John Watson, John Ferguson, Alex. Fraser, Alex. Lown, J. J. Warren.

I, James Robert Stratton of the City of Peterboro in the County of Peterboro, Esquire, make oath and say:—

1. I am one of the defendants above named and have a knowledge of the matters hereinafter deposed to.

2. I am advised and verily believe that it is not in the interests of justice that the trial of this action should take place at the present time before a jury.

3. I verily believe the minds of the public including men who would be and are summoned upon juries have been very materially affected and more or less prejudiced by the publications which have been made in regard to the matters in issue and that the minds of practically all the members of the community have been and are more or less inflamed and prejudiced as against the defendants who have been charged herein.

The number of shareholders in the Farmers' Bank of Canada is very large, such shareholders being resident in many parts of the County and Province, and the number of customers and depositors of the Bank is also very large, and all such shareholders and customers and depositors naturally have a special interest in the affairs of the Bank and are subject to more or less feeling and prejudice against the bank and against the defendants herein.

I verily believe that it would not be just and fair to the defendants to be tried at this time before a jury.

4, This application is bona fide and not for the purpose of delay.

J. R. STRATTON.

A STRAW

This was admitted this morning in a conversation between two prominent Liberals, which was accidentally overheard by a third party.

Prominent Liberal No. 1, who holds a rather important government position, asked Prominent Liberal No. 2, who is actively working for Mr. Stratton—in fact one of his chief lieutenants—what the outlook was.

And this Liberal stalwart, one of the shrewdest political guessers in the riding, was heard to answer that they did not look very satisfactory. He did not like the appearance of things at all.

ON THE TRACK OF BANK ROBBERS

Broken Down Automobile Found Near the City.

Special to the Review.

New Westminster, B.C., Sept. 16.—The finding of a broken-down automobile just outside the city, is believed to be a clue as to the method of escape employed by the looters of the Bank of Montreal. A machine is said to have been seen near the bank at three o'clock yesterday morning. It is thought that the robbers are in hiding in the vicinity.

LABOR WANTS IT OWN PARTY

Calgary Congress Passes Many Resolutions

Calgary, Sept. 16.—After enjoying a day's recreation at Banff Thursday, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada resumed its deliberations in the Paget Hall yesterday morning. The first business was the taking up of resolutions which had not been passed on by the congress. Some time was taken up in discussing the Workmen's Compensation Act, as it applied in British Columbia, and in the tenor of the remarks made by the various speakers there seemed to be an opinion among the delegates that in order to have legislation passed in the interest of organized labor political action was necessary in that labor men should be returned to Parliament to enact such legislation.

The following resolutions were agreed to without discussion:

Stipendiary magistrates to try cases of miners accused of violence or intimidation.

Promotion of a better demand for union label goods.

In the event of the passage of the eight-hour-day bill, employers be compelled to pay a living wage.

In favor of technical and industrial education, but not in favor of trade schools.

To prohibit sub-letting of building contracts.

Lengthening of sections of railroads to the detriment of workmen and the traveling public.

More sanitary methods of packing nails.

TWO TRAGEDIES

The Marks company to-night is putting on "Over the Hills to the Poor-House."

"Over the Hills to the Poor-house" will be the tragedy that Canada will put on if it votes for reciprocity.

STOLYPIN IS BETTER

Many Arrests Made as Result of Assassination Plot

Special to the Review.

Kieff, Russia, Sept. 16.—Though still in a critical condition, Premier Stolypin is slightly better to-day and he may possibly recover from this, the third attempt to assassinate him. Many arrests have been made of members of Hebrew and Finnish revolutionary societies, which are blamed for the assassination plot. There is danger of a serious outbreak of violence against the Jews as a result of the shooting.

WILL MOVE CAR SHOPS

What Crossen Says of Cobourg Industry

Cobourg, Sept. 15—The whole town is alarmed as a result of a letter received by Mr. Chas. A. Munson, Conservative candidate, yesterday from Mr. W. J. Crossen, head of the town's largest industry, the Crossen Car Works.

If reciprocity carries, Mr. Crossen declares that the works will be forced to leave the town. This will be a crushing blow as over 200 skilled mechanics are employed at high wages.

MR CROSSEN HAS BEEN A LIBERAL FOR FIFTY YEARS

In his letter Mr. Crossen says:

"Taking up the matter of reciprocity. Talking with several employes at the car works and the farmers in the vicinity of my farm, I find out that they do not particularly understand the situation in case reciprocity is carried.

"Having been in the car business for over 50 years and knowing somewhat that the prospect is for the next number of years, I feel it my duty to point out to the citizens of my native county what I fear as the result, should reciprocity carry.

NO MORE BUSINESS FROM ONTARIO

"Ontario being well supplied with rolling stock, we will in the future have to look to the west for car business. If reciprocity is carried it means that our shops will be closed here and I will have to go into business nearer the front, where the cars are required, which is Manitoba and the West in general.

"From Cobourg it costs to delivery a flat car in Winnipeg $66 per car; box cars $98; passenger cars of the different kinds, on an average of $240 a car.

"In comparison American builders can deliver cars from the Western States into Winnipeg for less than one-third, which means Eastern Canadian car builders cannot compete.

"In my judgment which is based on the best opinion I have been able to obtain this movement in the direction of reciprocity is the first stage towards free trade, which would bring about the condition that I have outlined above, and would mean, as I have already stated, the deprivation and closing of a business that has been conducted successfully here for many years.

"If you deem that this letter contains information that the public should be possessed of, you are at liberty to use it as you see fit.

"Wishing you every success in your campaign, believe me to be, yours faithfully,

WM. J. CROSSEN.

ROBBERS MADE A HAUL OF $315,000 AT WESTMINSTER

Bank Was Entered by Five Men and They Got Safely Away in the Dark.

New Westminster, B.C., Sept. 16.—Three hundred and fifteen thousand dollars was stolen early yesterday from the branch of the Bank of Montreal in this city.

Five burglars entered the bank by the front door, broke through the metal coating of the vault, blew the safe by charges of nitro-glycerine and got clear away with their booty without being seen except by a Chinese caretaker.

They probably escaped down the Fraser River in a launch or else by automobile toward Vancouver.

There was in all $350,000 in the bank safes. Chief of Police Bradshaw believes the men would have taken it all if they could have carried it. As it was they took all they could carry away, leaving all the silver and notes of small denominations as well as damaged $500 and $10 bills lying around the floor and tables of the room of one of the clerks.

The first known of the robbery was when a Chinese caretaker appeared at the police station at 5.30 o'clock and gave the alarm. He had managed to work loose from the bonds with which he had been tied after the robbers had departed.

Chief of Police Bradshaw hurried to the scene and all of the available officers were pressed into service, but the only obtainable clue was that given by the Chinaman.

From the thoroughness of the job and the tools with which the work was done, the local officers believe the same gang which has been at work in Vancouver turned the work here.

Where's Sleuth Burns?

Montreal, Sept. 16.—At the Bank of Montreal yesterday Mr. H. Vincent Meredith stated that it was quite true that the vaults of the branch at New Westminster had been blown to pieces and a very large sum of money stolen.

Detectives of the two prominent services will be sent immediately to the west, and the bank will spend, if necessary, another quarter of a million in tracking the burglars and prosecuting them.

SCIATICA

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by "Nerviline."

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. In order to build up my general health and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

CURED SIX YEARS

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." 50 cents per bottle, trial size, 25c; sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, SEPT. 16, 1911.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000.

A DESPERATE PARTY

Driven to desperation by the patriotic resistance of tens of thousands of Liberals a small portion of the reciprocity strives to set class against class. In less stable communities the incendiary appeals of these journals might lead to a dangerous upheaval [illegible] But Canadians are too intelligent and steady-going to be carried off their feet by such revolutionary bunkum, says the Toronto News.

Our farmers, manufacturers, workingmen, merchants and professional men recognize that they must stand or fall together. All are component parts of one social organization. What hurts one class injures all the others. What benefits one inures to the advantage of the rest. Thirty-two years ago the National Policy of moderate protection was inaugurated with a view to affording every citizen the reasonable opportunity of a good livelihood together with full scope of his individual energies and capabilities. Until that policy was firmly established and began to produce definite results young and ambitious citizens had to leave the country to find careers for themselves. For long years they flocked by the thousand to the neighboring Republic, where a great series of protected, complementary and inter dependent industries furnished them with the openings they required.

Tariff protection had justified itself and the exodus had ceased when the Laurier Government came into office. For fifteen years it had the good sense to leave the National Policy alone. As a result the Dominion reached the zenith of commercial independence with ample openings for all the native born and for hundreds of thousands of British born and foreign born besides. A few months ago a section of the Ministry was seized with weakness, and at Mr. Taft's dictation set about the destruction of the splendid edifice. They began tearing down the National Policy, and undermining the material security of a whole people. Now the press which obeys the Government's bidding seeks to inspire the farmer and the wage earner with distrust and hatred of citizens in the possession of any considerable money or property.

Protected by a moderate tariff all classes of Canadians enjoy an average standard of comfort unknown in any other land. For these reasons all should vote against commercial union with a half-spent and industrially depressed country, and against the present almost criminal attempts of some party writers to divide Canada against itself. If we remain on the straight road, we shall continue to draw hundreds of millions of dollars annually from the British investor, our farm products will retain their standard reputation in Liverpool, London and Glasgow, our agriculturists will secure a valuable preference over the American farmer in the United Kingdom, our workingmen will remain fully employed at good wages, our rural population will continue to experience a rapid growth, and our industrial centres to multiply and increase in size.

Better stable tariff conditions and a high state of prosperity than years of blind experimenting with a new fiscal system. (We know what the National Policy has done for the Dominion. (At the best reciprocity is an unknown quantity. Very probably it would precipitate a disastrous dislocation of trade. There is the further consideration that unnecessary dependence is a bad thing. The individual or nation that is depending more than ordinarily on another for any essential condition of progress, is ever in great danger. Such a condition is not favorable either to the increase of wealth or to the preservation of liberty." Surely if Canadians are wise they will remain independent fiscally and commercially. In so doing they will enjoy the further assurance of perpetual political autonomy under the British flag. No demagogic appeal is likely to divert them from that course or from their well grounded national purpose.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The International presidents of the various unions whose headquarters are in Indianapolis, are sending out warnings to the local unions to prepare for the depression that is sweeping over the United States. One has been received in Peterborough.

The report in the Examiner as to what the facts of the Norwood nomination controversy were, was purposely misleading. The fact that seventy-five per cent. of the people went with Sexsmith is evidence enough to show which way the wind blew. Only fifty odd people stayed with Kerr in the hall.

Dr. Clifford says that "there may be a loss of seats in Eastern Canada, but the west is solidly for Laurier." There certainly will be a loss of seats in the east for Laurier. If at the time Dr. Clifford was here, such evidences were discernible to an ordinary traveller, what would he say now, when Liberals all over the country are deserting their party like sheep! It is 1878 over again, with a landslide to the Conservative policy.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GUARD THEIR HEALTH!

Children Who Grow Very Fast Need Careful Watching.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills would make her healthy and happy.

Next to infancy, the years between ten or twelve and eighteen are the most critical in life, especially for the boys and girls who grow too fast. Rapid growth and the physical changes that are taking place render them particularly liable to weakness and disorders of the digestive system, kidneys or lungs that very frequently, when allowed to run on, condemn them to a lifetime of suffering.

It is most important that at this period of life those organs which carry off the body's waste and impurities—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin—should be kept active and vigorous.

Nothing will do this more effectively than that good old-fashioned remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. It acts directly on each of these organs, enabling them to do their work properly, and thus keeps the whole system pure and healthy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are still made from precisely the same formula as when our grandparents used them, for nothing better has ever been devised.

Canada's Last Chance.

Kingston, Sept. 16.—Sir Richard Cartwright was main speaker at the meeting held in the City Hall last night in the interest of John Macdonald Mowat, the Liberal candidate. Sir Richard dwelt almost entirely upon the reciprocity issue.

As regards the statement that Canada was at the parting of the ways, it was in a sense true, he said, because if the people of Canada refused the agreement it would be a long time before such an agreement would be again offered by any President of the States. The speaker declared that the offer of Taft was even better than that which had been asked for in 1869. Why should we refuse it? There was a chance to trade with half the continent, and we should look ahead.

CHAPTER IV.

Continued.

"Sort of what the newspaper advertisements would call an openin' of gents' furnishin's," he remarked cheerily. "Spontaneous come-bust-up, scientifically speakin'. Was that your trunk?"

"It's my trunk — and it's my powder for my shells — and — and a fool with fire!" cried the young man angrily.

The rest of the mob ceased to take interest in the incident, for one of the bands had listened to entreaties, and now began to play the tune most eagerly besought: "A Hot Time in the Old Town To-night." Tramping men kicked the remains of the smoking trunk right and left; garments still hung their torches on the wires.

In the uproar, George had not heard the horse coming. He was staring up regretfully at a hunting coat just dropping into shreds. The man with the boots yanked him out of the way, and the girl went past, and almost over him as he stumbled. She did not look at George. The big black that she rode crouched back when the music blared under his frothing muzzle. But she lashed him down the platform, scattering musicians and listeners. The music stopped.

"Three cheers for Queen Clare, the daughter of——" began a man, raising his hat. But she struck down his swinging hand with her crop, and her indignant cry stilled them.

"It's just as I thought, and that is why I'm here. You haven't the sense and decency even to bring my father's coffin to the house without a riot. You are drunk already. You are destroying property." Her keen eye had noted the flaming garments on the wires.

But Governor Harriss had been marshaling the unloading of the huge box. He rushed to her through the press, his ancient hat in the crook of his elbow, bowing to her as to a divinity.

"I am in charge, Miss Clare, and it shall be done right and proper. I know how."

But the divinity was not calmed.

"Stop this drunken noise, then. I'll have you to understand, men, that I'm carrying out the wishes of my dear father, because I'm the one he depended on to carry them out. But I'll not have his memory insulted here, to-day — and you were doing it, just now." She addressed them as men would address men. She used the language and the tone that Bill Kyle might have used.

"It's the girl of Cornelius Corran that's talkin' there, all right," mumbled the tall man at George's side. "It's many a lesson he's given her in talkin' to men."

"I see you're lookin' at them things," explained the governor, justifying himself and his friends. Her indignant eyes were flashing from embers of trunk to smoldering apparel on the wires. "Them ain't antics, Miss Clare. It was accident. The dude's trunk got blowed up."

He pointed to the forester, who stood apart with certain poor salvage in his hands. He did not make a heroic spectacle, thus; but her woman's eyes recognized the badge of breeding in his stalwart manhood. His eyes met hers, her big, gray Irish eyes that sparkled against the flush of her cheeks. He stepped forward, for these eyes summoned him. The spirit of command was in them. There was something regal about her, sitting there among those cringing men on her pawing horse. He instinctively recognized that quality as regal by waiting for her to speak to him — waiting just a fraction of time, and hardly realizing that he did so — but he waited.

"There is mischief abroad here, to-day, sir, I am afraid. Our little place is respectful toward a stranger. You will find it so, usually. Mr. Wiggin will see that your loss is made up to you."

"That will be out of the question, Miss Corran."

"My father would have done so, if he were alive. I represent my father, sir. He was proud of this village. A stranger was his guest. This accident would not have happened except for the strange conditions here to-day. Please see Mr. Wiggin." It was not the words, but the tone. She had addressed him as though he were a menial.

He was angry, now, as well as ashamed. With the instinct of race, he realized that this upcountry girl did not understand the finer graces of conventionality. Environment and training had made of her a woman of the ancient race of the Corrans; she was speaking to him as the chatelaine, not as maiden whom chance had thrown in his company.

"Pardon me, Miss Corran, but my accident concerns me alone. I beg that you will not trouble yourself further in the affair."

He spoke stiffly, and she understood the rebuke. For the first time in her life, she realized the full force of the social code, borne in upon her by rebuke from a stranger and an equal. She had been too thoroughly isolated in her little sovereignty, and had forgotten. Shame, as vivid as his own, swept over her, and the flame in her cheeks revealed it.

"Harriss," she cried, whirling on that terror-striken vassal, "I shall hold you and every man in hearing of my voice to account for the actions of this day. If you shame my father's memory, or disgrace his daughter, you shall suffer."

She slashed the horse, and his caiked hoofs rained splinters from the platform planks as he galloped away.

George started to make his way up the street in the dust that her horse left. He was in a state of mind that he, himself, recognised as distinctly savage. The tall man tagged him, swinging the shoes, and grinning amiably and significantly at all they met.

"Loadin' your own shells is interestin', but you can't always save money by doing it," volunteered the stranger, looking back with calm interest at the remnants of the trunk. What was left of it was burning.

Through the press of men who came to him, proffering objects that they had salvaged, squeezed the author of the mischief.

"It was me that done it!" he gasped. "It looked like powder, and it smelled like powder, and I lit a match to make sure. It was powder. But, I'm square, mister. I'll settle, if you'll take an order on Jep Wiggin."

George felt that he couldn't trust himself to discuss the matter. He took from the outstretched hands such articles as they had rescued. They were a few little personal conveniences that the explosion had not injured, and he stuffed them into his pockets and turned to leave. It was plain that his wardrobe was not worth gathering up. When the importunate gentleman got in his way again with an offer to settle the damages, the young man pushed roughly past, and kept on. The man who had rescued the boots followed at his heels.

In the straggle of little buildings that made up the settlement, the tavern was distinguished by its size, for Corran-cache as a "jumping-off place" had many transients.

George found no one in the big, bare, general room except some sleepy-looking loafers. In a pen in one corner, a man who was apparently postmaster as well as landlord was busy with a mail bag.

The fellow with the shoes noted that the young man bent inquiring gaze on the loafers, none of whom seemed to respond as though they were interested in the new arrival.

Rev. Father Morriscy

A Combined Treatment That Really Cures Catarrh.

Canadian weather, with its extreme cold and sudden changes, gives almost every one Catarrh, and makes it hard to cure. Some recommend internal remedies—some external applications.

Father Morriscy used both—tablets to be taken three or four times a day to invigorate the system, purify the blood, and help it throw off the disease, and a soothing, healing, antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils. This combined treatment known as attacking the disease from within and without, soon cures.

"Father Morriscy's No. 26"

Mr. A. C. Thibodeau, General Merchant in Rogersville, N.B., writes on Jan. 22nd last:

"A few words as to the merits of your Catarrh Cure. For the last 10 years I have been troubled with Catarrh of the head and stomach and during that time have tried all kinds of other Remedies with no results, until I tried your Catarrh Cure which I am glad to say has cured me. I highly recommend it to those who are suffering with this disease."

Don't trifle with Catarrh—cure it with Father Morriscy's No. 26.

WHY UNITED STATES WANTS RECIPROCITY

Our Neighbor to the South is Not an Attractive Partner Just Now for an Attractive Country

The exceedingly perilous commercial situation in the United States at the present time has led the most powerful financial journal in America, The New York Post, to say in a September issue:—

"No one is feeling very hopeful over the immediate future, but many are rejoicing in the fact that time has already done so much toward rectifying the fundamental economic mistakes of the last ten years, that the movement of wholesale readjustment is bound to restore a sound condition, and that some time in the course of the not too remote future, the industrial plant of the nation will not be in excess of the demands put upon it. When that time comes, it is safe to predict that our bankers and merchants and manufacturers and investors will suddenly forget that prosperity is wholly governed by the acts of Congress."

Clearly in its present condition the United States is not an attractive partner for a country that is enjoying such abounding prosperity as the Dominion of Canada.

WHAT LOWER TARIFF DID

How One Industry Suffered From a Reduction of 2½ Per Cent.

Certain leaders of free trade sentiment in Canada have endeavored to create feeling against the manufacturer by accusing him of using the present tariff as a means of undue enrichment, and have sought to show that manufacturing is not in any particular need of protection in this country. Not only are such allegations wholly devoid of fact, but there is indisputable evidence to prove that a protective tariff is still essential to the industrial welfare of the Dominion, and that the withdrawal of protection has been the immediate and inevitable cause of business disasters. A conspicuous example is afforded in the downfall of several flourishing branches of the Canadian leather industry, following the passing of the Albany Treaty of March, 1910. This treaty, it will be recalled, consisted of a series of apparently trifling reductions in the Canadian tariff, by means of which we were able to buy President Taft off from applying to importations from this country the maximum schedule of the new Payne-Aldrich tariff. Among other concessions agreed to was a reduction of 2½ per cent. in the duty on upper and fine leathers, bringing it down from 17½ per cent. to 15 per cent. Trifling as it may seem, this small reduction has dealt a staggering blow to the Canadian leather industry, and has forced at least six progressive concerns, employing upwards of 600 skilled mechanics in the aggregate, to close down the upper and fine leather departments of their tanneries, and to surrender the field to their American competitors.

COMPLETE POLITICAL AND BUSINESS UNION

That is the Ideal of the Hearst Papers, and is Endorsed by President Taft

Read what the press and the leading speakers of the United States are saying about Reciprocity with Canada. There is nothing else than selfishness and a desire to control Canadian affairs in every remark. Following is a notable instance:—

Ideal Conditions

"The day that reciprocity becomes a fact, the chief interests of Canada will be here in the United States.

"Should we not with reciprocity be far more important in the eyes of Canadians than the imaginary 'Empire of Great Britain,' which they look to now?

"The ideal condition, of course, would be a political as well as a business union of all this North American continent. A political union, however, cannot be brought about suddenly or by any act on our part. It must grow out of the good-will and the friendship of the Canadians if it is to come at all.

"Is it not a fact that reciprocity, bringing the people of Canada and the United States and all the great terriday, will do more than anything else to promote eventually, the complete political and business union of the United Statees and all the great territory north of us?"—Chicago American, one of the Hearst papers referred to by President Taft in the following letter:—

Endorsed by Taft

"The President's Cottage,

"Beverley, Mass., July 23, 1911.

"Editor New York American, New York,—I wish to express my high appreciation of the energetic work of the seven Hearst papers and of the members of your staff for their earnest and useful effort to spread the gospel of reciprocity, and I congratulate them on the success that has attended the Evangel.

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

GEOGRAPHY AND MARKETS

Big Producing Countries Do Not Ask Geography to Name Their Markets

It is an old error that geography determines markets. Once it was truth; and no error dies so hard as one that began life as a truth. In ancient days when transportation was primitive, costly, slow and perilous, geography did practically determine the circle of the nation's markets. But even the sailing ships of Phoenicia pretty well broke the bars of that prison. The invention of steam demolishing the remaining walls; and to-day the whole world is the market of every nation of pluck, enterprise and ambition.

Where are England's markets? Where are they not? They are found in India as surely as in France, in Australia as surely as in Ireland, in China, in Canada, in all the Africas. The Argentine Republic is one of the great wheat producing countries of the world. To whom does it sell? To Peru? To Brazil? To Patagonia? Not exactly. Her wheat goes to Europe across the Atlantic and across the Equator. She does not ask geography to name her markets. She consults the lists of national products and sends her wares where such are scarce.

The ocean to-day is a trade canal—not a barrier.

We do not always realize how close we are to all the countries of the world. When we are told of possible competition with distant peoples we are not frightened. They seem too far off. Yet when we reduce distance to a dollar-and-cents basis—to cost of transportation—it vanishes.

BRITISH MARKET THE BEST

Great Britain Will Always Be an Importer of Food Products

Apart altogether from the question of Canadian commitments for British money invested in the country, the British market has been the saviour of the Canadian farmer from disaster more than once. Next to the home market, it is his most important asset, because it is not only large but permanent, and its conditions are absolutely different from those of the United States markets. The British Islands cannot grow enough to feed the whole of their population. They are compelled to import food.

Ruin the Horse Industry

Horses are much higher and better in Canada than in the United States; and Reciprocity means a ruinous cut in the price of horses here and an equally ruinous flooding of the country with much poorer animals.

HUDSON BAY COMPANY

Commissioner Burbidge, of the Hudson's Bay Company, gave emphatic denial to the report that the company had abandoned for an indefinite time the policy of building extensions through the West. To an inquiry he said: "The policy of rapid extensions of buildings throughout the West by the Hudson's Bay Company has not been modified. At Calgary work will be resumed shortly, when the amended plans are sent back from Toronto. We will also rush construction at Victoria, Regina, and every other point in the West where we had previously planned these extensions. This, of course, applies to Winnipeg."

The weight of evidence seems to indicate that none of us know as much as the law allows.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently

BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs. Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

THE FAVORED NATIONS

They Would Be Able to Enter Canada on Same Terms as United States

The following paragraph has been appearing in the reciprocity press:—

"Reciprocity does not open the Canadian market to the twelve favored nations with which Britain has treaties. In accordance with a resolution passed at the Imperial Conference in June, Britain will abrogate these in so far as they concern Canada."

This statement is not true. The truth is that reciprocity DOES open the Canadian market to the twelve favored nations.

To say that Britain will abrogate there treaties in so far as they concern Canada is to express a hope.

As a statement of fact it is false.

A resolution was passed requesting Britain to "open negotiations" with a view of excepting Canada or any other dominion from the consequences of the favored nation clause.

If the other party to the contract, namely, any of the twelve nations in question, declines to abrogate the treaty, the negotiations must come to a standstill.

If the Canadian market is to be of any value to the favored nation in question, it can be counted on, in its own interest, to decline to surrender its treaty rights in Canada.

If it is not of any value to it, there need be no request from Britain that Canada be excused from the provisions of the favored nation clause.

As matters now stand, the truth is that twelve other nations will have the right to sell their goods in Canada on the same terms as Canada offers to the United States.

Fringes are at present one of the most important trimming features, and will be worn on almost everything.

No bankrupt may sit or vote in the British Parliament.

IF YOU ARE SICK

YOU CONSULT A SPECIALIST

WHY?

Because he has made a special study of the disease you are suffering from, and from the knowledge gained by years of experience knows just what treatment you require.

If you are going into a law-suit, you do the same—consult the best lawyer you can get, and find it cheap in the end.

Now, when you are considering taking Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, do you not think it would pay you to consult one who has had many years experience in that profession, and whose knowledge would be of use to you in enabling you to get the best value for your premiums, with the most liberal policies and absolute guarantees?

If you want what is best in Life, Fire or Accident Insurance, you can get it by calling at, or phoning to

MARKET PRICES

Butter and Eggs Took Jump in Price

The market was brisk this morning and everything seemed to be going at good prices. Butter and eggs took a jump from last week. Possibly the scarcity of these necessaries last Saturday gave the farmers encouragement to ask larger prices to-day. They succeeded fairly well as the number of exhibition visitors made the demand greater.

The following prices prevailed:
Butter per lb.—28c. to 30c.
Eggs per doz—21 and 22c.
Chickens—Per pair $1.
Apples—Per peck 15c.
Pears—Per peck 30c.
Potatoes—Per bag $1.85.

ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS FOR FIRST BIG DAY OF FAIR WENT AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

An Increase of $53 in Gate Money—"Walter Simmons" Took First Race in Three Straight Heats, and "Paterson" Landed Second Event—Big Crowds Were Highly Pleased With The Exhibition.

ALTHOUGH GETTING AWAY TO A BAD START, AS A RESULT OF THE RAIN IN THE MORNING, THE RECEIPTS AT THE FAIR YESTERDAY WERE $53 AHEAD OF LAST YEAR. "WE WERE $21 BEHIND AT SIX O'CLOCK IN THE EVENING," SAID PRESIDENT LEARY TO THE REVIEW, "BUT WE WENT AHEAD AGAIN AT NIGHT, AND WITH THE FINE WEATHER OF TO-DAY THE ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS WILL TAKE A BIG JUMP."

The attendance at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition yesterday afternoon and evening was, without a doubt, a record breaker. Owing to the number of complimentary passes exhibitors' passes, etc., which were given out, the number could not be correctly estimated, at the gate, but several of the directors put it at a number exceeding that of last year. In spite of the threatening nature of the weather, all roads led to the exhibition grounds. The street car service was patronized to capacity all the time.

THE RACES

The chief attraction in the afternoon was the splendid horse racing. As one of the judges remarked, "They are all out to win to-day," and they certainly were. "Walter Simmons," owned by Mr. O'Neill, of Lindsay won all three heats of the 2.30 class. It was a grand fight. In the first heat, unfortunately, a dog ran in front of "Silver Feet," and the driver was thrown. He was in the other two heats, however. "Patterson," Mr. E. Jones' horse, got first money in the 2.18 class, and five heats were necessary to decide the winner.

The following were the results of the races:

2.30 CLASS.

Walter Simmons, O'Neill, Lindsay	1	1	1
Manor King, Hodgins, Orillia	2	4	2
Hazel Brook, Elmhirst, Otonabee	3	2	3
Silver Feet, Fanning, Lindsay	4	3	4

2.18 CLASS.

Paterson, Jones, Peterborough	3	3	1	1	1
Harry Mack, McMann, Peterborough	2	1	2	2	2
Percy H., Storey, Peterborough	1	2	3	4	3

The best time was 2.22 1-2.

Dr. Sinclair, of Cannington, acted in the capacity of starter, while Dr. King and Mr. Harry Winch were the two judges.

EXHIBITOIN BY BOY SCOUTS.

Between the races several high-class attractions were put on before the grand stand, and possibly the one received with the most ovation was the boy scouts' exhibition. The scouts marched past to the strains of the 57th band, and at a given signal dropped the colors as God Save the King was played.

FIRST AID TO INJURED.

Next the scouts scattered about and at a given signal from Scoutmaster Miller a couple of boys would run out to a supposedly injured scout and bind up some part of his body. Then they made stretchers of their coats and staves and marched off with their wounded comrade.

VAUDEVILLE.

During the afternoon there were several performances by the Bollini troupe of trapeze and slack wire artists; the Carl Dammann family of five famous athletes, and the comical trick mule.

STRATTON'S STRING.

J. R. Stratton's string of imported thoroughbred hackneys were exhibited before the grand stand, showing four in hand, unicorn, pairs, single and saddle styles.

There was something doing all the time. When there was not a race on or some specials before the grand stand, judging of driving horses took place, and the crowd always saw something to keep it interested.

EVENING PERFORMANCE.

The grand evening performance surpassed anything ever presented in former years and the large crowd went home thoroughly satisfied when the fireworks said good-night and the band played the National Anthem.

FIREMEN TURNED OUT.

By the permission of the Fire, Water and Light committee, and on the request of the Fair Directors, the fire department gave an exhibition turn-out. They first drove past the grand stand at a walk, and turning, came back at a run, the firemen donning their coats and helmets.

FIREWORKS.

The fireworks was awaited with interest, and those who remained were not disappointed. A five-pointed golden star with G. R. in the centre and the Canadian Emblem—a crown entwined with the Maple Leaf, received rounds of applause.

DOG RACE.

Owing to the number of specialties, the dog race could not be run off yesterday, but was billed to take place this afternoon. Judging by the number of visitors to the city, to-day's attendance will be the greatest of all. The morning broke clear and fine and the directors are very optimistic as to to-day's results.

Besides the racing and grand stand performance this afternoon an Association football match for the R. R. Hall championship challenge cup, which represents the championships of the county of Peterborough between the C.G.E. and All Saints' teams, was on the program.

CANADIAN VICTORS HAD TO SIGN IMMIGRATION PAPERS

Shabby Treatment Accorded Artillery Team on Their Arrival Home.

Lack of space to-day prevents the publishing of a lengthy account of Brigade Sergt.-Major Guerin's trip to England as a member of the Canadian artillery team, which made such a splendid showing in the competitions with the crack English teams. He arrived home yesterday morning, as stated in yesterday's Review. Peterborough's representative is loud in his praise of the treatment accorded to the Canadians throughout the trip. The program arranged for their entertainment was made up of receptions and luncheons, visits to the theatres, outings to innumerable points, in fact, everything possible was done for their pleasure.

The shooting competitions for the Canadian and Londonderry Cups took place at Leeds, and the competition for the Prince of Wales Cup was shot off at the Isle of Wight. Only in the King's Cup were the Canadians behind, and that honor was won by the First Heavy Firing Battery of London, at West Down camp Salisbury Plain.

The Canadians embarked on The "Royal George" for the return trip on September 6th, and had to bear the humiliation at Quebec of signing immigration papers. To say that the members of the team were wrathy at this action on the part of the government, through its officials, would be putting it mild. It was something entirely unlooked for by the winners of three cups.

WEDDING BELLS

ROWEN—COLLINS

Hastings Star—On Tuesday morning at the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, a very pleasant and happy event took place when Rev. Father Bretherton united in marriage Miss Lillian Collins, one of Hastings' most popular young ladies and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, to Mr. P. J. Rowen of Toronto. Miss May Kelly, of Peterboro, cousin of the bride was bridesmaid, and Mr. D. Rowen of Toronto, brother of the groom, was best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a large party of friends assembled to congratulate the newly married couple. Mr. and Mrs. Rowen drove to Norwood in the afternoon taking the four o'clock train for the west, after which they will reside in Toronto. The bride, who has a host of friends was the recipient of a handsome array of most beautiful presents.

A man who refused to give his name, fell from the sidewalk under the feet of a horse on Hunter street, near the Dominion Express Co. office, at noon and was seriously cut about the body. The injured man was taken to Nicholls hospital.

COLLECTIONS ARE $2,000

Contributors Made Splendid Response But More is Needed

Captain Martin, of Toronto, financial representative of the Salvation Army, is in the city, hard at work in the interests of the local corps, which commenced last spring to raise $4,263, which is the total mortgage debt. He has met with splendid success in his collections, and up to last Tuesday contributors had given $2,000. Subscriptions of $500, $350, $205 and smaller amounts were made. Captain Martin however, has found that nearly thirty subscribers have removed from this city, and in order to make up the $3,000 which was promised and which he hopes to have collected by next Saturday, other friends are asked to give their assistance.

MISS NANON WELCH
with "Baby Mine," at The Grand Wednesday, September 20.

"Baby Mine"

Concerning "Baby Mine," which will be seen for the first time at the Grand on Wednesday, Sept. 20th, the London Telegraph, which many people consider the best newspaper in England, says as follows: "There was no doubt about 'Baby Mine' last night. Laughter, which at first was sporadic and intermittent, grew and grew till no one attempted to hold out against it, and the theatre quaked. The convulsions were at their loudest till and after the curtain was down." That was the verdict on Baby Mine, the comedy which Mr. Weedon Grossmith has brought to the Vaudeville Theatre. Is there need to say any more about it? Sometimes, no doubt, having laughed, you repent when you remember what you laughed at, and feel it a duty to warn others from going to do likewise. "Baby Mine" is a play which you may enjoy without afterwards feeling that you were a fool. It is ferociously ridiculous."

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT FAIR TO-DAY

The directors of the fair were made happy this afternoon by the dense crowds which visited the grounds. All previous attendance records will be shattered to-day. At three o'clock the street cars were still carrying capacity crowds to the exhibition.

MR. BURNHAM HAD LARGE AUDIENCE AT SELWYN

Government Unfit to Control People's Money—The Stratton Circular a Deliberate Lie.

Another large audience heard Mr. Burnham at Selwyn last night. Mr. Geo. S. McConkey was chairman of the meeting and after his introduction to the audience, Mr. Burnham said that the present government had shown a strange ineptitude in the control of corruption. In fact, corruption had become so general and on so vast a scale that the elector would soon have to take serious notice of it. All honor to the French constituents of Lanctot M.P., who, though white washed by the government was thrown out of the Liberal convention bodily when he asked for re-nomination. Have we the courage to do that? [illegible], continued Mr. Burnham in smashing the Liberal party. He is not breaking up the Conservative party. How, then can there be any hope in holding him down except through Mr. Borden? Sir Wilfrid's majority is in Quebec where Conservatives have only 11 seats. It is on account of this that the French papers are making frantic race appeals to the French. "Never mind Bourassa," they say. "if you beat Laurier the French control at Ottawa is gone." Mr. Burnham devoted some time to the explanation of this free state pensions for old people, which had received the backing of his leader. Old people should not be left by the state to a dependent old age. Britain has the pension scheme. If he (the speaker) is elected, Canada will have it inside 6 months. Reciprocity, the speaker said, had broken down. It was absurd to send, he said, our export trade to Britain over to the U. S. It would ruin us. The pact was suggested by the United States and for good reasons. "It is a cunningly devised plan to get our farm products and pulpwood into U.S. control. Mr. Stratton says his meetings are good and that mine are poor. "Well! if he is satisfied, I am. I am not aware that it is any especial honor to run again, Mr. Stratton. He may think it is but frankly, I don't."

"I regret to have to say," said Mr. Burnham, "that the circulars sent out by Mr. J. R. Stratton, alleging that I forced my attentions upon the Roman Catholics is a deliberate lie, and he knows it."

"Why does he not go to the Roman Catholics and get them to say I did so? The answer is that no Roman Catholic in the county of Peterboro as fallen so low as to say anything of the sort."

The meeting was brought to an end with cheers.

MILK BY-LAW CAME UP BUT MILKMEN FAILED TO APPEAR

By-law of Amendments Laid Over for Another Meeting —Council Business.

PAVING REPORT

The City Engineer reported on the cost of paving Chambers street and Hunter street, from Park to Belmont Avenue and also on a sewer for Sophia street.

ACTION FOR $500

A. E. Dixon wrote on behalf of James O'Connell, giving notice that an action of $500 for damages would be entered against the city. Mr. O'Connell complains that his property at the west approach to the Smith street bridge has suffered through the raising of the grade. This matter was referred to the Legal committee.

The Peterboro Bowling alleys have been removed and the proprietor asked for a rebate on his license. The Finance committee will decide.

The matter of placing a footbridge across the C.P.R. bridge will be deferred on account of prospective work on the line.

Lights in the western part of the city is receiving attention at the hands of the Fire, Water and Light committee, so Ald. Graham informed Ald. Bradburn. The removal of the lights on George street to the centre of the street, is held back through the lack of some small wheels.

A by-law to authorize a grant of $500 to the 57th Band for its summer concerts was put throguh.

The Bonner Worth Company will receive their first installment of [illegible] from the city, the company having complied with the agreement, calling for such a loan to be made.

TURNERS' EXHIBIT AT EXHIBITION

House Tent Attracting Many Visitors—Other Goods

No firm on the fair grounds has a display more calculated to attract general attention than has the local firm of J. J. Turner and Sons. Their tents are everywhere, in fact it would probably been an impossibility to have held the fair without the aid of their manufacture. Where ever the tents are used they are giving perfect satisfaction and meeting all the requirements demanded.

The firm has erected a house tent, the same one shown at the Toronto exhibition. The style of tent is admirably adapted for the purpose for which it is designed and in addition is neat, splendidly constructed, and very serviceable for camping purposes. J. J. Turner & Sons also have an exhibit of rugs, blankets, etc., which are greatly in demand. A sleeping bag manufactured by the firm is shown. This outfit is so constructed as to be capable of use in the most cold climate being warmly lined, and rendering it impervious to the inroads of a cold atmosphere. It is very light and can be conveniently carried.

"The Bowery Girl"

"The Bowery Girl" proved to be a strong attraction at the Grand opera house last night, and Ernie Marks and his company gave splendid satisfaction to a full house.

The plot of Philip Randal, with the assistance of Silas Skinner, to wreck the life of Richard Rolstan, the accountant at Randal's bank, was interestingly told by the respective characters. Right, however, won out in the end, owing to the clever detective work of Tommy Teeters (Ernie Marks) with Betty Bingle (Kitty Marks) as his pal. The specialties were all good, the songs and funny gags of Franklin Brooks being far above the average.

To-night the company concludes its engagement at the Grand with a strong offering, "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse."

SMALL FINE IN ASSAULT CASE

Richard Tedford Also Had to Pay the Costs

Row Over Contract to Plaster Defendants House

The wages dispute and assault case in which Alfred H. McQuaig charged Richard Tedford with non-payment of wages and bodily assault, was threshed out in county police court this morning before County Magistrate Edmison. The hearing occupied the greater part of an hour and a half, and the judgment handed out was that Richard Tedford be fined $2 and costs, or $14 in all. D. O'Connell, who acted for the defendant, considered such exorbitant costs preposterous, when the fact that the actual fine was only two dollars.

The expenses of three witnesses from Warsaw had to be taken into account, and it was these that made the costs so much.

W. H. Moore, K.C., acted for McQuaig.

The parties in the case reside near Warsaw. The facts of the dispute are that a couple of weeks previous to Sept. 8, Tedford asked McQuaig, at the latter's suggestion, to plaster a shack at his earliest convenience. The shack was situated about two miles from Warsaw and was owned by Tedford. McQuaig, who is a plasterer by trade, was too busy at the time, but told Tedford that he would do it in a few days. Eventually, when the complainant went to the place to do the work on September 8th, taking a man with him, he discovered that the job was finished by another man. He want back looking for Tedford in Warsaw, and the two met at Kidd's blacksmith shop. Words were exchanged, which led to blows. McQuaig alleged that Tedford was the assailant. The other said that McQuaig called him a liar. At any rate Tedford jumped on McQuaig, got him down, scratched his face, and when he had him prostrate, ordered him to take it back. John Dean interfered and McQuaig said he gave in.

His worship, in giving his decision, though that the wages part of it came under the jurisdiction of the Division court.

This case was withdrawn and judgment given only in the assault case.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE

"Fruit-a-tives" saved my Life

RIVIÈRE À PIERRE, Q., May 9, 1910.

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites Of The Church.

At this time, a lady strongly urged me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again, and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am well."

Madame ARTHUR TOURANGEAU.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of intensified fruit juices and always cures Indigestion.

A FARMER WITH SOME CONVICTIONS

"Having given my property into the hands of five real estate agents to sell, and having advertised it in five papers, I might be allowed through this medium to say a word about it as I see it. This property of 200 acres is in the best township in the county; is in one of the best sections in that township. One hundred of it is amongst the best in that section, having been assessed about the highest in the township. The other hundred is somewhat inferior. Now, in proof of its quality with the Divine blessing, we sold off this property upwards of two thousand dollars' worth in 1910, and this present year, 1911, we threshed over $160.00 worth of timothy seed, and am now cutting about 15 acres of red clover seed. It may be equalled in this township, but I do not know where. Next to preaching the gospel I would rather be a farmer than any other calling, as the deal is directly between man and his Maker.

Our other crops being nearly all good this present year, and ground clean, or nearly so, where farming is well mixed with faith and prayer, you need not kneel to your fellowman or sue to a foreign power. Were I not thankful to my Heavenly Father I would be an ingrate indeed.

A RULER OF EGYPT

Succeeding Lord Cromer as British Agent at Cairo, Sir Eldon Gorst, whose death has caused profound regret, accomplished much in that troubled part of the globe. His knowledge of Egyptians was most extensive, for he first went to Egypt in 1886, and four years later was appointed Controller of Direct Revenues under the Egyptian Government. Sir Eldon was a great personal friend of the Khedive whose confidence he completely won, and, on the occasion of Sir Eldon's marriage to Miss Rudd, daughter of the millionaire partner of the late Cecil Rhodes, his Highness was present at the ceremony and gave the happy pair many magnificent gifts.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

Peculiar Grounds at Moosejaw—"Ball in a Knothole" Story

The [illegible] family recently held a re-union, and there were present John, Charles, Joe and George, all famous in a baseball way.

Marty O'Toole, $22,500, has purchased a fruit farm in Oregon in the same section where a number of other players have profitable investments.

After Pat Moran's catching days are over, his usefulness to the Phillies will not end. Manager Doolin says he intends to utilize Patrick as a scout.

Pitcher Cather is more than holding his end up with Troy. Corey is easily the best man on the Wilkesbarre team. Both will be back with Toronto next year.

Larry Piper, the Toronto boy, who has played with Winnipeg for seven years, and started this season with Oshkosh in the Wisconsin-Illinois League, is playing left for Calgary.

Three of King Bodie's brothers are playing ball with a semi-professional team on the Pacific Coast, where the White Sox star first attracted attention by his fence-breaking proclivities.

President Barrow says that he aims to have travelling teams meet different umpires in every town. As a rule, the home team does get a bit the better of the decisions, and Barrow's schedule is a wise one.

They have a catcher at Davenport who is said to be so slow on the bases that the pitchers actually pass him to get him on, knowing that all base running will thereby be locked unless somebody hits the ball over the fence.

Ty Cobb, a sick man, is playing his head off for the Tigers—and this is Detroit's appreciation: He struck out recently with a couple of men on bases, and the loyal bleacherites hissed and reviled him. It's a pity Tyrus can't be sold to some city that would appreciate him.

The story of a ball sticking in a knot hole in the fence and giving the batter a home run, told as an extraordinary incident, was duplicated in a recent game in the Washington State League, when at Raymond, Triplet hit one against the fence that "stuck" and made the circle on it before the fielder could dig the ball out.

The Moose Jaw Club has a peculiarly laid out grounds, and depends on the honesty of the fans for support. The field is enclosed with nothing but an open wire fence, and if one feels like being a "piker," he can stand outside and watch the game at no expense. However, few if any of them do that, and the fans of Moose Jaw are to be congratulated on the way they are turning out.

Washington is the first city to come across with a woman baseball scout. She lives in Lowell, Mass., and has written several letters to McAleer concerning ball players in the vicinity of where she lives, and Mac sends Mike Kahoe, the old Red catcher, up to see them work. He lost one man. She recommended Wolfgang, whom the St. Louis Browns grabbed. McAleer is thinking of sending her out on the road.

THE MENTALLY DEFICIENT

Many People Now at Liberty Should Be Denied Right to Marry

The measurement of mental power is a subject to which medical men are turning their attention at the present time, and which they say the Governments will very shortly appoint commissions to look into thoroughly. J. P. Downey, Superintendent of the Hospital for the Insane at Orillia, has written an article entitled "The Binet System of Measuring Intelligence," which appears in the new number of the "Bulletin of the Ontario Hospitals for Insane," and deals with the question of allowing people mentally deficient, yet not totally devoid of mentality, to mingle with society and to marry.

Mr. Downey contends that there are many people allowed to walk the streets and to marry who should be kept in an institution and under proper care. The people referred to are designated as high grades and able to look after themselves to a certain extent, but whose children are of a lower grade mentally, and, in many cases, a burden to their friends and the province.

It is pointed out that a boy of 19 or 20 may not be developed more than an average child of 7 or 8, and that, while some children may appear bright and alert as other, yet be deficient. These, Mr. Downey contends, should be under proper institutional care.

This class of people is increasing every year, and before long will be a source of great trouble and expense to the Government, and the only way of stamping out the cause is by placing these people in proper care while very young, and preventing them from marrying, says Mr. Downey.

STEWARDS IN CUSTODY

They Had Refused to Put Mail Ashore and Went On Strike

Fifty-seven men, comprising the entire contingent of first and second-class stewards on board the Allan Liner Victorian, were arrested and driven to jail at Montreal recently on the arrival of that vessel from Liverpool. Their arrest was due to the fact that they had refused to perform their duties at Rimouski and during the voyage up the river from that point. When the vessel arrived at Rimouski the stewards refused to assist in putting the mail ashore.

The mail was put ashore with some little delay, but both at breakfast and at lunch time the stewards refused to serve meals to the passengers and watched them in scornful silence. The chief steward, the second steward and four stewardesses did their best to satisfy the passengers. The cooks and the third stewards did not take any part in the movement.

KIDNAPPED BOY IN CONVENT

Young Stack Believed to Have Been Sent to Quebec

John King Stack, the eight-year-old son of Richard L. Stack, a millionaire lumberman of Escanaba, Mich., is believed to be in a convent at Quebec. A letter signed "W" was received by Chief of Police Young, in which the writer says a boy named John King Stack was placed in the convent a year and a half ago. This was about the time the boy was kidnapped from the home of his grandmother at St. Louis. An investigation is being made.

WIFE'S BED ON FIRE

Farmer Was Anxious to See if She Really Was Ill

Charles Dubois, a farmer from St. Pierre de Wakefield, was brought to the Hull jail by Bailiff de Coeli, of Hull, on a warrant charging him with assault on his wife and members of his family. He is alleged to have set fire to the bed on which his wife lay sick, just to ascertain if she was really ill or not. When the unfortunate woman jumped from the bed to escape being burned, it is claimed, he swore she was shamming sickness and made her work around the house.

On another occasion, it is alleged, he chased the whole family into the woods with two sticks of dynamite.

Four years ago he stabbed a neighbor in the course of a quarrel and bit off the top of the man's thumb.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If In Doubt About the Right Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill, from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak, there is no pill like them.

"Speaking of my own experience with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I can say they have proved the most stimulating pills for the liver I have found. I have proved their tonic action upon digestion, and the same results have been secured by friends upon whom I have urged their use. The manufacturers are to be congratulated upon possessing so valuable a prescription, and the public should know that so valuable a remedy has been placed at their command."

WILSON SURROUNDED.

Manitoba Bad Man Is Cornered In the Bush.

Manitou, Man., Sept. 16.—Word was received late yesterday that Bill Wilson, the alleged assailant of Miss Gladys Price, who was held captive in the woods near here for thirty hours the first part of this week, has been sighted and positively identified at Bluff, twelve miles south of Snowflake in the Pembina Valley.

"We have got him surrounded, but we want more men so that we can overawe him with numbers," is the appeal brought here. A large posse was hurriedly organized and started for Bluff.

Wilson, it is said, was seen on the edge of the woods but escaped into the deep undergrowth before he could be captured. The posse hopes to capture the fugitive without bloodshed. Officers are being rushed to the scene to prevent possible lynching.

Miss Price yesterday identified a photograph of her assailant. It had been brought from the police records of Winnipeg, where the original, under the name of Wesley Osborne, was arrested some weeks ago as a vagrant.

Miss Price's Story.

Winnipeg, Sept. 16.—Miss Gladys Price, the young school teacher near Snowflake, tells of her kidnapping at the hands of the bandit on whose trail an armed posse of hundreds of men now are.

She was seated in the schoolroom, she said, when a man, said to be Henry Wilson, suddenly appeared in the doorway and pointed a rifle at her. The little teacher told him to shoot. A struggle followed, and Wilson hit the girl over the head with a bottle, and then carried her into the woods.

All night long she moved about to keep warm and watching for a chance to escape, but the menacing rifle prevented. By daylight the girl said Wilson's liquor and cigarettes gave out, and the effects of the liquor seemed to wear off. At 7 o'clock he finally consented to allow her to return home.

"Don't go and tell them," was his parting warning. "I'm sorry this happened."

Bets or Bribes?

Berlin, Sept. 16.—A band of seven Liberals are known to have started out on a betting campaign. The bets are small ones, for one dollar each, but the design seems cleverly planned for the evident purpose of queering Conservative voters on election day. One man in Waterloo is known to have made fourteen of these bets.

Victory is coming Weichel's way, and the Liberals are beginning to realize this, and the riding will have to be watched very closely in order to save it from a repetition of 1899, when it was besmirched with bribery in an Ontario election by Liberals.

Sues For Libel.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The second libel action of the election campaign was entered yesterday by Mr. J. H. Rainville, Opposition candidate in Chambly-Vercheres, who took suit against Mr. Aime Geoffrion, a merchant of St. Paul street, for $5,000, as a result of charges made by Mr. Geoffrion at a meeting in Longueuil Thursday afternoon. It is alleged by Mr. Rainville that Mr. Geoffrion accused him of having sold the contested provincial election case in Rouville in 1909, and that in doing so he had deceived his alleged client, Mr. George Ares.

The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. CLAWED BY LION.

Girl at Syracuse May Die as Result of Temerity.

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 16.—Clawed and bitten by a huge lion in a sideshow at the State Fair yesterday afternoon, Laura Burns, 7 years old, of Morrisville, is hovering between life and death to-day at a Syracuse hospital.

Spectators were not supposed to get nearer than four or five feet from the lion cage. The little girl climbed the rope barrier. The lion reached out its paw and fastened its claws in the child's head. He drew the child toward the cage, while her screams rang through the tent. With his other paw he clawed at the child's face and tried to draw her through the bars.

The little girl's screams of terror attracted throngs to the tent. People crowded through the entrance and jammed against the cage. Attendants beat the lion with bars and prodded the infuriated animal until the child was released.

When the little girl had been finally freed it was found that the lion had torn out one of her eyes, torn off an ear and lacerated her face and the upper part of her body.

The great throng and the shouts of the crowd and attendents frightened the rest of the beasts confined in the tent. Keepers moved among them with loaded weapons, fearing that they might attempt to escape.

Wild Beasts Get Loose.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Five ferocious animals in a midway menagerie at the fair broke out of their cages yesterday morning, and for nearly an hour struck terror throughout the grounds. Fortunately, owing to a heavy rain, there were few visitors about.

The animals were a big East Indian leopard, an African lion, a Brasilian jaguar, a panther, and what is known as a by-hybrid.

Their escape was noticed when the leopard thrust his head into a tent occupied by one of the show women.

The only man injured was the chief trainer, Capt. Herbertine, who was scratched on the leg by the lion.

The animals all took to the water, but were finally caged after being lassoed and secured with ropes.

WANT FIRE MARSHAL.

Chiefs at Sault Ste. Marie Hold Their Convention.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 16.—Provincial fire chiefs of Ontario, numbering 30, met in convention here yesterday. The first topic under discussion was a paper on "Aims and Objects of the Association," read by Vice-President France of the Bay Wagon Works, Woodstock. France dealt with the work to be undertaken along the lines of a fire marshal and provincial firemen's pension fund. The report also dealt with the standardization of municipal fire appliances and the establishment of a bureau of information and technical library in conjunction with the office of secretary. The report was adopted.

Municipal inspection and bylaws governing same was dealt with by Chief Bains of Owen Sound. The paper had reference to the inspection of fire chiefs for fire prevention purposes. The report was adopted.

Chief Finch of Guelph read an interesting paper on "The Advisability of Having a Fire Marshal for the Province of Ontario, His Duties and Qualifications." A strong committee was appointed to urge upon the Provincial Government the necessity of creating such an office. The question of pensions was referred to the committee mentioned above to report at the next meeting of the association. The feeling in regard to the appointment of a provincial fire marshal and the pension fund met the unanimous approval of the members of the association.

Suspected of Burglary.

Brockville, Sept. 16.—The Brockville police have in custody a young Indian named Joseph Bach of St. Regis, who is suspected of being implicated in the burglary of Levi Bailey's jewelry store at Cornwall this week. He was picked up as a drunk, but in his possession was found several articles of jewelry which the police afterwards learned he offered for sale around town. When questioned, Bach said he puchased a bracelet from a Brockville man and was made a present of the other articles. A description of the articles tallies with some of the goods missing from the factory town. The Cornwall authorities have been communicated with.

Falsified the Books.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—Adelard Duval was sentenced to three years in the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary by Magistrate Lanctot yesterday. The accused had pleaded guilty to stealing $900 from the Laing Packing & Provision Co., but the evidence showed that the accused had stolen the sum of $1,800 in eighteen months, and after his arrest he returned to the officials of the company the sum of $1,200, but refused to make any statement regarding the balance.

The accused had been the manager of a store and by falsifying the books from day to day, he managed to steal the money.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—At the meeting of the Council of the Ontario Association of Architects yesterday the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, A. F. Wickson, Toronto (re-elected); first vice-president, Jules F. Wegman, Toronto; second vice-president, C. P. Meredith, Ottawa; treasurer, Grant Helliwell, Toronto; registrar, H. E. Moore, Toronto.

Baron Lochee Dead.

London, Sept. 16.—The Right Hon. Edmund Robertson, First Baron Lochee, of Gowrie, is dead. He was born in 1845. He was Liberal M.P. for Dundee from 1885 to 1908, Civil Lord of Admiralty 1892-95, and Secretary of the Admiralty 1906-08.

French Soldiers Go Home.

Paris, Sept. 16.—It was announced at the Ministry of War yesterday that the soldiers whose terms of service are expiring would return to their homes as in ordinary years. This will do much to relieve the public concern.

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the "secret" method of making such trade agreements, whereby citizens and even members of parliament are denied the right to make effectual protest against the terms, before ratification.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian workingmen.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government; whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

Officials Want Off.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—A movement is on foot at the City Hall to make Thursday, election day, a civic holiday. It is pointed out that many civic employes are returning officers, quite a number have to go out of town to vote, and as the polls are only open from 9 to 5, the City Hall must give each employe two hours' leave to vote according to law. This will interfere with the business at the City Hall, so the idea of promulgating a civic holiday is favored.

Conductor Injured.

Brockville, Sept. 16.—T. W. Higginson, a Grand Trunk conductor, was brought to his home here yesterday painfully bruised as the result of an accident sustained at Coteau by being struck by a shunter. His clothing caught one of the axles of the tender and he was dragged a considerable distance before his predicament was noticed by the engineer. Higginson had a close shave from being dragged under the wheels.

Lightning Does Damage.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 16.—A terrific thunder and lightning storm passed over this city at midnight. It lasted for a full two hours and the rainfall was the greatest it has been this year.

Lightning burned out the Bell Telephone Co.'s cable on Park avenue, and cut off all long-distance communication east and west, as well as burning out fuses and private 'phones. The Chatham Gas & Electric Co.'s wires, leading to North Chatham, were burned in two and citizens on that side of the river had no lights. A bolt hit a barn on the premises of R. J. Dunlop, Richmond street, and tore a portion of the roof off, driving the lining into the hay, but did not set the building on fire. A new dwelling being erected by Albert Tomlinson on Lorne avenue was also struck. There it tore a chimney to pieces and ripped up a chicken coop beneath into splinters.

Reports from various parts of the county are to the effect that heavy frosts have done much damage to the tobacco crop, which is a very heavy one. On many West Kent farms growers of tobacco will realize $400 to $500 an acre for the weed. One young city man who rented four acres of land just outside the limit has cleared over $1,000 on his tobacco, after paying all expenses for hired help, etc. This is a quick return for three months of anxiety.

A girl who can sing a little, and who thinks she is a great singer, is to be sincerely pitied.

BOWMANVILLE FAIR

Progress is the watchword at Bowmanville. The town is booming and the West Durham Fair Directors have caught the inspiration and have planned to give this year's exhibition a boost forward. Considerable money has been added to horse classes, making the prizes greater than ever before. A new poultry house has been built and prizes added. Ladies' department and domestic science have been increased. Bowmanville Fair is known far and wide as one of the best agricultural Exhibitions in this province, for its display of horses, cattle sheep, swine, poultry and products of farm, orchard, garden and home. Records of sale of live stock on Fair Day and afterwards prove the claim. Dates of Fair, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 19 and 20. Single fare for round trip on railways from Monday to Thursday.

J. S. MOORCRAFT,
Secretary, Bowmanville.

Etna's Losses Enormous.

Catania, Sicily, Sept. 16.—Clouds of smoke from Mount Etna hides the sun, and makes the atmosphere in the vicinity intolerable.

The volcano continues to throw out lava, cinders and ashes from the craters and a hundred new fissures.

The river of lava flowing to the north has separated into four main streams, the largest of which is moving toward Alcantara, and is two miles from Francavilla. The railway station of Solicchiata is in immediate danger.

It is estimated that the present eruption has caused so far a property loss of $20,000,000.

Anti-Fight Campaign.

London, Sept. 16.—A communication made public by which the National Free Church Council, explaining that the council is "not attacking generally the art of self-defence," but only a specific contest, is taken as confirmation of the suggestion that the intervention against the Johnson-Wells battle is largely due to opposition to a fight between a colored man and a white man, which may lead to racial bitterness.

The council appeals to all ministers to start an anti-fight campaign in the churches to-morrow, and so arouse the conscience of the nation.

London, Sept. 15.—An unknown Englishman from beyond the seas, has donated $50,000 to the nation for a rifle range with the statement that his patriotism has been aroused by the war scare.

HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

BOTH CANDIDATES WORKING HARD

East Riding is Stirred up Over Political Fight

Special to The Review

Havelock, Sept. 16—It cannot be said that East Peterboro is on fire over the political issue now being discussed and which will receive final judgment on the 21st, but the riding is certainly stirred up. Both candidates are putting forward strenuous efforts and are being ably assisted by their backers. Not for many years has so aggressive a campaign been waged by either party and interest will be at the high tension mark by the time polling day arrives. Attention is particularly being directed to the farmer and for several reasons. In the first place the political issue which the election will decide will affect the farmer perhaps more than any other class of people. Then again, the present member for this riding, is himself a farmer and during his three years at Ottawa, has given special attention to the farmers' interests, and it is for this reason that he is getting their support, and that his opponents are making strenuous efforts to counteract it.

ARTHUR HAWKES CHAMPION OF BRITISH-BORN.

Reprinted from The Toronto World Aug. 8th, 1911

Arthur Hawkes is one of the new men. Political upheavals are like earthquakes in which great peaks are shouldered up from the depths and new islands spot the face of the former unbroken ocean. Canada is in the throes of a new birth, and when the passion is over, Canada will be transfigured. Her ideals will be changed, or ennobled; her politics will be of a different order; her public men will respond to a spirit such as the past has not known. In very truth, as President Taft has declared, Canada has come to the parting of the ways.

"The World" went down yesterday to take counsel with Mr. Hawkes about the new state of affairs, for The World" believes Mr. Hawkes is going to have a good deal to say during the next six weeks which will be of importance to Canadians. He has been heard on other questions, and he has been read, and whether with tongue or pen, Mr Hawkes is one of the brainiest, most forcible and picturesque thinkers in Canada to-day. There are very few speakers in Canada who equal him. Most oratorical reputations are artificial. They depend on occasion and background as a rule more than natural ability. Place many of the best of Canadian speakers in Mr. Hawkes' place, and his speech-making would be regarded as mediocre. Place Mr. Hawkes in a Cabinet position and the country would be electrified by his eloquence. The people who listen to him are very frequently electrified anyway. Such a facility of clear-cut, intelligible utterance, such a genius for retort, such a fund of humor, such resources of anecdote and experience from a career that embraces both Britain and Canada, as a farmer, as a newspaper man, as a railway immigration official and covers 200,000 miles of Canadian travel.

FROM ENGLAD'S GARDEN.

Mr. Hawkes can tell the difference between men of Kent and Kentish men, for he was in the garden of England himself. His brother John is known all over the West, and is now provincial librarian of Saskatchewan. Arthur Hawkes is an ardent imperialist, a member of the Empire Club, where his encounter with a recently deceased prelate will be remembered and his spirited defence of English trades unionists, women suffragettes and other progressives.

He is a man who would not be singled out as a likely candidate for aviation honors. As a birdman his activity is mental. Physically, he is almost as ponderous as Big Bill Taft. Mentally, he is as alert as Big Bill's predecessor. He has given up all sorts of good positions to move into better ones.

The last move he made in a series of strategic abandonments of good positions for better ones brought him into control of "The British News of Canada," a lively and informing weekly paper which has a big circulation among immigrants, past, present and prospective. It appeals to the British-born in Canada, and Mr. Hawkes has a peculiar aptitude for the problems that beset the British-born, having been one himself, set down on the illimitable prairies a quarter of a century ago in his early 'teens. He tells the British-born how to come to Canada, when to come, what to come for, and warns those who shouldn't come. The British-born are his peculiar care, and in caring for them he cares for Canada in a special and valuable way.

SEES THROUGH RECIPROCITY.

And that is how he has come into the debate on reciprocity. He sees as very few men are better qualified to see, what the bearings of the reciprocity issue are for those who have crossed the sea to meet comrades of the flag, and who would feel betrayed by any step that might tend to place them or their children in the ward of the American Republic.

"Yes," said Mr. Hawkes, "these British-born come to this country unique among our immigrants, for they are Canadian citizens the moment they land. They do not need naturalization papers; they follow the flag. In the west the Americans come over, but they do not come because they want to take their place in Canadian politics. They come solely because they want to be better off. To the American settlers the British-born represents the British Empire. They are living epistles to be read and known of all men.

"They owe it as a special duty to become one with Canada, to give their hearts and hands to Canadians, to be one with Canadians. Things are different for the American in Canada. He finds things here essentially British, British justice, British public standards.

"The British-born thinks imperially, but he must learn to think Canadianly. He must approximate to our own way of doing things.

THREE QUARTERS OF A MILLION.

"There are 750,000 of the British-born in Canada." Mr. Hawkes stated with the air of a man throwing a good deal of light on a dark problem. It was in the face of that fact that he organized the Canada-British Association, which has already made itself felt and is likely to be a power in the coming elections. Meetings have been arranged for forty different towns. The campaign was opened at Midland. Mr. Hawkes took exception to the criticism of one magazine writer that the movement might stir prejudice.

"Nothing of the sort. It isn't for the exaltation of the British-born. It is for the exaltation of Canada. We desire to walk humbly before the native-born—but not too humbly," he added, with the droll twinkle that convulses an audience.

"The British-born comes to this country. He knows little of England, and precious little of Canada. He sits down and is expected to take broad views of the Dominion. He doesn't know how to begin. Who will tell him? Only those can do so who have had opportunities of learning the country."

NEW TIMES, NEW MEN.

Mr Hawkes has had the opportunity. How he has used it and will use it we believe will be one of the factors of the reciprocity campaign.

Every crisis brings its own champions. The facts that half a continent hangs on the decision of the Canadian nation, either to ally itself commercially with the great republic to the south, and abandon the results of the struggles of three centuries; or to retain and strengthen the bond that holds the motherland to British North America, presents one of those intense and stirring climaxes in national development which in the perspective of history are regarded as great turning points in the world's evolution, and so Mr. Hawkes regards it.

"The reciprocity issue is not merely whether the farmer shall receive more on one side of the line or the other, or the consumer pay less; or if one political party, whether better or worse than another, shall rule the country; but whether the great Dominion of Canada is to remain proof against the influences, commercial, political, social, moral, that would make it more amenable to the scream of the American eagle, and less faithful to the majesty of the British lion," he remarked.

"The World" has always regarded the independent man as the political salvation of the country. The partyman, who always votes for the party, right or wrong, in the very nature of things must sink his conscience and his principles at times. The independents, in the very nature of things, must be the men who rely on conscience and principle. They run straight when the party swerves, and the partisans are never able to see the curve which history records.

GOING STRAIGHT.

"Oh, yes, I know," said Mr. Hawkes, "the partisan will be anxious to have it thought that he is going straight and the independent making the curve, but the plummet and square of history tell the tale.

"The time has come for Canada to choose, perhaps finally, between remaining in the orbit of the empire, and achieving first renown in the constellation of kindred British nations, and gravitating to the lesser glories of the republic.

"In the United States there is no illusion as to the extent to which commercial and political control may be interchangeable terms. The Yankees know what meaning they have in their minds. There should be no doubt about the meaning in ours.

"It is her people that make Canada," repeated Mr. Hawkes from his appeal to the British-born; "people just like you and me who have done it. Out of the solitude—a community. Out of vacancy—a nation. Out of a lone frontier—a bulwark of an empire, the envy of a republic. The midwives of Downing Street were more bother than use when Canada was born. We have to be careful that the nurses at Ottawa do not let the child be kidnapped."

A MAN OF POWER.

Mr. Hawkes' picturesque language is full of big ideas. It is one thing to have ideas and another to make them blaze in your eyes and burn in your heart. He can do both. He has the faith that overcame wildernesses, to use his own phrase. There is no better entertainment to be had, nor more valuable instruction, than to hear Mr. Hawkes in a two hours' speech. The audience always wants more. He has a big heart, and that is more than half the secret. Behind the big brain is the love of little children, and the honor of good women, among whom his wife is his queen, and he has that knowledge of the home and the farmstead that makes politics a new and fascinating story for women to hear. This is Arthur Hawkes, the man. For Hawkes, the writer, the speaker, the politician, you must read his paper, study his pamphlets, go to his meetings. You will find him one of the best types in the country of the British-born.

FEW POTATOES IN EAST PETERBORO

Present Supply Does Not Come Up to Demands

Special to The Review

Havelock, Sept. 16—The potato crop in East Peterboro this year has been next thing to a failure and the yield will be smaller than for several years. Even at the present time, the amount of potatoes available does not come up to the demand and local merchants have found it necessary to bring in shipments from other points. Lack of rain at a time when it would have been of most use in the development of the crop combined with other drawbacks is responsible for the short yield and while they are late in maturing and may be more plentiful later on, still there will be nothing like enough to supply the demand. They are selling at $1.90 per bag now.

ACCIDENT TO HASTING'S MAN

Engine Started and Foot Was Terribly Bruised

Hastings, Sept. 15—Mr. Geo. Miller was the victim of a very painful accident on Tuesday morning which will likely lay him up for some time.

In adjusting a belt in his shop he stepped up on the frame of his engine, placing his foot just beneath the crank shaft, and between it and the frame of the engine, where the space when the crank shaft is down is only about a quarter of an inch.

Just as he was adjusting the belt a young man passed the engine and his sleeve caught on the starting mechanism, causing the engine to fire, thereby driving the heavy crank shaft down on Mr. Miller's foot, tearing the flesh from the bone and bruising it terribly. Fortunately Dr. Edmison was not far away and the wound was dressed before too much blood was lost and Mr. Miller was taken home.

HEAR WHAT ARTHUR HAWKES HAS TO SAY TO THE BRITISH-BORN TO-MORROW NIGHT

"NOW FOR THE ANNEXATION OR THE CONQUEST OF CANADA"

What an Influential Trade Newspaper Says:—"Give us Cuba, Mexico and Canada and the Balance of the World Can Have the Rest."

Southern Lumber Journal.

"Since our last issue the Senate has ratified the Canadian Reciprocity treaty and President Taft has affixed his signature to the bill. But before it becomes a law the measure has got to be ratified by the Canadian Government, and the two ruling parties in Canada have made this treaty the issue for the approaching campaign, and the result remains to be seen. By some it is contended that Canada will surely ratify this measure, but by others it is contended that there are grave doubts as to whether such will be the case or not. Let us see what we see.

"Be that as it may, the people of the United States, through their Representatives in Congress and the U. S Senate should straightway demand that negotiations be instituted without delay by Secretary of State Knox FOR THE PEACEABLE ANNEXATION OF CANADA; BUT, FOR ANNEXATION, IF IT SHOULD HAVE TO COME ABOUT THROUGH CONQUEST. If there is any virtue in the reciprocity treaty as ratified by the United States Congress and signed by the President some days ago, it is to be found in the fact that THIS INSTRUMENT LAYS THE FOUNDATION STONE FOR THE ANNEXATION OF A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD HAVE LONG SINCE BEEN PART OF THE UNITED STATES. President Taft and the advocates of this measure have made this plain in many of their speeches and addresses on the subject. That it will ultimately come we have not a doubt. There may be and doubtless will be objection to such a step in the Dominion Government at this time, but mark the prediction, ANNEXATION SENTIMENT IS GOING TO RAPIDLY CRYSTALIZE AMONG OUR CANADIAN COUSINS UNTIL THAT ISSUE WILL ULTIMATELY SWEEP EVERYTHING BEFORE IT.

"Whatever the United States goes gunning for she usually lands, and history is ever repeating itself. For instance, we might cite Cuba, the Phillipines and other instances of conquest and practical annexation during the past few years. These are but illustrations of what we can do when we try. We are to-day the first and greatest among nations of the earth, and WITH CANADA AND HER WONDERFUL RESOURCES ADDED TO OUR ALREADY WORLDWIDE AND ALL POWERFUL ASSETS, WE COULD EASILY SAY 'PEACE BE STILL' AND MAKE THE OTHER NATIONS OF THE WORLD COME AND GO AT OUR BECK AND CALL.

"Of course, it is necessary to our well being and that of other countries that the United States maintain the most friendly relations with Great Britain, and while it is safe to say that the Mother Country would reluctantly part with her fair daughter and Canadian Provinces, yet WITH THE UNITED STATES BACKING CANADA AND CANADA WORKING IN HARMONY WITH THE UNITED STATES FOR ANNEXATION, GREAT BRITAIN WOULD BE POWERLESS TO HELP HERSELF AND COULD, THEREFORE, ONLY SIT ON THE FENCE AND WATCH THE PROCESSION PASS BY. LET ANNEXATION OF CANADA, THEREFORE BE THE WATCHWORD NOW AND HEREAFTER, UNTIL THE UNITED STATES BECOMES MASTER OF THE LAND AS WELL AS THE HIGH SEAS, FOR SUCH IS BOUND TO COME ABOUT.

"Annexation sentiment is strong and growing in this country already. If Canadian reciprocity will work all the good things for the two countries its advocates contend for and predict, such an outcome will do much to hasten and ripen annexation sentiment in both countries and bring about the desired result. Indeed the future is pregnant with marvellous possibilities. WHAT WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE AND OUT OF THE QUESTION A FEW YEARS AGO, MAY NOW BE CONSIDERED WITHIN EASY REACH. National and international lines are likely to be upset in many places on the world's map before another decade.

"As a matter of fact the annexation of Mexico to the United States is only a question of time. This much is an open secret, and the fact that "Uncle Sam" has kept one half his standing army intrenched along the border line so long, after hostilities between the warring elements have ceased, only shows that he is watching and waiting for the psycological moment to make that country throw up its hands and surrender for the slightest provocation. Give us Cuba, Mexico and Canada and the balance of the world can have the rest. INDEED IF COMING EVENTS "CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE," THEN IT IS ONLY A QUESTION OF TIME WHEN "OLD GLORY—THE STARS AND STRIPES — WILL TRIUMPHANTLY FLOAT FROM THE MASTHEAD AT WASHINGTON, D.C., HAVANA, CUBA, MEXICO CITY, MEXICO AND OTTAWA, CANADA."

In another editorial of the same issue the Southern Lumber Journal says: "That reciprocity will win in the approaching campaign over in the Dominion Government, is a freely conceded fact, that the annexation of that country to the United States will inevitably follow, is an equally foregone conclusion."

Troops Are Organizing.

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 18.—Early on Saturday a body of about 100 Magonistas crossed the river near the smelter, and advanced on the western outskirts of Ciudad Juarez with the avowed intention of attacking.

The men are heavily armed and their intention, it is reported, is to destroy the tracks of the Mexican Central Railway to prevent the coming of more troops into Juarez from Chihuahua. Whether that is the real object of the movement is not known, but it is certain that the river crossing has been made and the advance is proceeding. The real purpose is said to be an advance to the interior of the state of Chihuahua, where the Magonistas forces are reported to be organising.

Other Liberals are reported to have crossed the line near Columbus, N.M., 60 miles west of here and are presumed to be headed for the same point in the interior.

REVIEW'S ELECTION BULLETINS

The Review has made special arrangements for election return bulletins. These will be received over the C.P.R. wire, and will be flashed onto a screen that will be put over the Oriental hotel front, as quickly as received. In this way thousands lined up on Hunter street will be able to see the progress of the election. The prospects that Borden will be returned at this election are so bright that the keenest interest will be shown in the fight in every constituency, for the way two or three go may decide the whole battle. It is likely to be a small majority either way. Watch the Review bulletin service, illustrated with special slides.

Stopping the Leak

The Association of Minnesota Manufacturers says:—"Reciprocity will stop the leak of our manufacturers moving to Canada. Statistics show that more than seven hundred and fifty American manufacturers have opened up in Canada in the last ten years, and fully as many more will be apt to follow if we fail in this our present opportunity to stop the leak now by agreeing to the reciprocity treaty."

BUFFALO COURIER SAYS THAT LAURIER WILL LOSE ONTARIO

Outlook Black in Quebec for Government—Marked Conservative Gains in Ontario are Assured, Says This Outside Observer.

The Buffalo Courier, in sizing up the political situation in Ontario, predicts the loss to Laurier in western Ontario of five seats. In Eastern Ontario there is no question but that the Conservatives will gain five or possibly eight or nine. The Laurier forecast has to do exclusively with western Ontario, where Liberalism was expected to retain its strength. It says:—

Liberal newspapers admit a loss of seats in Ontario. Conservative papers are equally hopeful for their side to make gains, and of marked Conservative gains there seems little doubt. In western Ontario it is no problem to name half a dozen Liberal seats that are in danger. West and North Middlesex hang in the balance, so does north Huron, where the Farmers' bank smash was bad for M. Y. McLean. The two Oxfords appear likely Conservative gains, particularly south Oxford, which is a sure Conservative gain.

The two Perths have slipped away badly from Laurier and seem likely to elect Dr. Steele, and H. B. Murphy, instead of G. N. McIntyre and Dr. J. P. Rankin. North Bruce likely to be won by Col. Hugh Clark. (Conservative) and in south Grey, H.H. Miller is being closely run by R. J. Ball.

When the last parliament came to an end Sir Wilfrid had thirty-six out of eighty six seats in Ontario. If he gets back with thirty this time he will be doing well, in the opinion of close observers of the political future.

In Quebec Sir Wilfrid had fifty out of the sixty-five. This province will settle the election this year as in many past contests. The extent of the Nationalist movement remains, of course, still a mystery but the outlook is clearly black to the Liberal party. In his last speeches in Ontario Sir Wilfrid made it clear that he had to look to Ontario for better support if the fight was to be won.

PORT ARTHUR DONE OUT OF A CHANCE TO VOTE ON THURSDAY

Two Thousand Attend Mass Meeting of Indignation at The Postponement.

Port Arthur, Sept. 18.—Indignation, free and openly expressed, was the keynote of a meeting at the Auditorium Saturday night, when over 10,000 people gathered to hear the storm of protests that were being raised against the action of Returning Officer Horrigan, for postponing the election. All rose to their feet, hats were moved, and loud cheers given for J. J. Carrick, who was present and made a stirring speech.

The Auditorium was packed from floor to ceiling and hundreds were unable to gain admission. This is taken as indicative of the interest taken in Carrick's candidature, as the meeting was called in a hurry and erroneously advertised as being in the Arena Rink, not in the Auditorium. Nevertheless the hall was packed long before the hour of opening.

The following resolution was passed. Moved by F. S. Wiley of Port Arthur, seconded by Alf. Cooper of Fort William:

That the action of the Liberal executive of the district of Thunder Bay and Rainy River, and the Liberal executive in Ottawa, in postponing the federal elections from Sept. 21 to Oct. 12, is not in the best interests of Canada; therefore, be it resolved, that we place ourselves on record as being opposed to any such pernicious and iniquitous methods being used or introduced into Canadian politics; for the reason that they are bad from a business point of view. They are detrimental to that feeling of fair play which goes so far to build up a community; they are destructive to that feeling of British fair play that builds nationality; they are calculated to foster and bring trickery; and finally any party should be above using the returning officer to postpone for the moment the defeat they see staring them in the face.

J. J. Carrick, the Conservative candidate, made a speech, saying that unfair tactics had been employed by the Conmee organization, and declaring that the Liberals must have known of the postponement for some time. "This constituency," he said, "is known all over the past and west as a hot-bed of political corruption." It was the old Exeter poll business all over again.

Four Drowned.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—Four young men, said to have been under the influence of liquor, lost their lives yesterday afternoon, when the rowboat in which they were crossing the river, upset below the Victoria Bridge in the swiftest part of the St. Mary's current.

The men were: Henri Lafrancois, aged 26; Felix Livernois, aged 31; Joseph Lamarre, aged 19; Joseph Gagnon, aged 17.

Constable St. Denis saw the boat upset and gave the alarm. Two tugs steamed to the rescue, but before they arrived all four men had sunk from sight. Their bodies have not been recovered.

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

Shortly to be Called by Premier Whitney

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—It is reported today that immediately after the Dominion elections, Premier Whitney will issue the writs for a general election in Ontario, and a veto bill will be taken late in October or early in November. There are nine bye-elections necessary, and the Ontario Legislature has only one more season to run in any event.

LAURIER SENDS FOR U. S. HELP

Senator Gore Asked to Assist in Reciprocity Campaign

Oklahoma, Okla., Sept. 15—United States Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, has been requested by Premier Laurier to assist him in the Canadian campaign for reciprocity. Senator Gore left Lawton yesterday for Canada and will remain until the close of the campaign making speeches throughout the districts that are to vote on the question.

Senator Gore supported reciprocity in the Senate, and his attitude there, it is safe, prompted premier Laurier to ask his assistance in the campaign now going on.

KIDNAPPER IN THE TOILS

The Prairie Desperado Caught in Dakota

Spectacular Man-Hunt Ends Successfully

Hannah, N.D., Sept. 17.—Run to earth after four days of the most spectacular man hunt ever witnessed in Western Canada, the kidnapper of Miss Gladys Price was taken at nine o'clock yesterday morning, three miles north of Hannah, just south of the boundary. He confessed fully his part in the outrage, and waived extradition. He tells an amazing story of his criminal life, declaring that he is an escaped convict from California, where he was serving a three-year term.

The capture came as a climax to the most persistent and most puzzling pursuit known to the Manitoba police. Early Saturday morning the fugitive appeared at the home of Farmer Timothy Hiller, north of here, three miles. He wanted food and said he was famished. He was recognized at once. The farmer fed him and at the same time sent a messenger hurriedly to Hannah. The desperado, when fed, asked for a razor, saying he wanted to shave himself. This operation he did easily, showing the tremendous nerve he still retained. He looked haggard and fatigued. After half an hour and knowing that armed men were searching for him everywhere, he coolly walked out and entered a haystack near by and went to sleep.

Deputy Sheriff May, with a posse, occupying two auto cars, hurried to the scene and surrounded the hay stack. They had their guns ready, as the conduct of the man convinced them he would never be taken alive. But he weakened. When he saw the circle of guns he threw up his hands and was brought here. He had no weapon concealed in the hay, having broken his gun. The man says his name is Davis, but he is the same character known variously in Southern Manitoba as Henry Bill Wilson, George Brown, Warren, Bill Miner and other aliases.

Why Does Not Mr. Borden Pull Sir Wilfy Laurier's Chestnuts Out of the Fire?

Liberals Using the Bourassa Scare to Get Votes for Laurier and Divert Attention from Reciprocity — Conservatives, Liberals and Even Nationalists Combine to Make an End of Laurierism

We do not think that the people of Ontario are likely to be led away with the specious pleas of the Liberals that to vote for Borden is to vote for Bourassa. The truth is so far from this that the ordinary citizen can easily discount the Bourassa cry as an effort, in the first place, to divert attention from the fact that reciprocity is not wanted by the people of Ontario, and, in the second, as an endeavor to array Ontario on behalf of Laurier and against the popular movement in Quebec.

The Toronto Globe asks in a big head-line: "Why does not Mr. Borden repudiate Mr. Bourassa?" It might equally as well be asked: Why does not Mr. Borden pull Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chestnuts out of the fire? The Bourassa movement is something entirely independent of either the present Liberal or Conservative party. It is a movement opposed to Laurierism first of all, and if Bourassa chooses to turn on his former chief, well, the Conservatives are not going to pull Bourassa off — that is Laurier's outlook. But the fact that Bourassa is making tremendous inroads on the solid Quebec that has kept Laurier in power is proving mighty disconcerting to the Grit organs. They cannot stay the tide in Quebec, but they do seek to set Ontario by the ears because Bourassa is meeting with success.

Mr. Borden has been publicly condemned by the Nationalists, as well as Sir Wilfrid Laurier. As a stronger imperialist than Sir Wilfrid Laurier, would it be supposed that Mr. Borden would be welcomed by the Nationalists as a leader? If they fight Laurier for being too imperialistic, would they march under the banner of Borden, who is doubly imperialistic? The Bourassa scare need worry no one in Ontario. It is merely ending that solid Quebec that offset the will of the remainder of Canada, and is giving to the parties something like an equal chance.

It might be pointed out that the Liberal government (not an opposition) in Britain is sustained by the Irish Nationalists, and the Irish Nationalists are pressing for Home Rule, or taking Ireland out of Britain. Do the Liberal organs point out a dastardly alliance like this? Not much! But because the Nationalists in Quebec are marching the same way as the Conservatives — all for the defeat of Laurier — as well as thousands of Liberals like Sifton (who is avowed enemy of Bourassa), the Grit organs are up in the air. When a popular uprising against a Government comes, many men of many faiths, of many different types and ideals, of widely different aims and motives, march toward the common goal and nothing can stay them. The duty of Ontario is to do its share in defeating Laurier.

By some it is contended that Canada will surely ratify this measure, but by others it is contended that there are grave doubts as to whether such will be the case or not. Let us see what we see.

"Be that as it may, the people of the United States, through their Representatives in Congress and the U. S. Senate should straightway demand that negotiations be instituted without delay by Secretary of State Knox FOR THE PEACEABLE ANNEXATION OF CANADA; BUT, FOR ANNEXATION, IF IT SHOULD HAVE TO COME ABOUT THROUGH CONQUEST. If there is any virtue in the reciprocity treaty as ratified by the United States Congress and signed by the President some days ago, it is to be found in the fact that THIS INSTRUMENT LAYS THE FOUNDATION STONE FOR THE ANNEXATION OF A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD HAVE LONG SINCE BEEN PART OF THE UNITED STATES. President Taft and the advocates of this measure have made this plain in many of their speeches and addresses on the subject. That it will ultimately come we have not a doubt. There may be and doubtless will be objection to such a step in the Dominion Government at this time, but mark the prediction, ANNEXATION SENTIMENT IS GOING TO RAPIDLY CRYSTALIZE AMONG OUR CANADIAN COUSINS UNTIL THAT ISSUE WILL ULTIMATELY SWEEP EVERYTHING BEFORE IT.

"Whatever the United States goes gunning for she usually lands, and history is ever repeating itself. For instance, we might cite Cuba, the Phillipines and other instances of conquest and practical annexation during the past few years. These are but illustrations of what we can do when we try. We are to-day the first and greatest among nations of the earth, and WITH CANADA AND HER WONDERFUL RESOURCES ADDED TO OUR ALREADY WORLDWIDE AND ALL POWERFUL ASSETS, WE COULD EASILY SAY "PEACE BE STILL" AND MAKE THE OTHER NATIONS OF THE WORLD COME AND GO AT OUR BECK AND CALL.

"Of course, it is necessary to our well being and that of other countries that the United States maintain the most friendly relations with Great Britain, and while it is safe to say that the Mother Country would reluctantly part with her fair daughter and Canadian Provinces, yet WITH THE UNITED STATES BACKING CANADA AND CANADA WORKING IN HARMONY WITH THE UNITED STATES FOR ANNEXATION GREAT BRITAIN WOULD BE POWERLESS TO HELP HERSELF AND COULD, THEREFORE, ONLY SIT ON THE FENCE AND WATCH THE PROCESSION PASS BY. LET ANNEXATION OF CANADA, THEREFORE BE THE WATCHWORD NOW AND HEREAFTER, UNTIL THE UNITED STATES BECOMES MASTER OF THE LAND AS WELL AS THE HIGH SEAS, FOR SUCH IS BOUND TO COME ABOUT.

"Annexation sentiment is strong and growing in this country already. If Canadian reciprocity will work all the good things for the two countries its advocates contend for and predict, such an outcome will do much to hasten and ripen annexation sentiment in both countries and bring about the desired result. Indeed the future is pregnant with marvellous possibilities. WHAT WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE AND OUT OF THE QUESTION A FEW YEARS AGO, MAY NOW BE CONSIDERED WITHIN EASY REACH. National and international lines are likely to be upset in many places on the world map before another decade.

"As a matter of fact the annexation of Mexico to the United States is only a question of time. This much is an open secret, and the fact that "Uncle Sam" has kept one half his standing army intrenched along the border line so long after hostilities between the warring elements have ceased, only shows that he is watching and waiting for the psycological moment to make that country throw up its hands and surrender for the slightest provocation. Give us Cuba, Mexico and Canada and the balance of the world can have the rest. INDEED IF COMING EVENTS "CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE," THEN IT IS ONLY A QUESTION OF TIME WHEN "OLD GLORY—THE STARS AND STRIPES — WILL TRIUMPHANTLY FLOAT FROM THE MASTHEAD AT WASHINGTON, D.C., HAVANA, CUBA, MEXICO CITY, MEXICO AND OTTAWA, CANADA."

In another editorial of the same issue the Southern Lumber Journal says; "That reciprocity will win in the approaching campaign over in the Dominion Government, is a freely conceded fact, that the annexation of that country to the United States will inevitably follow is an equally foregone conclusion."

Heavy Rains in Ohio.

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—Rains that have fallen almost continuously for the past 24 hours have put small streams in Ohio out of their banks, submerged low lands in towns and cities, washed away bridges, tieing up railroad traffic and damaged and destroyed growing crops and other farm property, doing damage in the state estimated at a half million damage.

CHILD KILLED BY EDISON'S AUTO

Inventor is Being Held While Inquiry is Made

Special to the Review.

Lauf, Bavaria, Sept. 18.—Edison, the inventor, and his family, are held here, pending an enquiry into the death of a child killed by his automobile. It is expected that he will be exonerated.

Troops Are Organizing.

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 18.—Early on Saturday a body of about 100 Magonistas crossed the river near the smelter, and advanced on the western outskirts of Ciudad Juarez with the avowed intention of attacking.

The men are heavily armed and their intention, it is reported, is to destroy the tracks of the Mexican Central Railway to prevent the coming of more troops into Juarez from Chihuahua. Whether that is the real object of the movement is not known, but it is certain that the river crossing has been made and the advance is proceeding. The real purpose is said to be an advance to the interior of the state of Chihuahua, where the Magonistas forces are reported to be organising.

Other Liberals are reported to have crossed the line near Columbus, N.M., 60 miles west of here and are presumed to be headed for the same point in the interior.

REVIEW'S ELECTION BULLETINS

The Review has made special arrangements for election return bulletins. These will be received over the C.P.R. wire, and will be flashed onto a screen that will be put over the Oriental hotel front, as quickly as received. In this way thousands lined up on Hunter street will be able to see the progress of the election. The prospects that Borden will be returned at this election are so bright that the keenest interest will be shown in the fight in every constituency, for the way two or three go may decide the whole battle. It is likely to be a small majority either way. Watch the Review bulletin service, illustrated with special slides.

Stopping the Leak

The Association of Minnesota Manufacturers says:—"Reciprocity will stop the leak of our manufacturers moving to Canada. Statistics show that more than seven hundred and fifty American manufacturers have opened up in Canada in the last ten years, and fully as many more will be apt to follow if we fail in this our present opportunity to stop the leak now by agreeing to the reciprocity treaty."

BUFFALO COURIER SAYS THAT LAURIER WILL LOSE ONTARIO

Outlook Black in Quebec for Government—Marked Conservative Gains in Ontario are Assured, Says This Outside Observer.

The Buffalo Courier, in sizing up the political situation in Ontario, predicts the loss to Laurier in western Ontario of five seats. In Eastern Ontario there is no question but that the Conservatives will gain five or possibly eight or nine. The Laurier forecast has to do exclusively with western Ontario, where Liberalism was expected to retain its strength. It says:—

Liberal newspapers admit a loss of seats in Ontario. Conservative papers are equally hopeful for their side to make gains, and of marked Conservative gains there seems little doubt. In western Ontario it is no problem to name half a dozen Liberal seats that are in danger. West and North Middlesex hang in the balance, so does North Huron, where the Farmers' bank smash was bad for M. Y. McLean. The two Oxfords appear likely Conservative gains, particularly south Oxford, which is a sure Conservative gain.

The two Perths have slipped away badly from Laurier and seem likely to elect Dr. Steele and H. B. Murphy, instead of G. N. McIntyre and Dr. J. P. Rankin. North Bruce likely to be won by Col. Hugh Clark. (Conservative) and in south Grey, H.H. Miller is being closely run by R. J. Ball.

When the last parliament came to an end Sir Wilfrid had thirty-six out of eighty six seats in Ontario. If he goes back with thirty this time he will be doing well, in the opinion of close observers of the political future.

In Quebec Sir Wilfrid had fifty out of the sixty-five. This province will settle the election this year as in many past contests. The extent of the Nationalist movement remains, of course, still a mystery but the outlook is clearly black to the Liberal party. In his last speeches in Ontario Sir Wilfrid made it clear that he had to look to Ontario for better support if the fight was to be won.

PORT ARTHUR DONE OUT OF A CHANCE TO VOTE ON THURSDAY

Two Thousand Attend Mass Meeting of Indignation at The Postponement.

Port Arthur, Sept. 18.—Indignation, free and openly expressed, was the keynote of a meeting at the Auditorium Saturday night, when over 10,000 people gathered to hear the storm of protests that were being raised against the action of Returning Officer Horrigan, for postponing the election. All rose to their feet, hats were moved, and loud cheers given for J. J. Carrick, who was present and made a stirring speech.

The Auditorium was packed from floor to ceiling and hundreds were unable to gain admission. This is taken as indicative of the interest taken in Carrick's candidature, as the meeting was called in a hurry and erroneously advertised as being in the Arena Rink, not in the Auditorium. Nevertheless the hall was packed long before the hour of opening.

The following resolution was passed Moved by F. S. Wiley of Port Arthur, seconded by Alf. Cooper of Fort William:

That the action of the Liberal executive of the district of Thunder Bay and Rainy River, and the Liberal executive in Ottawa, in postponing the federal elections from Sept. 21 to Oct. 12, is not in the best interests of Canada; therefore, be it resolved, that we place ourselves on record as being opposed to any such pernicious and iniquitous methods being used or introduced into Canadian politics; for the reason that they are bad from a business point of view. They are detrimental to that feeling of fair play which goes so far to build up a community; they are destructive to that feeling of British fair play that builds nationality; they are calculated to foster and bring trickery; and finally any party should be above using the returning officer to postpone for the moment the defeat they see staring them in the face.

J. J. Carrick, the Conservative candidate, made a speech, saying that unfair tactics had been employed by the Conmee organization, and declaring that the Liberals must have known of the postponement for some time. "This constituency," he said, "is known all over the past and west as a hot-bed of political corruption." It was the old Exeter poll business all over again.

Four Drowned.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—Four young men, said to have been under the influence of liquor, lost their lives yesterday afternoon, when the rowboat in which they were crossing the river, upset below the Victoria Bridge in the swiftest part of the St. Mary's current.

The men were: Henri Lafrancois, aged 26; Felix Livernois, aged 31; Joseph Lamarre, aged 19; Joseph Gagnon, aged 17.

Constable St. Denis saw the boat upset and gave the alarm. Two tugs steamed to the rescue, but before they arrived all four men had sunk from sight. Their bodies have not been recovered.

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

Shortly to be Called by Premier Whitney

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—It is reported to-day that immediately after the Dominion elections, Premier Whitney will issue the writs for a general election in Ontario, and a vote bill will be taken late in October or early in November. There are nine bye-elections necessary, and the Ontario Legislature has only one more season to run in any event.

LAURIER SENDS FOR U. S. HELP

Senator Gore Asked to Assist in Reciprocity Campaign

Oklahoma, Okla., Sept. 15—United States Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, has been requested by Premier Laurier to assist him in the Canadian campaign for reciprocity. Senator Gore left Lawton yesterday for Canada and will remain until the close of the campaign making speeches throughout the districts that are to vote on the question.

Senator Gore supported reciprocity in the Senate, and his attitude there, it is safe, prompted premier Laurier to ask his assistance in the campaign now going on.

KIDNAPPER IN THE TOILS

The Prairie Desperado Caught in Dakota

Spectacular Man-Hunt Ends Successfully

Hannah, N.D., Sept. 17.—Run to earth after four days of the most spectacular man hunt ever witnessed in Western Canada, the kidnapper of Miss Gladys Price was taken at nine o'clock yesterday morning, three miles north of Hannah, just south of the boundary. He confessed fully his part in the outrage, and waived extradition. He tells an amazing story of his criminal life, declaring that he is an escaped convict from California, where he was serving a three-year term.

The capture came as a climax to the most persistent and most puzzling pursuit known to the Manitoba police. Early Saturday morning the fugitive appeared at the home of Farmer Timothy Hiller, north of here, three miles. He wanted food and said he was famished. He was recognized at once. The farmer fed him and at the same time sent a messenger hurriedly to Hannah. The desperado, when fed, asked for a razor, saying he wanted to shave himself. This operation he did easily, showing the tremendous nerve he still retained. He looked haggard and fatigued. After half an hour and knowing that armed men were searching for him everywhere, he coolly walked out and entered a haystack near by and went to sleep.

Deputy Sheriff May, with a posse, occupying two auto cars, hurried to the scene and surrounded the hay stack. They had their guns ready, as the conduct of the man convinced them he would never be taken alive. But he weakened. When he saw the circle of guns he threw up his hands and was brought here. He had no weapon concealed in the hay, having broken his gun. The man says his name is Davis, but he is the same character known variously in Southern Manitoba as Henry Bill Wilson, George Brown, Warren, Bill Miner and other aliases.

THREE YEARS FOR EX-COP

Pleaded Guilty to Having Burglarized Fruit Store

Special to the Review.

Berlin, Sept. 18—Louis Sleckly, who until a month ago was a member of the police force, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary, for burglarizing a fruit store. He acknowledged his guilt.

Millionaire a Suicide.

Los Angeles, Sept. 18.—Martin Costello, 65, of Tombstone, Ariz., prominent for more than a quarter of a century in the development of mines in the southwest, and reputed to be a multi-millionaire, committed suicide here Friday night. Costello dressed himself in faultless after-dinner attire, left his family at home and rented a room in a lodging house. He folded his coat for a pillow and, lying down on the floor, sent a bullet through his heart, dying almost instantly. Despondency is believed to have been the cause.

Disturbances in Russia.

Kievan, Sept. 18.—Minister of Finance Kokovosoff, who has assumed the duties of Premier temporarily, has issued the most stringent commands to the authorities regarding the maintenance of order and the prompt suppression of disturbances. A cossack regiment is protecting the Jewish quarters in this city.

ELEVEN DEATHS IN RACE TRAGEDY

LAURIER'S WORK

He Has Revived the Dream of Annexation in the Breast of Every American,

He Has Made Millions of American Workers for Annexation,

He has started all the Hearsts on a Fresh Crusade against Canada,

He has started Yankee Money flowing into Canada's Elections,

One thing will stop this once and for ever, and it is A DECISIVE VOTE AGAINST RECIPROCITY

A Vote for Reciprocity will be followed by a more Advanced Movement by the Hearsts and the Trusts.

Never a Day's Rest for Canada thereafter!

Why Does Not Mr. Borden Pull Sir Wilfy Laurier's Chestnuts Out of the Fire?

Liberals Using the Bourassa Scare to Get Votes for Laurier and Divert Attention from Reciprocity — Conservatives, Liberals and Even Nationalists Combine to Make an End of Laurierism

We do not think that the people of Ontario are likely to be led away with the specious pleas of the Liberals that to vote for Borden is to vote for Bourassa. The truth is so far from this that the ordinary citizen can easily discount the Bourassa cry as an effort, in the first place, to divert attention from the fact that reciprocity is not wanted by the people of Ontario, and, in the second, as an endeavor to array Ontario on behalf of Laurier and against the popular movement in Quebec.

The Toronto Globe asks in a big head-line: "Why does not Mr. Borden repudiate Mr. Bourassa?" It might equally as well be asked: Why does not Mr. Borden pull Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chestnuts out of the fire? The Bourassa movement is something entirely independent of either the present Liberal or Conservative party. It is a movement opposed to Laurierism first of all, and if Bourassa chooses to turn on his former chief, well, the Conservatives are not going to pull Bourassa off — that is Laurier's outlook. But the fact that Bourassa is making tremendous inroads on the solid Quebec that has kept Laurier in power is proving mighty disconcerting to the Grit organs. They cannot stay the tide in Quebec, but they do seek to set Ontario by the ears because Bourassa is meeting with success.

Mr. Borden has been publicly condemned by the Nationalists, as well as Sir Wilfrid Laurier. As a stronger imperialist than Sir Wilfrid Laurier, would it be supposed that Mr. Borden would be welcomed by the Nationalists as a leader? If they fight Laurier for being too imperialistic, would they march under the banner of Borden, who is doubly imperialistic? The Bourassa scare need worry no one in Ontario. It is merely ending that solid Quebec that offset the will of the remainder of Canada, and is giving to the parties something like an equal chance.

It might be pointed out that the Liberal government (not an opposition) in Britain is sustained by the Irish Nationalists, and the Irish Nationalists are pressing for Home Rule, or taking Ireland out of Britain. Do the Liberal organs point out a dastardly alliance like this? Not much! But because the Nationalists in Quebec are marching the same way as the Conservatives — all for the defeat of Laurier — as well as thousands of Liberals like Sifton (who is avowed enemy of Bourassa), the Grit organs are up in the air. When a popular uprising against a Government comes, many men of many faiths, of many different types and ideals, of widely different aims and motives, march toward the common goa and nothing can stay them. The duty of Ontario is to do its share in defeating Laurier.

Gas Distended His Stomach

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveler of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the traveling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

NERVILINE CURES ALL PAIN

The Daily Review

MONDAY, SEPT. 18, 1911.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000.

THE ONTARIO OUTLOOK

The following list of Ontario ridings is carefully compiled from the latest and most accurate reports obtainable as being almost certain Conservative gains. We have not included in this list those ridings where the issue seems to be somewhat in doubt, and might easily go either way. This list is composed of only those ridings which either through the popularity of the Conservative candidate, or the strength of anti-reciprocity feeling, are in very little doubt. For instance, in Kingston and in Brant, the provincial members are running for Dominion honors, and in each case they are the strongest men, politically, in the riding, and with a cause such as anti-reciprocity, are almost certain winners.

Munson will almost surely win in West Northumberland, and Col. Hugh Clark will almost certainly capture North Bruce. The two Ottawas are slated to go Conservative, and Brantford will, being a workingman's town. West Peterborough is included in the list, though right from the outset it is admitted that J. R. Stratton is the only Liberal who would have the ghost of a chance at this election. And according to the reports from the various factories in the city, and from the rural part of the riding, a victory for Burnham seems assured by a comfortable majority. Peterborough cannot afford to endorse reciprocity, many of the leading Liberals here being opposed to it, though saying nothing for obvious reasons.

Fowke will probably go under in South Ontario, Oshawa being solid against reciprocity, and North Middlesex and South Oxford are likely turnovers.

Inasmuch as the only changes of consequence will occur in Ontario and Quebec, a sweep against Laurier is fraught with great consequences. It is hard to prophesy on Quebec, but those who can most accurately gauge public sentiment, say that Laurier will lose at least twenty seats, and possibly more. This is enough to ensure the defeat of the government, quite easily.

The almost sure Conservative gains in Ontario, leaving out half a dozen or more splendid prospects, are:

Kingston.
Brantford.
Ottawa (2).
Brant.
West Northumberland.
South Ontario.
North Bruce.
North and South Perth.
South Oxford.
Thunder Bay.
North Middlesex.
West Peterborough.

TWELVE REASONS

1 Because it is unnecessary. The American tariff will presently be revised downwards, and the concessions now made to Canada in this reciprocity agreement will be made to all the world.

2 Because it means the destruction of our natural resources, especially our forests. Through shameful haste and waste the American forests no longer exist.

3 Because it means American control of our water power, along the boundary and in the interior.

4 Because the so-called market of ninety millions has no existence so far as we are concerned. It is but the limited and uncertain border-town market already over supplied with every product of a fertile and varied soil.

5 Because it will prevent the Canadian North-west from becoming the supreme granary of the world. Our wheat will make Minneapolis the World's Milling Centre.

6 Because it means the stoppage in removal of American manufacturing establishments to Canada, and the closing down of those already established.

7 Because it means the handing over to the United States the complete control of our mining industries.

8 Because it means the dominance of the American people in Canada. Ten to one is too great odds.

9 Because reciprocity once in force cannot be stopped if Uncle Sam is unwilling. To dislodge him against his will means WAR. Ten to one is too great odds.

10 Because it means in the end annexation. Ten to one is too great odds.

11 Because annexation to the United States would be the most terrible and intolerable of fates that the mind of man can picture.

12 Because we are loyal to the Mother Country and recognize that in her is the source of all our moral greatness and material prosperity. To be part of the Empire of which she is the crowning glory is honor enough and career enough for our people.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Shall we vote for the day when Taft shall take us in?

Canada will say to Laurier on Thursday, "Alas, poor Yorick, we knew thee well."

Under which flag, the Star Spangled Banner or the Old Union Jack do you choose to live?

Watch for the money pouring out. If you can catch them at it, nail them. Keep the elections clean.

A vote for Stratton will be a vote for an opposition member, a vote for Burnham will be a vote for a government supporter.

At Rimouski Laurier said "Perhaps this is the last battle I will fight." Laurier, the astute politician, sees the handwriting on the wall. He was no bad guesser when he said this.

THE DEATH KNELL of LAURIER HAS RUNG. THE MEASURE THAT WAS GOING TO SWEEP THE COUNTRY IS GOING TO SWEEP HIM OUT OF POWER.

What is the use of voting for a Stratton when a Borden administration is in power? West Peterborough should be on the winning side.

Watch the Review bulletins on Thursday night. Special arrangements for a continuous lantern slide service have been made in between waits.

Arthur Hawkes got a lot of free advertising from the Examiner on Saturday. Every little helps. Hear what he has to say to-morrow night in the Opera House.

Victory is assured for Sexsmith in the east, with about 500 majority. The eastern part of Ontario will present a solid front against the insidious schemes of Taft.

The Kerr trick at Norwood was in keeping with the methods of the Liberals all over the country. They are going to lose, and are resorting to desperate tactics to try to stem the tide.

To your tents, O Israel. Laurier is doomed. Now for a long pull and a strong pull, and a pull altogether for Sexsmith, Burnham and Borden, Canada and the Empire.

George H. Perley, the Conservative whip, says that a Borden victory seems assured. "Reciprocity has killed Laurier," he says. The Liberals did not want to suicide by reciprocity, and now they are going to turn on the fathers of the give-away to the United States.

Stratton and Kerr may be good enough Canadians, but politics has forced them to support a policy that can only lead to our amalgamation with the United States. Reciprocity initiates the tendency, and its logical conclusion is ANNEXATION.

A vote for Sexsmith and a vote for Burnham are patriotic common-sense votes for a Canada for the Canadians, a Canada loyal to the Empire, a Canada that will remain as the chief star of the imperial crown; a Canada that will not consent to become another Cuba, on the North American continent.

If the voters of Peterborough, if the workingmen of Peterborough vote according to the issue of this election there can be only one result—victory for Burnham. The bar'l may be opened, and money may flow like water, the organization may get in all the floating votes there are, but if the real, solid voters of the city and county say with a will "We want no more of Stratton and no reciprocity," there can be only one result. Will that be said on Thursday.

Reciprocity will not benefit the farmer, and it will hurt the workingman. There are perhaps a few odd advantages, but what do they count when the Americans on every side are declaring that now is the time for the Acquisition of Canada. Is this strong strong annexation sentiment by The Yankees a mere bogey? If the whole population of Canada could be distributed in American cities for a week's visit to find out how the Americans regard reciprocity, reciprocity would not get a corporal's guard of support.

The Ottawa Journal published a syndicate news letter from New York, in which it was said that the United States trusts had contributed $1,000,000 in Canada. This was used by the Liberal newspapers all over the country towards the defeat of reciprocity in big type as an assertion by the Ottawa Journal that trust money was being used to defeat reciprocity. As a matter of fact, the Journal said nothing of the kind, and cannot be held responsible for the opinions of syndicate correspondents in its news columns. The lack of any decent campaign arguments by the Liberal newspapers was never more evident than by this use of a paragraph in a New York news letter. The fact is the trusts are for reciprocity, to lower Canadian tariff.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ANYTHING TO SUIT

Various Contradicting Ways in Which the Liberals Commend Reciprocity

It would be easier to understand the Government case for Reciprocity if its representatives would only agree upon what it is.

Will Reciprocity raise prices in Canada, or will it lower them?

Is Reciprocity a step towards free trade, or is it a buttressing of protection?

Are the farmers to get higher prices, or are the workingmen to get cheaper food?

Mr. Hugh Guthrie, M.P., for example, told the people of Toronto that "reciprocity will improve the price of all farm products."

Mr. O'Donoghue, a Liberal Labor man, knew better what Torontonians would like to hear. He told them that "the result would be cheaper food for the worker." And he gave them the reason. He said:—"Food prices will be lower the more food owners there are trying to obtain purchasers." That is, he thinks that the competition of the American farmers and the food producers of the British Empire and the "most-favored-nations" will pound down the prices which the Canadian farmer will get.

Then there are Dr. Clark, M.P., of Red Deer, and Ralph Smith, M.P., of Nanaimo, who tell their fellow Commoners that Reciprocity means "free trade;" and there are city members like Hugh Guthrie, M.P., who insist that it means nothing of the sort. Protection is to be kept up, he says, "because the West is our natural market for our manufactured goods." Hon. Mr. Fielding himself takes great pains to make it clear that the Government have carefully safeguarded the interests of the manufacturers in making this agreement; and that they will continue to safeguard them. "Trust us," he cries to the Captains of Industry. "We have never injured you yet."

Reciprocal North and South Trade Would Injure Imperial Trade

A stream of British people and British money has been flowing into Canada for the last ten years—one hundred and twelve thousand British people came in 1910. Canada has achieved a remarkable popularity in Great Britain, which has been of the greatest value in financing Government and other undertakings, some of which have quite properly been placed before the British public as being important, not to say essential, to the closer union of Britain with Canada. It is idle to say that reciprocal north and south trade will not lessen our interprovincial trade, and our trade with Great Britain. Those who support this agreement do not pretend that the north and south trade will not increase. Of course it will increase, and will, to a large extent, take the place of the other. Look at a map of Canada and see what reciprocity would mean. Our country would be tapped all along the southern boundary. British Columbia would trade with Washington, Oregon and California; Alberta and Saskatchewan with Montana, the Dakotas, and states to the south; Manitoba with North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin and adjoining states; Ontario with Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York; Quebec and the Maritime Provinces with New York and the New England States.

WORKING FOR MINNEAPOLIS

Reciprocity Would Sink Canadian Mills Into Oblivion

Reciprocity is intended to make Minneapolis and other American cities absolutely predominate in the milling world. This aspect of the prevention of a home market in Western Canada has been most thoroughly exposed by the North Western Miller, the principal organ of the American milling trade:—

"The disposition of Canada's surplus is a question upon the answer to which depends the future, not only of the milling interests of the (American) Northwest, but indeed of the United States. Should this surplus be shipped abroad, it must inevitably mean the destruction of the American export trade, the shifting of the American milling centre, the gradual decline of the American milling interest to a comparatively unimportant place in the list of large American industries.

"The miller who is able to grind this enormous (Canadian) crop will be the miller of the future, and where he is, there will be the great mills of the world.

"The future of the American milling with free Canadian wheat secured is a grand one. With this enormous crop flowing into the mills and elevators of the States, a splendid tide of prosperity would follow in its wake. The mills of America would go forward on their developing course, new mills would be built, and capacities enlarged. New markets abroad would be conquered."

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

"Lookin' for anybody in special?" asked the tall man.

"I'm going to meet Lynch Smart and Civilian Niles here!" said George. He reached his hands for his shoes, but the tall man made no move to surrender them.

"No, you ain't goin' to meet 'em, either," he advised promptly.

"I say I am. I have an appointment with them. They are explorers, and have——"

"You can't tell me who Lunch Smart and 'Fatty' Niles are. I knowed them two when that mountain over there was only a hole in the ground. But I say you ain't goin' to meet 'em here, because they left this mornin'. Each one of 'em took plenty of tobacco and a pocket full of dried raisins for grub, so I reckon they're bound away for a long trip! Are you that forester feller that was due here last night?"

"I was delayed," stated the young man, his heart sinking. "You don't mean ~~to tell me~~ that those men have gone away into the woods in this fashion — weren't willing to wait one day?"

The tall man inspected his tobacco leisurely before biting into it.

"A date is a date with them two," he said calmly. "If a man doesn't show up when he says he will, it's his own fault when he's dealin' with Lynch Smart and Civ Niles. They was off and away at six o'clock this mornin'. Bein' as they're great fellers on the hoof, it wouldn't do you much good to holler after 'em, seein' that it's most dinner time, now."

"I've got to catch those men," declared George desperately.

He realized that he had been the one at fault. He had wasted twenty-four hours on the road on an impulse of the heart. That a couple of explorers would not wait that much time for a forester of the Great Trust Co. had not occurred to his — yes, he confessed it, now, in that moment of humiliation — to his sense of self-importance.

The loafers stared at him, mumbling certain praises regarding hustling qualities of Smart and Niles; the tall man, settling his tobacco in his cheek, looked down on him quizzically.

"Which way did they go?" demanded the forester. "I'll walk all night, if need be, but I've got to catch those men."

"If these here was some of those seven-league boots like they used to have in the old days, I'd advise you to start out." The man dangled the footgear before George's face. "But there are three trails leadin' north. They may have taken any one, or they may have struck right into the woods, spottin' timber. You can't reckon on them two any more'n you can reckon on a cross-eyed lucivee on glare ice."

The landlord had caught the drift of the conversation and come out of his pen.

"If your felt your ears burnin', last night, Mister Forester," he said, not without relish for the situation, "it was when Lunch and Civ were sayin' what they thought of college dudes. I don't mean no offense! I'm tellin' you what they said. If he listened to 'em hard, a man might get the general impression that they wasn't fussy about gettin' mixed into newfangled forestry. And then again they ain't no hands to wait other folks' motions."

"If you'd got along so as to go with 'em, they was intendin' to walk your legs off'm you," observed one of the loafers.

"What you want to do is to plaster yourself on to 'em now in spite of themselves," suggested the landlord, chuckling. "It will be a good joke on Lynch and Civ."

Although the loafers agreed to this with hilarity, the young man was unable to see anything to laugh at in the situation.

"Here's Romeo Bragg, here" — the landlord pointed to the tall man — "who is one of the best guides that ever sliced bacon. He'll help you catch 'em somewhere. Yes, sir, he'll help you catch 'em! He'll relish seein' 'em squirm when you're plastered onto 'em."

The guilelessness of the landlord's sense of humor was the climax of that day of ironical affront, but somehow George did not want to resent this jesting by angry retort. That, he reflected, would make worse his situation. Without regard to his feelings, the whole section seemed to be taking him as a joke. He realized, all of a sudden, what his new profession of forestry had to contend with in the face of the grim woods' heresy that put revenue first.

"You'll go with him, won't you, Romeo?" asked the landlord.

"He ain't asked me to," the guide grumbled.

George had no authority to hire a helper. But the need of a guide was pressing, and Mr. Bragg's eyes were honest, and his legs were long, and seemed adapted for travel through slash and blow-downs.

At the end of five minutes, negotiations were concluded.

"Where shall I set your baggage?" asked Mr. Bragg, joggling the shoes.

George took them. "I'm in a nice position to strike into the woods," he said disconsolately.

Mr. Bragg looked him over without appearing to be impressed by this destitution.

"You've got a good suit of clothes, a hat, them boots, a gun, and your calipers. That's more'n most explorers have. How was you intendin' to take that trunk — in your pocket, or have me wheel it on a wheelbarrer?"

"I didn't exactly know what the situation was, up here," confessed George. "I brought some things for comfort."

"The situation is," declared Bragg bluntly, "that dude hunters and that truck can go into the woods and loaf along with a whole grocery store a-taggin' 'em, if they're a'mind to pay for havin' it toted. But a man that goes into the woods on explorin' business has got to eat wind and sleep standin' up if he expects to get anywhere and do what he's sent to do. A man that is so beholden to critter comforts that he has to sling a lot of stuff on his back and give it a free ride, better paste on a pair of long ears to go with the [illegible] and get down on all fours and call himself a jackass and be done with it."

"Look here, my friend, I haven't any more time to waste on lectures. And I'm mighty tired of being played any longer as a tenderfoot. I've hired you to guide me. We'll start. I've got a pair of woods boots for outfit, anyway."

"After the funeral, I'm your man," said Mr. Bragg.

George was putting on his stout foot-gear. He stopped, and glared.

"And let those men get forty-eight hours' start? No, sir! We're out of here in half an hour."

"There are only two men in the north country that would leave this place and what's goin' on here," stated Bragg. "They're Lynch Smart and Civ Niles — and they seemed to have good reason for skippin'. As for me, I don't go till it's over."

"There are others," said the forester, lacing his shoes.

"I'd like to see you pick one up hereabouts," put in his landlord. "I reckon you don't realize what's goin' on, here."

The music of a band came to their ears. It was playing a decorous tune, this time.

"I'll go alone," shouted George, but he knew that this was the threat of a fool.

"Good-by," said Bragg calmly. "I'll pass word to the crews. They'll whittle toothpicks and follow you."

"Bragg," pleaded the young man, "this is serious business for me. No matter about details. But my job depends on getting in with those men. I can't even begin my work until I find them. They have the instructions. I've got to go."

"And you'll go — but this isn't runnin' after a street car. I'll take you — later. But you can't pull me nor any other man out of this village till Cornelius Corran's funeral is over, not if you hitch four tote horses onto me or them. If you think you can go try."

Mr. Bragg lighted his pipe, and went away to join the mob that was marching to band music. Only the landlord was left in the big, lonesome office.

"If you've got a room," said George, after meditating a little while, "I think I'll go to it. I need a little rest."

"I thought you'd come to your senses," said the boniface, and led the way.

V

The sound of music woke George. He had been dreaming of his wedding. He dreamed that he was walking down the aisle away from the altar with Mary. The strains of the wedding march followed them. Then, he opened his eyes, and the rapture faded out of his soul.

The dingy walls of the little bedroom of the tavern were about him. The church, the flowers, the happy faces, the trembling touch of his bride's hand on his arm — all the dream flickered out. It seemed very dark for a moment, though the sun was glaring pitilessly in at the uncurtained window, and he realized that it was mid-afternoon. He lay for a moment, and listened. The music of a band had awakened him. It was growing louder. It was approaching. Only half awake, he stumbled to the window.

It was the funeral cortège of Cornelius Corran — and the terms of his will had been carried out.

A wangan bateau had been slung upon wheels, and in it was the ornate coffin. There were no flowers. On head and foot of the casket were coils of snubbing warp. Six tote-team horses drew this outfit, and Governor Harriss sat beside the driver, his rusty plug hat adding funereal dignity.

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

Refuse any substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills; sold for 25c., all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Lawson Tells New York that Canada Has Everything

Tom Lawson, the noted financier, New York, who has been making a trip through Canada, says: "Let me tell you. This Canada is the greatest place you ever saw. I'm tempted to move out there. They've got everything. There's so much of everything out there that it makes you want to cry because you don't know where to start. Try to see all the scenery and you'd wring your own neck. MOVING PICTURES

Owners of Montreal Theatres Ask That Tax be Deferred

According to a petition presented to the Board of Control, Montreal, on behalf of some twenty proprietors of moving picture shows, the motion picture business is not nearly so profitable a one as it is thought to be. The petition requests that the collection of the $500 license fee prescribed by law be deferred, as the business is slack and the proprietors have been put to great expense in making their premises conform to the civic by-laws. The petition was rejected, and the proprietors must pay or go out of the business.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—Cables were all weaker and prices lower, the foreign market for wheat being generally affected by the very probable settlement of the Moroccan situation shortly. Demand was dull. Russian barley was offered here at 55s, c.i.f., Montreal, per 400 pounds, October shipment, which is equivalent to 72c per bushel of 48 pounds. An easier feeling prevailed in the local market for oats and prices declined ½c per bushel. A fair trade continues to be done in flour for local account. Mill feed is scarce and firm under a good demand.

In sympathy with a further advance in cheese prices at country points, the market is much stronger and ¼c to ⅜c per lb. higher under a good demand. Receipts for the week were 76,900 boxes, compared with 74,732 a year ago. Butter is quiet and easier with prices ½c per pound lower. Receipts for the week were 15,323 packages, as against 12,880 a year ago. The demand for eggs is good at firm prices. Receipts for the week were 4537 cases, as against 5005 a year ago. Provisions fairly active.

He was born in the mines of Siberia, where his father spent many years as a political prisoner.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM

An English Teacher Makes Some Comparisons in Our Favor

Miss Bocking and Miss Cossey, teachers of London, England, have been studying educational conditions as they exist in Canada. "We have not yet seen Canadian schools actually at at work," said Miss Bocking, "but from a thorough examination of the buildings in various cities it is evident that one thing stands out most clearly, and that is the excellent equipment of the schools in this country; the little things that tend to make comfort and efficiency are to be found in all your schools—for the children single desks are provided, while for the teacher the telephone is installed in every room. From what I can make out from your buildings you deal with the young idea in a manner totally different from that which we use, especially in the kindergarten, in which you seem to be far and away ahead of us. You must be, for in your kindergarten department there seems to be just one large room and very few class rooms in connection, so that you must confine your attentions strictly to the kindergarten work. In London we have a large central room, accommodating from three to five hundred children and from five to eight class rooms in connection, so that all the infants can take certain kindergarten lessons together, and then can be separated according to the extent of their knowledge. The whole plan of our schools is different. On the ground floor the infants are taught; above them the first floor is devoted to the girls' school, while the boys occupy the top floor."

TWO NEW STEAMERS

Order Placed with Glasgow Firm for Palatial Boats for Pacific

The Canadian Pacific Railway has placed an order for two new steamships for its Vancouver-Hong Kong service with the Fairfield Shipbuilding Company, of Glasgow, one of the most famous firms along the Clyde. The new ships will be of the most modern construction in every respect. They will be 595 feet long over all, and will have a tonnage of about 15,000 tons. They will be equipped with engines of from 16,000 to 17,000 horse-power, and will be required to maintain an average sea speed of eighteen knots per hour, and develop on their trial trips a speed of twenty knots an hour. In size a trifle larger than the Atlantic Empresses, the new boats will have accommodation for 1,300 passengers, and will also have a huge freight-carrying capacity. The new boats will be literally floating palaces. They will be luxuriously fitted up, and will undoubtedly materially decrease the running time between Vancouver and the Orient. The boats will cost about $2,500,000 each, fully completed.

BIG STORAGE ELEVATOR

Montreal Harbor Commissioners Decide to Make Extensive Additions

The harbor commissioners have further extended their plans with regard to the building of grain elevators, and have determined to add a storage elevator with a capacity of 850,000 bushels to the new elevator, which is to have a capacity of 1,772,000 bushels, now in process of construction. When complete the elevator will be able to handle 40,000 bushels inward per hour and, at the same time, 50,000 bushels outward. With this addition the capacity of the port will be over 5,000,000 bushels.

PIONEER GONE

Thomas Elliott Formerly of Peterboro Died in Oregon

Mr Thos. Elliott, a former resident of Peterboro, died at Mill City, Ore., U. S. A., on Sept. 7, 1911, and his remains were laid to rest at Dallas, Ore., where he had spent 25 years of his life and his wife had been buried five years before.

A very appropriate and impressive service was held in the Methodist church on the morning of the funeral when the pastor, the Rev. Geo. F. Hopkins, made a strong and persuasive appeal to the friends assembled for a true life and devoted service. His text was "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. . . they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them," which, he claimed, he found, and would continue to find, abundant illustration from the life of the deceased.

Mr. Elliott was born near Peterboro Jan. 8, 1830, and in 1852 was married to Martha Might, Cavan (near Millbrook.) Up to the time of his going to Oregon, his business was that of a farmer, but there his work was more diversified. He was always an exceedingly industrious man, hard work seeming to him as the breath of life.

In earlier years he took a very active interest in politics, as a supporter of the Liberal party, as well as in municipal and school matters. He was for a time a member of the Peterboro Town Council. After going to Oregon his political energies were unsparingly devoted to the Prohibition Party of the United States.

Preeminently he was a religious man. Converted in boyhood, he gave about 70 years to the church and Sunday school; particularly to the latter of which he was a Bible class teacher from early manhood. He served the Methodist church till near the end; but it is a mark of his catholicity of spirit that, soon after his marriage, he transferred from the Wesleyan to the Bible Christian branch of Methodism, and that only two years ago, as a matter of convenience, he left the fold in which he had been so long nurtured and took up heartily, so far as his declining strength permitted, the spirit and activities of the Presbyterian church.

ANOTHER ROUSING RALLY FOR CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE, VICTORY ON THURSDAY

That victory is in the air for Borden, and that Mr. Burnham's return as Dominion member for West Peterborough is assured, was the unanimous expression on the part of the speakers and the large audience at the Conservative rally of Saturday night.

Enthusiasm, bordered with a willingness to be up and doing, on Thursday, September 21st, was in evidence at all times, and the supporters of Mr. Burnham are confident of carrying the day with a large majority, despite that opposition, which they expect, and are prepared to overcome by a good clean fight.

Mr. Kendry was again in the chair and explained Mr. Burnham's absence. He held that if his followers did their duty, and he was sure they would, West Peterborough would be carried for Mr Burnham by a large majority. The country from one end to the other, it was certain, was all going to do their part and return Mr. Burnham All reports now coming in were most favorable, "We want to see West Peterborough redeemed," said the speaker, amidst great applause.

WELLAND AND GERMAN.

Mr E. A. Peck was the first speaker. He said he was sure that the electors would do their duty when called upon. He pointed to the fact of Mr. German, a Liberal, having been elected by acclamation in Welland, although he was opposed to the reciprocity pact.

MAKE MONEY—PERHAPS

The big question was whether reciprocity would be adopted or not. The only argument advanced to us in support of the pact was that possibly there was a chance of Canada making a little money at the expense of the United States.

"Whatever chance there is you all know," remarked the speaker (laughter) On the other hand there were three things, anyone of which justified the people of Canada in voting down the agreement. Mr Peck took up the purpose of Britain to bring out his point. Britain had made it a business to develop its products and manufacture them, and it also imported products and manufactured them Not a scrap of raw products had gone out. Now England was so strong financially that she loaned not only millions but billions of dollars. United States was alive to these conditions. They see their resources being depleted and see the good thing for them in getting our products to the United States. The passage of the agreement will give them our products. But we should stand together and develop our own resources. We have what they haven't got in England, That is wheat. It has to be ground and what is to hinder us from grinding it right here and making our own flour? We have the water power. Why not get the grain which will pass over our door, by the Georgian Bay and Seaboard lines through Peterborough and grind it in this district.

CANADA MUST SPEAK.

United States was also after our lumber under the pact. We wouldn't even be allowed to plane it. They would want to take the raw material and take it across to their country to build up their own industries. It was for us to say whether or no, they would get it. We could build up industries if we kept it. Everything is in our favor and we should vote down the pact.

And the money part was not all. This agreement was with a country nine times more than ourselves. If consummated the pact would have to be in force for a considerable time. The speaker explained how Canada would be tied to the agreement. We would not be able to do away with the arrangement whenever we wanted to, he held.

"There was no tribunal, its force that's going to decide," said the speaker, "and the only way to stop trouble is avoid having anything to do with the United States." Sir Wilfrid Laurier said himself on one occasion that the best way to get along with the United States was to have nothing to do with them."

There was nothing simple about the agreement, as Laurier had said, but rather it was complicated, and it was only through Mr. Borden's efforts that the pact didn't go through, as Laurier wished, without consulting the people.

In conclusion Mr. Peck urged that Canadians carry out their own destiny.

BEGGARS, THEY CRIED.

Mr Kendry, before calling on the next speaker, referred to the statement of Mr. W. J. Crossen, of Cobourg, who said that if reciprocity passed the car works at Cobourg would have to close down. He also ridiculed the argument of Mr. Stratton, who said to the farmer, you vote for this and you get higher prices, and to the consumer, you vote the same way and you get lower prices. (Prolonged laughter). Cries of "beggar" were heard when he spoke of the meeting of Stratton and Kerr on the market.

There was no argument in the case. Fielding and Paterson had not been out of their own riding. They knew they had to fight. The Liberals said they expected to lose in the cities, but that they would gain in the country. This was not so. "We will have a bigger majority in the country than ever," said Mr. Kendry.

Other addresses were given by Messrs. Duff and Mullholland and others, much of the speakers being warmly applauded by the audience.

Hearty and vigorous cheers for the King, Mr. Borden and Mr. Burnham brought the meeting to a close.

Mr. Russell Patterson, who has been connected with the Cressman Co., Limited, for the past five years, and for two years as manager of the staple goods department, is severing his connection with the firm and leaves on Wednesday next to attend Queen's University where he intends studying medicine.

Mr. Patterson, who has been very popular with his fellow employees and also his employers, was pleasantly surprized when about to say good-bye on Saturday evening. The staff gathered around him and after Mr. Schleuter read an address, Miss M. Davidson presented him, on behalf of the staff, with a handsome club bag and fountain pen.

"Patsy" made a suitable reply, thanking his friends for the many kindnesses accorded him during his sojourn amongst them and for this token of their esteem. He would always have pleasant memories of the time spent as a member of the Cressman staff.

Canned Music

During the late war with Spain, General Miles, at that time ostensibly the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, got himself into all sorts of trouble by saying that the troops were being served with embalmed meat, referring to the meat done up in cans and sold for the use of the Army, says Washingtonian. Of course he had in mind the age of the prepared article, as well as the chemicals used for preserving the meat. This was before the days of pure food laws, and at a time now when it is claimed the packers went upon the theory that any old thing was good enough to can, and that some chemical preservatives are actually beneficial to health.

"Canned Music" does not stand in this class. Some of the old songs may be old, in fact some of them are old, for they were written by such eminent composers as Handel, and Hayden, and Meyerbeer, and Gluck, but they are fresh and as young as when they were first given to the public. Those songs sung by the best singers, and the music accompanying them, rendered by the orchestras and bands of Europe and America, has been canned, and so perfectly has the work been done that when served up from the can they are almost equal to the best produced in the opera house.

Every evening hundreds of thousands of people listen to a delightful entertainment without the trouble of going to the opera house. They can have this entertainment when the opera houses are closed and the professional singers and musicians are taking their summer vacation. There was a time when eminent musicians as Sousa railed against this music, but now Sousa and his incomparable band are playing through the canned process to thousands who have never had an opportunity to hear the band any other way.

It is not alone the music of this high class that one can get from his can, but if he desires he can have that of the popular order, and the reproducing instruments are especially fine in rendering sacred music and there are few church choirs that render as sympathetically and well the grand old hymns of Luther, Wesley, Watts, and others who have made their songs of praise so touchingly beautiful. The chants and songs of the early missionaries had more to do with civilization among the barbarous and savage nations than the priestly vestments, church ceremonies or eloquent sermons. Music is a great civilizer; not only a great civilizer, but a great refiner. The household wherein music is found is always more peaceful, more refined than is the one where music is never heard. Edison in his invention of the Phonograph was a greater benefactor to the human race than even Bell, who gave us the telephone. All styles of Edison Phonographs sold on easy payments. AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE TORONTO

"Thais" Jos. M. Gaites' Spectacular Production to be Presented Week of September 18

A sensation followed the announcement that Paul Wilstach, author of "The Life of Richard Mansfield," and associated with the famous actor for eight years during his tours of America, had written a drama based on "Thais" which will be seen for the first time in Toronto at the Princess Theatre for week of September 18th, under the management of Jos. M. Gaites, with Miss Constance Collier in the name part.

Mr. Wilstach has closely followed the scenes as they appear in the novel. Anatole France, one of the greatest of living literary workers, is the author of the novel, which became the basis for the opera by Jules E. F. Massenet, which achieved such popularity in this country when sung by Miss Mary Garden.

The book is a magnificent piece of literature and the opera has many things to relieve it of harsh criticism and much that is truly beautiful.

As a usual thing, however, it is not counted a good business risk to dramatize themes that are familiar with a musical accompaniment. But Mr. Gaites made arrangements with Massenet for the use of his score for entr'acte music, so this latter is an important feature of the dramatic "Thais."

"Thais" is a story showing the anchorites of the ancient Theban desert The piece takes its name from a beautiful creature, as sinful as she is beautiful. There comes to her a hermit who seeks to convert her from her wicked life. He preaches and prays and pictures the temptations that befel Parsifal. Finally he yields, but when he has come thoroughly under the influence of "Thais," and has lost his soul, she suddenly awakens to the new life, and goes to the "White Sisters" on the African shore of the Mediterranean.

Mr. Gaites in addition to Miss Collier, has engaged Tyrone Power to appear in the part of the hermit. And Julian L'Estrange to play the part of Nicias the favorite lover.

"Thais" is produced with a wonderfully beautiful scenic investiture and will be the treat of the theatrical season. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

Mail orders will receive prompt attention, if they contain certified cheques, postal or express orders, payable to Theatre. If parties desire tickets mailed, self-addressed envelope must accompany order, thus avoiding possibility of error. Special attention will be given to all out-of-town orders. Special round trip excursion rates will be given on all railroads. For information regarding fares and schedules of trains consult local ticket agent.

KERR'S TRICK.

To the Editor of the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 18.

Dear Sir,—I have been credibly informed that certain Liberal supporters of Mr. Kerr are now circulating a statement that I as one of Mr. Sexsmith's supporters, had endeavored to rent the Norwood town hall for the afternoon and evening of Thursday, the 14th inst., after the nomination was closed.

Whilst it is perfectly correct, that I did go to the clerk's house, and as he was not at home, I told his wife that I wanted to secure the town hall for Thursday evening, after the nomination for a meeting of Mr. Sexsmith. When the clerk returned my request was told to him and he sent me word stating the hall had been engaged previous to my application for Mr. Kerr's meeting Thursday night, the 14th inst.

I positively assert I never made an application to rent the hall for Mr. Sexsmith for the afternoon, as I well knew the hall was never on nomination day rented to either of the political parties. It is a public hall, open to both political parties alike at nomination. Mr. Kerr is the only candidate who ever attempted and succeeded in renting the hall for the afternoon meeting and thus attempt to secure an undue advantage by controlling the meeting.

FIRE AT THE GAS PLANT

Sunday's Call Made Third Trip for the Firemen

After having had two runs to the Gas Works, on Saturday, the firemen were called out again at 6.20 yesterday evening, to the same place, and succeeded in controlling the blaze which started from an unknown cause. The damage amounts to about $175. Several of the firemen had their new suits badly damaged.

Acting Fire Chief Menzies left a length of hose at the building during the night but no further trouble occured.

TOOK TWO FIRSTS

Two of the youngest prize winners at the Peterborough Fair were Master Roy and Robbie Sedgwick, who captured two firsts with their colts, "Lady Bucket" and "Dawn." The youthful horsemen reside in Otonabee, a short distance to the east of the lift lock, and are naturally "tickled" over their wins.

THIRD DAY OF PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL WAS THE BEST 12000 PEOPLE AT GROUNDS

Fine Weather Brought Thousands of People to the City Fair—Good Horse Races Won by Paterson and Lew Jean — C. G. E. Team Hold Football Tpophy

A fine day on Saturday brought the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition to a close with a directors in a most jubilant mood over the successful termination and the ultimate results of the three days. In conversation with Secretary Hall this morning, the Review ascertained that, although the complete returns have not yet been made, the attendance on Saturday far surpassed in numbers that of the closing day last year, and it would be safe to place the number of visitors at 12,000. Mr. Conway, the treasurer, in speaking to the Review, says that the financial result is also very pleasing.

LARGE LIST OF EXHIBITORS.

The number of exhibitors in all the classes exceeded that of former years, and nearly all the prizes were keenly contested. The quality of the exhibits, especially those of the agriculturists, which were of the highest, also reflects great credit upon the growth of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition from year to year, and shows that the farmers of the county are taking an interest in preparing their exhibits for exhibition purposes.

SATURDAY'S PROGRAM.

Between the heats of the races, which are reported in another column, judging of the different horses took place before the grand stand, such as the pony class, gentlemen's turn-outs, lady drivers, etc. The class of horses shown was of a very fine order, and in every event there was keen competition. The judges often had trouble in deciding who should carry off the red rosette.

VAUDEVILLE PERFORMANCE.

The high class vaudeville performance, as on the previous day, won approval and applause from the spectators. The artists were very clever and the exhibition visitors appreciated their work. The 57th regimental band, under Mr. R. Gliddon, was present in full strength and furnished a continuous program during the afternoon.

THE DOG RACE.

The dog race, in which three dogs, Nogie, Jean and Sport were entered, provided a few minutes of sport. The first heat was opened with a fight at the start between two of the contestants, with the result that the peaceably inclined racer got a good start and came romping home a victor. Another heat was allowed, and, as before, there was trouble at the start, and some of the dogs ran in the wrong direction. The others raced on, and the one which came in second before nailed first place this time. As there was not time for another heat, the money will be divided between "Nogie" and "Jean."

MOVING OUT.

About seven o'clock the exhibitors began pulling down their tents and moving out, and in a very short time, where had been presented so pleasing a view of activities for three days, all was desolation. At nine o'clock there was nothing left but the souvenirs of three busy days.

GRAND STAND WINS FAVOR.

The grand stand was well patronized at every performance. As one citizen remarked, "It is worth the additional price to feel safe, which I never did on the old stand."

The roof has not been completed yet, but the seating capacity was utilised to the limit.

The races on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition consisted of the 2.22 class and the free for all. In the former, four heats were necessary to decide the issue. "Patterson" owned by Mr E. Jones came in fourth in the first heat, but he had it all his own way for first place for the remainder of the going. The race simmered down to a fight between Percy H and Robert Patch, for second money and every heat kept the spectators on their feet. Percy H. won out. Lulu Chimes failed to finish in the last heat and the driver did not report his trouble.

In the free-for-all, Mr. Hodgins' horse Lew Jean, took all three heats and first money, and "Undertaker" also owned by Mr. Hodgins' got second place over "Dot L." When scoring in the third heat "Undertaker" and Dot L. persisted in trying to get the advantage of each other and always started away ahead of the pole horse. Dr. Sinclair, the starter, warned them three times, and when the driver of Dot L. was the delinquent a fourth time, he had to hand over $5 as a fine. "Furioso" was too late in entering and could not get a race.

2.22 CLASS

Patterson, Jones, Peterboro	4	1	1	1
Percy H., Storey, Peterboro	1	2	3	2
Robert Patch, Hodgins, Orillia	2	3	4	3

C. G. E. RETAIN TROPHY

The football match at the exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon between the champion C.G.E. team and St. James' church league champs. for the championship of the county of Peterborough and the R. R. Hall trophy, resulted in a win for the former by a 3-0 score.

The champions won the trophy last season, and by a win next year will be the owners of the cup, which is emblematic of the championship of the county.

Corless, the fast outside wing of the C.G.E. was absent from the city and Boycott took his place.

The Methodists also presented a slightly different eleven to that which won them the Church League championship this summer. Neil was a new man in goal and Tarte and "Bill" Miller played with the Y.M.C.A. in the spring schedule. Braun, the captain, was unable to play as he hurt his leg at a practice and Gribb captained the team in his absence.

The Church Leaguers did not have the combination which characterized the play of the C.G.E. team. They often forced the play into the territory of the Midland Leaguers, but could not score.

The first half ended with C.G.E. leading by one goal.

SECOND HALF

St. James' started in strong to overcome the lead of the initial period, and often looked dangerous. They had several shots on their opponents' goal but faield to connect, moreover, they could not check back fast enough and the C.G.E. rushed the play into St. James' territory and beat Neil with two more shots.

C. G. E. 3, St. James' 0.

The line ups were as follows:

C. G. E.

Goal—Moraity.
Backs—Hull, Hooper.
Halves—Allen, Padgett, W. Dawson.
Forwards—Smith, French, Miller, E. Dawson, Boycott.

ST. JAMES'

Goal—Neil.
Backs—Gribb, (capt.) Jackson
Halves—Sandiford, Donnell, Tarte.

ELECTORS HEARD THE FACTS OF FARMERS' BANK CASE

Mr. Burnham and Mr. Soden Spoke to Fanmers at Centreville

Mr. J. H. Burnham, accompanied by Mr. R. J. Soden, went to Centreville, Saturday night, when a big meeting was held.

Mr. Burnham asked if any reference had been made to the Farmers' Bank by Mr. Stratton? A voice replied that Mr. Stratton had denied that he was charged with complicity in it in any way and asserted that the judges had absolved him and discharged him. "If that be the case," said Mr. Burnham, "I suppose I must show up that appalling lie once more." He then read Mr. Stratton's statement at Middleton's that he, (Stratton) had been honorably discharged by the judges, who had expressed regret, (so Stratton said) that he had been subpoenaed at all. "Which is the truth?" asked Mr. Burnham, who then drew out of his pocket Mr. Stratton's affidavit, beseeching the authorities to let the case against him stand over till the Autumn from May last, and also read his own acceptance of the Examiner's challenge to meet Mr. Stratton on the stage of the Opera House, and give him a chance to show how innocent he is. Had Mr. Stratton accepted Mr. Burnham's challenge? Not so far! What was the truth? Mr. Stratton was under indictment and would be tried with the others at the assizes in Toronto. What was Mr. Stratton's object in bluffing and lying as he was doing? He was doing it because he knew that no self respecting man could vote for a candidate charged with fraud. To all this Mr. Stratton had added the sin of unblushing falsehood, and boasted that he was the friend of churches and a lover of the Gospel. Mr. Burnham said that he had yet to learn, he regretted to say, of anything approaching Mr. Stratton's cheek and hypocrisy.

Mr. Soden in the course of an hour's address asked how the land would lie as to the middleman, whom the Liberals professed to get rid of, if the pact passed? "You have now a home market," he said, "and your wives sell to the buyers direct at the market and elsewhere. What are you asked to do now? You are asked to look to a foreign market, where you must have a middleman to do business for you. That's the way the Liberals propose to abolish the middleman!" (Laughter.)

The meeting closed with the usual cheers.

TWO DOLLAR BILLS MUCH IN EVIDENCE

It is only one of those occurrences which often happen in business, or does it signify anything, that there appears to be in circulation at present an unusual number of $2 bills? Several local shop-keepers have noticed within the past two weeks when balancing their cash, that they had an extra supply of the two spots in their tills. One dealer, who at other times had perhaps ten, on one occasion recently counted twenty-one. Another had received throughout the day fifteen, and so on.

BRIGHT SERVICE AT MURRAY ST.

Sunday Scholars Were Presented With Pens

The rally service at Murray street Baptist church yesterday morning proved to be most successful and interesting to the young people of the Sunday school, as well as for their parents, who made up a large congregation.

On the first of June last the Sunday school scholars were asked to make it a point to attend church service during the summer months. No mention of prizes was made, but the scholars responded in such a praiseworthy manner that later it was decided that some recognition should be made.

Yesterday a bronze pin was presented to each of the scholars whose name was called out by the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, and who announced that 60 scholars had attended church service ten or more Sundays during the three months.

The congregation also heard two well prepared addresses. Miss Abbie Gadbutt's subject was "The Value of the Sunday School," and Miss Browett dealt with the benefits to be derived from the "Pocket Testament." The pastor gave a five minute address, explaining the object of the campaign, in which the Sunday school scholars had acquitted themselves so creditably. It was to get them to cultivate the habit of attending church service.

Young vocalists from the Sunday school occupied the choir gallery and sang appropriate choruses, under the leadership of Mr. F. W. Miller.

MISS CHALMERS AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The congregations at St. Paul's yesterday listened with great pleasure to the vocalism of their new soprano soloist, Miss Mary G. Chalmers. She has been engaged to succeed Miss Helen Davies, who is leaving the city. Miss Chalmers is an honor graduate of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and is now on the teaching staff of the local conservatory. Her singing yesterday was most favorably received by the people of St. Paul's, who are greatly pleased at having secured the services of such a talented successor to Miss Davies. Her reception to Peterboro as a distinct acquisition to its musical circles, promises to be most gratifying and sincere.

Her solo at St. Paul's yesterday morning was Gounod's "There is a green hill far away," and in the evening "Hossana" by Graunier. Both were given with fine feeling and expression.

MUSIC BY THE GEORGE ST. CHOIR

Special music of a very impressive nature was supplied at George street Methodist church on Sunday. At the evening service, Mrs. J. H. Renwick, in her solo, "The Prodigal Son" made a distinctly affective impression

The anthem by the choir was "the Homeland" which was sung with precision and extreme feeling.

HARVEST FESTIVAL OF ALL SAINTS'

The Harvest Thanksgiving of All Saints' church, will be held Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. The preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Boyle, professor of Trinity College, Toronto. Dr. Boyle is one of the ablest of the younger clergy of the church, and no doubt a large congregation will hear him in this, his first visit to Peterboro.

Open All Winter

The popularity of the Algonquin National Park, Ontario, has been pronounced this year, and it has been necessary to use at least 25 large tents as an auxiliary to the accommodation of the Highland Inn, at Algonquin National Park Station.

Most people return to their homes in the early part of September, but as this is one of the most delightful months in this territory, those who can make it convenient are advised to spend a week or two there. The hotel is also open all the winter, and with the bracing air of this locality (1700 feet above the sea) a most delightful sojourn can be spent even in the winter months.

A handsome illustrated booklet may be had on this territory upon application to Mr. A. E. Duff, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

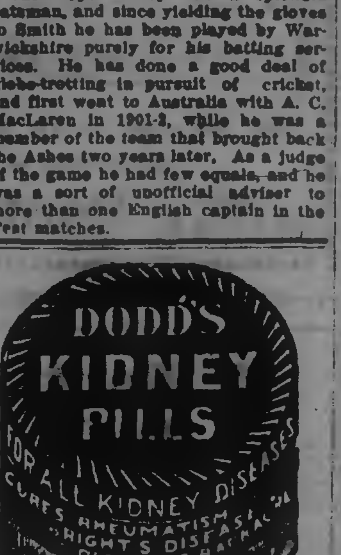
FLANAGAN'S WAIL

Says the London Sports Were Not to His Liking

"I went over to England and Ireland," said Tom Flanagan, "expecting to find the best class of sportsmen in the world, the same as I did in amateur sport. Instead, I found the cheapest class of pikers and grafters in the world around London. I got so thoroughly disgusted with the methods of some of these people that I threw up the fight I had arranged between Petty Officer Curran and Johnson in Belfast, and came home. Now don't mistake me. In Belfast at the National Club, I met the finest sportsmen I ever met, and we were getting along like a picnic party with our fight, when I got disgusted at the cheap methods of certain English newspapers, and quit. Do you know what the sporting editor of one of the largest sporting papers in England did to me? Why, demanded that he be allowed to name the referee and furnish the gloves for the Curran-Johnson fight. That meant a hold-up of $500 for the referee, to be split up among these people, and when I refused, why, they went at us hammer and tongs. I wouldn't stand for an old bogey like they proposed for a referee, and so everybody took a whirl at us. If the fight had been in the middle of July I would have stuck to my guns and pulled it, but I couldn't stand a month of it all alone. Say, you have an idea that the National Sporting Club of London, England, is a swell, big, plush-lined and gold-plated affair, haven't you? Well, it isn't. It is a dirty little scrap of a place, like a cheap dance-hall, and it only seats 500 people. It is as bad as some of those Buffalo fight club rooms behind a beer saloon. The people who run it are a bunch of gamblers. Lord Lonsdale and those good sportsmen who are supposed over here to be at its head, are just ordinary members who go to see the fights. When Hugh McIntosh cabled that the National Club people had tried things to put his shows out of business I didn't believe it. I do now, and I want to tell you that the bunch over there got McIntosh coin. By underhand work they induced him to overbid on boxing, and he got well hooked. People over here do not appreciate Bob Day. I tell you, Day would lick Curran in four rounds and would beat Bombardier Wells in a finish fight. He is a better man than people around here give him credit for being. He has beaten every man who has come over here yet to meet him."

A Noted Batsman and Wicket Keeper Leaves the Crease

Arthur Lilley, the great Warwickshire wicketkeeper, owing to business claims, has announced his intention of retiring from the Midlands team. Lilley, who has kept wicket in more Test matches than any other player in the world, first played for Warwickshire in 1888, when the Midlanders were in the second-class county rank, and it is nearly twenty years ago that he made 124 not out, against Surrey at the Oval. For besides being a great wicketkeeper Lilley was a splendid batsman, and since yielding the gloves to Smith he has been played by Warwickshire purely for his batting services. He has done a good deal of globe-trotting in pursuit of cricket, and first went to Australia with A. C. MacLaren in 1901-2, while he was a member of the team that brought back the Ashes two years later. As a judge of the game he had few equals, and he was a sort of unofficial adviser to more than one English captain in the Test matches.



FINE RETURNS FROM THE TURF

Profitable Speculation in England in Golden Horseflesh—Big Profits From Celebrated Steeds

That wonderful mare has just been sold for $35,000, long after her sensational career on the course had come to an end. This recalls other striking Turf deals.

More than one horse has won a fortune for the present Duke of Portland, but his most marvellous stroke of luck was his purchase of the invincible St. Simon, whose death occurred only a few years ago. When Prince Batthany died, his horses came under the hammer, and amongst them was a two-year-old which attracted the Duke so greatly that he acquired it for $8,000. That two-year-old was St. Simon, and he was never defeated on the Turf, winning nine races worth $23,000.

On retiring from the course, St. Simon went to the stud, and he proved a most distinguished father. Two of his sons—the late King Edward's Persimmon and Diamond Jubilee—won the Derby; five of his daughters won the Oaks; and he was the sire of four St. Leger winners and of two victors in the Two Thousand Guineas. In fees alone he earned no fewer than $1,250,000.

Shrewd owners of racehorses are ever on the watch for young thoroughbreds, and there are many extraordinary examples of valuable racers being discovered in the most unlikely places. Deadlock, the dam of the famous Isinglass, was brought out of the shafts of a trap in the streets for $125. The popular idol, Victor Wild (who ruined half the small bookmakers when he won his second Jubilee), was picked up out of a selling race for a few sovereigns by a London publican.

Bremon, the winner of a recent Grand National worth $12,200, won for his friends quite a fortune in wagers. A few days afterwards it carried off the Lancashire Steeplechase at Manchester, value $10,000. Yet this 'chaser was purchased by his owner for $1,000. The late King made a good bargain when he acted upon John Porter's advice and bought Perdita II. for $4,200. She was the mother of Florizel II., Persimmon, and Diamond Jubilee, and the total winnings of the three amounted to no fewer than $355,000. In addition to this, Diamond Jubilee was sold not long ago to a Buenos Ayres breeder for $150,000.

The Derby winner, Spearmint, was bought by Major Loder at a sale of yearling horses for $1,500. Spearmint won $30,000 in two races in England and France in one year.

To Major Loder horse-racing is only a hobby, and there are many other instances of wonderful bargains made by owners who take up the sport fully prepared to sink a sum of money into it. Sir Edgar Vincent acquired Donetta for $2,250, and received $45,000 in prize money from her victories before she withdrew. Stockwell, the winner of the St. Leger, was picked up by Lord Exeter for less than $1,000, and he eventually became the sire of the late Duke of Westminster's famous quintette, Doncaster, Bend Or, Ormonde, Orme, and Flying Fox. The famous racer, Hampton, who became the parent of four Derby winners, was bought by his owner for $750, and sold later for $60,000.

But if fortunes have been made on the Turf in this delightful way, a far larger number have been squandered. One of the most sensational instances is the betting disaster of the Marquis of Hastings over Hermit's sucess in the snowstorm Derby of 1876. The Marquis paid out more than $500,000 in wagers he had lost, selling one of his estates to raise the money. Yet he was within an ace of owning Hermit himself.

At a sale of yearlings he bid $4,750 for a colt. Mr Chaplin immediately "nodded" five thousand, and the Marquis, declining the auctioneer's pressing invitation to bid again, lost his chance of securing the colt. A few days afterward the colt was named Hermit!

AFTER A WORLD'S RECORD

Tyrus Cobb Has Some Fine Work Mapped Out Ahead

To establish a world's record for batting, Tyrus Cobb, the "Georgia Peach," who leads the American League in everything that counts towards making the stellar performer of baseball history, must bat .45 or better, the .45 representing the average of "Tip" O'Neill, with the St. Louis Club in 1887. To beat the figures of "modern" baseball, Ty must better Hugh Duffy's .438 of 1894. Cobb has fallen off a few points within the past two weeks, now hitting at .435, instead of the .444 shown in last week's figures. Sam Crawford is climbing, and is pressing Joe Jackson for third place, while Lajoie is only two notches behind "Wahoo" Sam. Hans Wagner is improving as the season advances.

Cranberries are of excellent quality and are growing profusely.

THE CASE OF THE CONSUMER

Neither His Income Nor Expenditures Can Be Helped By Reciprocity

Will Reciprocity benefit the consumer or the producer, or will it help both classes?

The Globe and other pro-reciprocity organs and speakers have suddenly switched their arguments from the farmer to the resident of the town and city, telling him of the great reduction in the cost of living that will result under a policy of free trade in natural products with the United States.

The specious reasoning of these advocates of Reciprocity is the plainest evidence why the people of Canada should defeat the measure on September 21.

Take the case of the consumer. To have a reduction in the cost of living so far as foodstuffs are concerned, the consumer must buy his flour, butter, eggs, cheese, vegetables, and other staple articles of food at lower prices than prevail at the present time. If we were sure of this it is clear that the farmer could not gain by Reciprocity. But certain factors enter into the case of Reciprocity with the United States, which make it dangerous for both the farmer and the consumer of Canada.

In the first place, will free trade in natural products with a country whose people are ever complaining about the high cost of living, and who a year or so ago actually revolted against the system of distribution which made food so costly, bring a better condition to the people of Canada; work for that lower level of prices which the purblind advocate of Reciprocity is talking about? Those people on the other side of the line who have been most ardent in their claim for a lower tariff, with Canada, think they see in Reciprocity a chance of getting down to our less expensive breakfast table. Where then, does the Canadian consumer hope to gain anything by merging his grub stake with the fellow that wants cheaper board than he can get now in his own country?

Time and again in the present campaign it has been shown that the farmer of Canada would be bound to see a depressed and unprofitable market under Reciprocity, but remember that the forces working against the Canadian farmer in the United States and also in Canada would not favor the Canadian consumer. Where the Canadian farmer would suffer, there also would the Canadian consumer be affected, and this would happen in two ways.

First, the United States have a surplus production of everything the Canadian farmer grows. In wheat, for instance, the United States will have 120,000,000 bushels for export this year. Where does the Canadian producer or consumer expect to benefit by taking down his tariff wall under a relative condition like that? It would mean that in every line of foodstuff the powerful distributing agencies of the United States, the Beef Trust, King of them all, would not only be fed with an abundance of raw material, but would also have its field of operations extended into Canada, thus being enabled to spread its pernicious influence over the length and breadth of America. The consumer of Canada knows nothing about the tyrannical influence of food distribution as it exists in the States. The Beef Trust, it has been shown, kills 98 per cent. of all the cattle slaughtered in the Western States, and in the thickly populated consuming districts of the East, the Trust controls over 75 per cent. of the retail meat trade. This is why there are so many deserted farms in the Eastern States, and it is also the reason for the extreme cost of living in such cities as New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Providence.

Is it not poor business to tamper with such good times as prevail today?

The consumers in the towns and cities earn their wages and salaries from factories, offices and stores, which in the final analysis depend on the value of the agricultural output of Canada. If Reciprocity is a poor policy for the farmer and the country, as has been shown repeatedly, and as is tacitly admitted by The Globe and Hon. Mackenzie King, in their attempts to mislead the consuming class with their fallacies, Reciprocity would also be seriously injurious to the man in the town and city.

There is also a third way in which Reciprocity would react against the consumer of Canada; a way which has, indeed, already worked against the industrial classes of this country. Reciprocity has prevented manufacturing plants from being established in Canada. In the town of Welland alone, fourteen different branch factories from the United States would have started building operations this year had it not been for the interference of this measure. Not one new factory has entered Welland since Reciprocity was proposed last January, and for five years previous to that date, the average influx of industries into that town was one every ninety days.

What does that mean? Simply a direct loss to the consuming classes of Canada, as well as a very material loss to the producer and the purveyor of foodstuffs on this side of the line.

And why, one may ask, are these factories holding back from Canada att his present time when, as The Globe and others are saying, "Reciprocity only applies to natural products?"

The heads of the industries which intended to come into Canada will tell you their reason for waiting. They make no bones about it on the other side. They say, "If this Reciprocity pact goes though, we shall stay in the States and wait for the next step which will give us free access into the Canadian market.'

> WILL ANNEX CANADA
>
> "Mr. Champ Clark—What are you going to do when we annex Canada?
>
> "Witness—That is something I had not thought of.
>
> "Mr. Clark—You had better think of it, because that is what we are fixing to do."—Discussion before Ways and Means Committee at Washington.

Reciprocity in this way is simply one step towards that condition which would paralyze Canadian industrial activity and bring the consumer in this country to the deplorable state existing in Free Trade England to-day.

There is the consumer's income as well as the consumer's expenditure to consider in this tariff question. Any interfeerence with the present prosperous condition of Canada by the merging of commercial interests with the United States, must inevitably affect the financial status of Canadian industries, and in this way must bear heavily on the wage earner or consumer.

An evidence that the consuming classes of Canada are in a safer and more secure position under the present tariff system than they would be under Reciprocity is the fact that in our savings banks over 800 millions of dollars are on deposit. This amount represents—not the power of the capitalist, but rather the earnings of the workmen of Canada. No other country in the world, except France, has such a high per capita savings as ours, and this is due to the energy and thrift of the Canadian employe and the prosperity of the Canadian industry. Reciprocity then, can do nothing for the consumer of this country.

It means allying ourselves with a Republic, which at the present time is in the throes of a serious commercial depression.

It means giving an opportunity to the powerful food distributing combines of the United States to come between the consumer and the farmer of Canada as they have across the line.

It means, lastly, unprofitable markets for the farmer and bad times for the wage earning and consuming classes of our land.

A new ward was recently opened in Nanaimo Hospital.

GOT IN WRONG

Mr. Sifton Says the Government is Estray on Reciprocity

What is the general effect of this treaty? said Hon. Clifford Sifton. The general effect is that we put the Dominion of Canada on an absolutely free trade basis, so far as farm products are concerned. The farmers of Canada are on a free trade basis for what they buy—protection for the purchaser, free trade for the seller. Do you think they are likely to stand that for any length of time? I do not. I tell you, that if you have had delegations from the North West, you will have them again if this treaty goes through. After it has been in force for a few years, I venture to say that there will not be any question of the duty on agricultural implements or on any other manufactured goods, for we shall be compelleed to take all those duties off, and have practicaly commercial union with the United States. As men of common sense, let us apply to this question the same business rules that we apply to any other business matter. We open our market to the world. Read the list of favored nations along with the United States. If there is in that list of countries anybody who can raise any one of the commodities in this list cheaper than it is in Canada, unsaleable and unmarketable at home, it can be shipped and dumped into the Dominion of Canada. I cannot conceive of what our friends in the Government were thinking. I leave this question of markets and prices, and record my conviction, that if ever a Government made a monumental mistake, if ever a Government got in wrong on a subject from first to last, my honorable friends have got in wrong on this subject.

Hog Market Threatened

Under reciprocity the American hog will have free access to the Canadian market. For the month of July the price of hogs on the Toronto market ruled at $7.85, the bulk of carloads at $7.75, fed and watered at the market. At Chicago, during July, the top price was $7.85 for a few choice animals, while the running quotation for prime light hogs was $6.77½, fed and watered at the market. The corn-fed hog of the Middle West is much inferior to the Canadian article, the latter being in demand for the export bacon trade. American farmers are more heavily stocked with swine than Canadian farmers, and would welcome a chance to enter the Canadian market with their cheaper priced animals.

Investment of British Capital

The overshadowing feature of our commercial relationship with Great Britain has been the investment of capital in every field of Canadian enterprise. The British Government recently appointed a Trade Commissioner for Canada, Mr. Richard Grigg, whose second report issued on April 1st, shows that in the five years ending 1909, British investors sent $605,453,853 to Canada, irrespective of the millions brought by settlers and private individuals.

STRONG SPEECHES

Andrew Carnegie, at a dinner in New York, was talking about the horrors of war.

"Once, at the height of the Civil War," he said, "two men at a railway station saw a carload of wooden legs depart for a military hospital.

"'Those wooden legs,' said the first man, 'are a rather eloquent protest against war, aren't they?'

"'Yes,' agreed the other; 'they are what you might call stump speeches.'"

In seven cases out of ten, when people are indignant, there is no remedy.

THE REVIEW

Charged With Arson.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 18.—"Attempted arson in the third degree" reads the indictment of the grand jury returned against Dr. D. G. Dumas, mayor of Case Lake. The minimum penalty on this charge is three and one-half years.

Dr. Dumas was accused of having entered into a conspiracy to rob and burn the postoffice at Puposky on the night of June 16, when Martin Behan and Mike Davis were fired upon and Behan was captured. Dr. Dumas was arrested next day.

When Dr. Dumas was arraigned in court his attorneys asked that the prisoner be given time to prepare a plea. The request was granted.

BAILIEBORO BURNHAM AND BORDEN

"Farmer Mack" Has Something to Say Against Reciprocity

Special Correspondence.

Bailieboro, Sept. 11—We hear much for and against reciprocity from newspapers, public speakers and private citizens, but I would like to ask all you Laurier-Taft supporters, who is better qualified to know, what it means than President Billy Taft, the Chief Magistrate of U. S., the man who first pulled Laurier, Fielding, and Patterson into his web, who used every effort to get reciprocity adopted by both Houses of Congress and who is now eagerly awaiting to see Canada accept it, Sept. 21st.

Are the majority of Canadians such weak-minded, bigoted partisans, that they see nothing but Laurier and his fond partner Taft "swapping" the destiny of our country for a few cents more for this or a few cents less for that, yet they call themselves loyal Canadians; so loyal and patriotic that they will vote to let President Taft prove the truth of his sneering remark—"The bond uniting the Dominion with the Mother Country is light and almost imperceptible," made in New York on April 27 last, before the American Newspaper Association

The time has come when every Canadian should forget his precious party, and give every atom of his time and service to his country or Taft and his friends will certainly have us in his big strong web. Remember I say this specially to all members of Bailieboro club rooms, where it is frequently seen that party passion always clouds the mind against calm reason, and all appeals based on the highest grounds of patriotism and noble sentiments are poorly rewarded, as was clearly shown in discussions on Saturday evening, Sept. 3rd, with certain west line members.

Remember that Fielding and Paterson are two Rip Van Winkles, who have been politically asleep for twenty years. Canada has no more need of their little nursing treaty, than a man forty years old has of a nursing bottle.

South Monaghan electors did not allow J.R. to make a catspaw of them at Centreville last week. Let us show President Taft that he cannot make a catspaw of Canada.

Taft and Laurier would like Canada to "give this pact a trial." Oh yes! just like the dog which tried the poisoned meat. If a little does not work, they'll say we haven't got enough.

Let us look beyond party prejudice and political tradition and follow the example set by such valiant and intelligent citizens as Senator James McMullen, Wellington, Mr. F. D. Pennington, Dundas; Mr R. F. Dale, Harriston; Mr. Thos. Robertson, Toronto and many others of broad experience and wide influence.

WEDDING BELLS

HUTCHINSON—McCRORIE.

The marriage of Miss Lillian Mae McCrorie, eldest daughter of Mrs. Wm. W. Hutchinson, to Mr. Stanley W. Hutchinson, youngest son of Mr Wm. Hutchinson, took place at their residence, North Monaghan, at 4.30 o'clock Tuesday, September 13th. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church, under an arch of evergreens and autumn leaves. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Guy Tripp, of Franklin, Ont., the bride's aunt. The bride, who was given away by her step father, wore white morocco silk trimmed with satin and all-over lace. She wore the customary veil and orange blossoms, and carried a sheaf bouquet of white asters, and wore the groom's gift, a pearl brooch. Miss Mildred O. McCrorie, sister of the bride, looked charming in pink mull with white insertion and pink baby ribbon, and carried pink asters. Little Florence G. Hutchinson made a dainty flower girl in pink silk messaline, and carried a basket of pink asters, while the groom was ably supported by Mr. Erle Gillespie, of Hastings, Ont. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was an opal ring, to the flower girl a gold bracelet, and to the groomsman a fancy stick pin. The bride's gift to Mrs. Tripp was a beautiful pearl handled cold meat fork. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served in the dining room.

The happy young couple left for their future home in Lindsay, Ont., amid showers of confetti and rice. They will be at home to their friends after October 1st. The presents received were numerous and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held by their many friends.

TRUMPOUR—FRINK

The Daily Telegraph of St. John N.B., of August, 31 says—

"An interesting society wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, when one of the city's most popular young ladies, Miss Helen Waddington Frink, was given in marriage by her father, R. Walker W. Frink, to Rev. Harry R. Trumpour, of Peterboro, Ont. The officiating clergyman was Rev G. A. Kuhring rector of St. John's (stone) church. The church which was handsomely renovated of late, was prettily decorated in white and gold flowerings, and presented an attractive appearance. The decorations for the most part were the work of the Sunday school teachers.

The bride was gowned in a charming traveling costume of blue, wore a hat of a corresponding shade, and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. She was unattended. J. W. Davidson and George Morrissey acted as ushers. D. Arnold Fox presided at the organ. Besides the bridal chorus, the choir sang "O Perfect Love."

Immediately after the wedding which was attended by near relatives of the bride and groom and a host of friends, who filled the church, Mr. and Mrs. Trumpour drove to the depot and left for their future home in Vancouver, B.C., where the groom has been appointed professor in the Latimer Theological College. They take with them the best wishes for future prosperity and happiness from a wide circle of friends, who remembered them with many handsome gifts of silverware, cut glass, and other useful and valuable testimonials of esteem.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour has just been appointed by the council of Latimer Hall, Theological School of the Church of England, in connection with the university at Vancouver, B.C., to the professorship on the study of the New Testament. Although only thirty-one years of age, he has had a very bright record as a scholar, teacher, and rector. Matriculating in his sixteenth year, with honors in history, classics and mathematics, he was graduated with first class honors in classics at the University of Toronto in 1900, tying for the school medal. He spent three years as classical master at Rothesay School for Boys. Entering Wycliffe College, Toronto, which is the largest Church of England college in Canada, he stood first in practically all the subjects of the three years' course. In 1904 he took his M.A. degree at the University of Toronto, and in 1905 he helped to win a championship of the Intercollegiate debating union. In 1906 he received his B.D. degree. During 1905-6 he was tutor in New Testament and Greek. He returned to Rothesay as head master for two years. During part of this time he acted as curate at Stone Church. At the end of this period he was appointed rector of All Saints' church, Peterborough, Ont. At that time the church seated 250. Since this time this building has been transformed into the parish house and a new church was built to seat 700. The work of the church has grown remarkably in every way. The offertory has increased 30 per cent. and the communicants 50 per cent. Mr. Trumpour will begin his new duties on the opening of Latimer Hall in October, and should proved a decided acquisition to the staff of the college and the educational interests of the province of British Columbia.—Church Life.

Will Be Easily Settled.

London, Sept. 18.—The Times' correspondent at Peking says the Chinese war ministry is taking a less gloomy view of the revolutionary outbreak, and believes that should the Sza-Chuen rebellion continue it will be easily suppressed when the foreign drilled troops, which are advancing from I-Chang, and other reinforcements arrive there, as the rebels are armed mainly with old matchlock guns. According to the correspondent the Government further believes that the imperial edict issued last Monday, which now should have arrived at Cheng-Tu, will have a quieting effect.

No anti-foreign incident has yet been recorded, the correspondent says, but it is feared that unless order is soon restored similar outbreaks will occur in Hupeh, Sunan and Canton, where the natives hold grievances against the Government's policy. The correspondent says in conclusion that one certain effect of the rising will be the abandonment of military movements in Tibet and near the Assam and Burmah borders.

CRASHES INTO CROWD

Racing Car at Syracuse Literally Mows Down Spectators.

Nine Persons Are Killed and Fourteen Are Injured In Disaster at State Fair, When Lee Oldfield's Car Plunges Through Fence and Plows Its Way Through Hundreds of Onlookers—More May Die.

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 18.—Nine persons were killed and fourteen injured, some of them seriously, as the result of an accident during the closing miles of a fifty-mile motor race at the State Fair track yesterday afternoon, when a Knox car, driven by Lee Oldfield, leaped from the track, crashed through the fences surrounding it and plunged into the throngs that lined the other side of the speedway. Six of the nine people were killed outright, and two others were so badly injured that they died on the way to the hospital.

The list of dead may be increased, as it is believed that several of those who are numbered among the injured are so badly hurt that they cannot live.

The track was wetted down to prevent President Taft from being covered with dust as he went around the track. This was such as to cause drivers who were to compete in the 50 mile event to protest against it.

When the race was called Ralph De Palma and Bob Burman, who had been driving in previous races, refused to go on because of the condition of the track. They said the water had made it too dangerous for them to take chances. There was some delay, and during the time the track dried somewhat. The race was called, and De Palma and Burman were both entrants, along with Oldfield and six others.

The accident happened in the forty-third mile. De Palma had been leading with a lap to the good, and Oldfield was trailing him as they entered the first quarter of the beginning of the forty-third mile. The big cars traveling, it is estimated, at 75 miles an hour, were running side and side as they swung around the turn, after passing the grand stand on the first quarter. As they took the turn there was a report. The car driven by Oldfield leaped into the air. Then it swerved to the outer side and crashed through the fence. The crippled machine, beyond the control of the driver, plowed its way through hundreds of persons who had lined themselves along the fence in the hope of viewing the race.

Announcement that no one was hurt was made to the people in the grand stand. Despite this hundreds hurried to the point where the car left the track.

The runaway car had left people piled together, many of them mangled almost beyond recognition in heaps on the ground. At once nearly a score of the dead and injured were picked up. Hurry calls were sent to this city for ambulances and everyone in the city responded. Vehicles of many kinds on the fair grounds were also impressed into service as temporary ambulances. The dead and injured were taken to the emergency hospital on the fair grounds and at the same time the woman's building was turned into a hospital ward. Physicians on the grounds, those who were there as spectators as well as the regular staff, were hurried to the hospitals. Aid was volunteered by scores of physicians and there were many offers from trained nurses, who were in the vast throng in attendance. One woman tore off all of her under garments that bandages might be provided for the wounded. Her only sister was wounded, but she stuck heroically to her task and continued to provide bandages until she had no more material from which to improvise them.

For more than 20 miles, spectators declared, Oldfield had been driving his car with one of the shoes flapping. In the hope of beating out De Palma, however, his manager, instead of stopping him, it is said, urged him to increase his speed. In spite of the fact that it quickly became known that many had been killed and injured, the officials of the track refused to call off the race and the last few miles were run while hundreds thronged the track.

Oldfield, the driver, who is among the injured, is in a city hospital, and is being guarded by an officer, and as soon as he recovers will be arrested.

TAFT ON PEACE.

He Is Willing to Make Concessions to U. S. Senate.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 18.—In his address here Saturday night President Taft made it plain that he was willing to make a concession to the Senate to obtain the ratification of the arbitration treaties. For the first time he has taken the position that there is no good reason, if the Senate or Congress desires, why the three Americans to be appointed on a high joint commission to pass on questions should not be confirmed by the Senate, if it is thought dangerous to trust the President to make the appointments.

Mr. Taft indicated that he would go further than this and be willing to wipe out the joint high commission entirely if need be and leave the decision as to whether a question was arbitrable or not to the decision of a board of arbitration. Still further, he would be willing to have this board pass, not only upon the merits of the question, but also upon the jurisdiction.

"Either we are in favor of arbitrations of issues which are likely to lead to war, or we are not," exclaimed the President. "If we are in favor of war as the only means of settling questions of importance between countries, then let us recognize it as a principle and decline all arbitration, but if we are really in favor of arbitration as a means of avoiding war, then why should we not be willing to submit to impartial men the decision upon a question rather than to leave it to the result of a battle in which, with a fair cause, we may be beaten, or with an unjust cause we may conquer?"

It is expected that a regular street car service will soon be inaugurated at Moose Jaw.

BE SURE TO HEAR WHAT ARTHUR HAWKES HAS TO SAY TO THE BRITISH-BORN TO-NIGHT

MR. BORDEN'S LAST WORD

Keep Watch Over Destiny of Dominion

Main Issue is Canadian Freedom of U.S.

Halifax, Sept. 19.—Mr. R. L. Borden to-day issued a manifesto to the electors of Canada, in which he said in part:

As this campaign closes and the solemn duty confronts us of deciding very probably for all time, the most momentous question ever submitted to the Canadian electorate, I declare with perfect sincerity to my fellow-countrymen that the outlook is full of hope. The keen attention which the people have given to the discussion of this question has made the few weeks of this campaign far more revealing than months of ordinary debate. Throughout this Dominion the electorate now understand that they are called on to determine, not a mere question of markets, but the future destiny of Canada, perhaps of the Empire.

Even upon the economic side, the reciprocity compact is but a step in a greater process. On either side of the boundary line its advocates realised perfectly that in its final outcome this treaty undoubtedly means the commercial and fiscal union of Canada with the United States. The chief magistrate of the great republic has warned us in language of striking and unmistakable import that the consummation of this treaty will forever prevent the consolidation of our Empire. With profound insight and clear vision, he has made the memorable declaration that if Canada accept this compact she can never become a part of that great imperial commercial band which, as he anticipates, will reach from England around the world to England again. We must make our choice between reciprocity within the Empire and reciprocity with the United States. And let us never forget that Canada cannot become fiscally and commercially a part of the United States and remain politically a part—and an important part—of the British Empire.

The relations created by this compact will increase threefold the power of the United States over our commercial destinies. Less than two years ago by the threat of prohibitory duties they forced our Government to alter our tariff. Do not imagine that the spirit which compelled this unwarranted concession to our powerful neighbor will die on the morrow of its first great success. If we accept this compact, we must anticipate a renewal of the attempt. Where is our guarantee that the renewed pressure will be met in any firmer fashion than before? We recognise our constant duty to maintain the most friendly relations with the great neighboring nation, but I ask you to believe that such relations can best be assured if we preserve in fullest measure our present fiscal independence and autonomy.

Above all do not forget that the momentous choice which you must make is for all time. If the tariffs of the two countries are interlocked by this treaty, be assured that the stronger party will always carry the key.

This question is above all parties and all individuals. I appeal to Liberals as to Conservatives, and I speak to them not as a party leader, but as a Canadian citizen, whose hopes are bound up with the hopes of his country.

To all who are proud of her past, to all who hope for her future, I make an earnest and sincere appeal to rise above all party ties, to take heed of the higher considerations and to determine their course with a sense of the enduring results of their decision. I entreat them not to swerve from the straight path that leads to the making of a great nation. I beg them to cast a soberly-considered and serious vote for the preservation of our heritage, for the maintenance of our commercial and political freedom, for the permanence of Canada as an autonomous nation within the British Empire.

(Signed) R. L. Borden.

TRIED TO CASH CHEQUE FOR SEVEN MILLIONS

Man Says it Was Given Him by Englishman

Special to the Review

Toronto, Sept. 19—Fred. Turner, who claims to be a foreman in a fish company at Minneapolis, tried to cash a cheque for nearly seven million dollars at the Dominion Bank, here, to-day. He says that he came from Chicago to get the money, and that the cheque was given him by an Englishman, named Hodgson, to whom he had once shown kindness. The police are holding him until an investigation is made.

MATTHEWS CO. OPPOSED TO RECIPROCITY; A STATEMENT

Reciprocity Would Result in a Loss to Canada That Cannot Very Well Be Estimated --- Telegram to Kingston Conservative Candidate Showing Where this Influential Company Stands

This is a copy of a telegram sent by The Matthews Company to W. F. Nickle, the Conservative candidate in Kingston, in reply to statements made by a Kingston reciprocity stumper that The Matthews Company was in favor of reciprocity. The Review got it wired from Kingston from the Standard.

"We are undoubtedly opposed to the reciprocity agreement, believing that it will not only seriously affect our business, but will work out to the disadvantage of Canadians generally. As far as our business would be affected, we would say that we feel strongly that the very large trade in our Western Provinces now enjoyed by Ontario and Quebec farmers and packers would, under reciprocity, be diverted to the farmers of the Western States, and to the packers at Chicago and other centres. This applies also to the other lines of business. The changing of the flow of traffic---now running smoothly east and west---to north and south, in our opinion, would result in a loss to this country that cannot very well be estimated."

VICTORY NOW IN SIGHT

Ottawa, Sept. 19—Mr. George H. Perley, chief Conservative whip, returned to Ottawa to-day from his constituency of Argenteuil where he has been campaigning.

Mr. Perley's face was wreathed in smiles when questioned as to the prospects of his party at the polls on Thursday next. "Victory for Borden is certain," he said.

Mr. Perley stated that reports from every province were most satisfactory. Never in his experience have the Conservatives been so joyous on the eve of an election.

"Reciprocity has killed Laurier" was his parting remark.

NAILING ANOTHER STRATTON MISREPRESENTATION; WHERE THE WORKINGMAN IS STUNG

The Stratton organ has constantly—of late—been asserting that reciprocity does not injure the workingman in any way, that the duties on what he makes have been left intact. Mr. Stratton himself in his address to the electors says:

> Reciprocity will injure or disturb no industry or factory or workingman, in Peterborough or elsewhere, but on the contrary will materially promote the interests of all

Yet right in the Examiner on Friday what do we find! Under the heading GAIN IN BUYING, there is a list of reductions in duty on implements, machinery, that aggregates 70 per cent. Many of these articles are manufactured right in Canada. Everyone of them can be bought from Canadian firms—every one of them. And these firms afford employment to thousands of Canadian workingmen. Yet Mr. Stratton has the effrontery to try and deceive the workingman with the assertion that reciprocity will injure no factory or workingman in Peterborough or elsewhere. Here is the list from the Examiner:

The tax on wagons will be cut from 25 per cent. to 22 1-2 per cent.
On plows, from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On tooth and disc harrows, from 20 per cent to 15 per cent.
On binders, from 17 1-2 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On drills and planters, from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On mowers, from 17 1-2 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On horse rakes from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On cultivators, from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On threshing machines, from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On windstackers, baggers, etc., from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent.
On hay loaders, 25 per cent. to 20 per cent.
On potato diggers, 25 per cent.. to 20 per cent.
Fodder and feed cutters, 25 per cent to 20 per cent.
Grain crushers, 25 per cent to 20 per cent.
Fanning mills, 25 per cent. to 20 per cent.
Hay tedders, 25 per cent. to 20 per cent.
Field rollers, 25 per cent. to 20 per cent
Bells and gongs, 30 per cent. to 27 1-2 per cent.

Every one of those wagons, plows, harrows, binders, and other machinery bought from the United States, under the reduced duty means:

Wages paid to American workingmen instead of to Canadian workers for making them.

Money paid to American manufacturers as profit on the labor and material.

Money not paid to Canadian dealers for handling them.

Money that goes to the United States instead of staying at home, to make Canada richer.

Money that goes, to do the Canadian worker out of employment at good wages that he should get right in this country.

And Stratton says that reciprocity does not and will not harm workingman or manufacturer.

LAURIER IS THREATENING

Speaks of the Manufacturers Stand

Tells Them of the Rod They Are Preparing

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—A threat to the manufacturers was the feature of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's third and last campaign visit to Ontario. It was delivered before an enormous crowd of Ottawa people in the arena. This crowd had been got together by means of much spectacular advertising, an all day band concert on a special street car and a torch light procession at night.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrived late from Rockland, where he had been addressing a rally on behalf of the Secretary of State. Reaching Ottawa, he was presented with copies of the local evening paper, in which J. R. Booth, the lumber king, and W. H. Rowley, of the E. B. Eddy Co., condemned the reciprocity agreement.

"The manufacturers," said Sir Wilfrid, "have a case, but if they are going to take the position that we cannot benefit the farming classes without injuring the manufacturers, I take issue with them. The Government," he said, "had refused to imperil the manufacturers in the negotiations, but the manufacturers must not be surprised if they prepare rods for their own backs at no distant future. If the Canadian manufacturers will not allow the farmers to be benefitted in this agreement, they do not know human nature. The Canadian manufacturers must understand that if as a result of this election this Government is defeated, the Canadian farmer will rest under a sense of injustice. I repeat it not as a menace or threat."

The Government would, if returned pursue an unaltered course to the manufacturers, but a power might be stirred up which they could not control.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier left the Ottawa meeting to Sir Alan Aylesworth and Mr. Murphy, and crossed the river to speak at Hull. He goes to Montreal to-day.

Graham at Kingston.

Kingston, Sept. 19.— Hon. George P. Graham gave the principal address at a rally held in the interests of John McDonald Mowat in the Opera House last night. In addition the addresses were made by the candidate, Hon. William Harty, and George Mills of this city.

Reciprocity was touched on by Mr. Graham at some length. His chief argument was that as the Government had made a good showing during the fifteen years it had been in power, and it would be wise to leave well enough alone. He pictured the great boom that would come to this section of the country when the Welland Canal was deepened to twenty-five feet to allow big grain boats to come here and unload.

Abducted Young Girl.

St. Catharines, Sept. 19.—Justice Riddell, who presided at the fall assizes of Lincoln County at this city last night, handed out sentence of three years, six months to Frederick Wilson of Merritton, convicted of abducting 15-year-old Gladys Terryberry from the possession of her father. Wilson and the girl went away from the city together but through the efforts of the police were located near Ann Arbor, Mich., leading the life of tramps. They consented to return and were brought back here. The prisoner pleaded guilty to a charge of seduction, and was given two years, to run concurrently with the other sentence.

AN EARNEST APPEAL TO ALL TRUE CANADIANS

Will You Turn Canada's Destiny Southward to Washington?—Will You Commit a Crime Against Canada's Budding Prosperity on Thursday?

The Review has purposely refrained from saying a great deal about the danger to Canada of annexation in the reciprocity pact, because annexation does not at first sight seem a probable consequence. Annexation, in the strict meaning of the word, may not come for years and years, and perhaps never. But this does not in the least mean that the constant dwelling on the desirability of the United States getting the Canadian market, on getting Canadian resources, on opening up to her business men Canadian fields for labor, will not lead to serious efforts by the United States to so entangle Canada that we shall succumb to what appears to be our fate, for geographical reasons. Only the sternest resistance by Canadians to every attempt to break down the barriers between the two countries, can prevent our ultimate absorption by the United States. Our borders that march together for three thousand miles, our consanguinity, our imitation of things American, our similarity of habit and speech, are all against us in our endeavor to maintain ourselves as a great nation, alongside one of the most powerful nations in the world, and one that outnumbers us ten to one.

This is a serious problem. It is no scare story for political purposes. It means life and death to Canada as a part of the British Empire ultimately. Annexation as a forcible conquest of Canada may be a bogey. But what we have to fear—and guard against as we would guard our children from the wiles of Satan himself—is not the bold march of the armed invader; it is not the crossing of the border by the boys in blue, though this has happened within the last century. It is the deadly process, so insidious, so sapping, so far-reaching, that ties us in a business way with hooks of steel to the American chariot — that levels us to a common lot with the United States.

If we treasure our Canadian life, of which we should be so proud, and if we look forward to the day when Canada shall be known among the nations of the earth as great, prosperous and free, and the bulwark of that empire to which we are all so loyal, let us abjure this trade pact which at one sweep wipes out half the barrier which has enabled us to progress so well along our chosen path. Let us not forget that if we deal on a common level, on equal terms, with a people that outnumbers us ten to one, we are running tremendous risks of losing, imperceptibly and unknown to us, our national identity.

People of Peterborough! this issue cannot be measured by beans, or potatoes, or barley. It has to be looked at in the light, not of a year or two years but of twenty or thirty, and moreover, it has to be seen through a telescope that sees down the Path of Time for fifty or one hundred years. Shall we say now that we are willing to risk our all for 43 cents a head per year? Shall our children, and their children, point us out as the generation who committed Canada, for the first time, to the policy of making of this continent one united commercial whole?

J. R. Stratton has his faults and, perhaps, some good points. There are few men living who do not average up in the same way. We ask for a popular vote against him on this ground — leaving aside all the other issues which might be considered as campaign factors — on this ground where will be united all good and true Canadians who are not willing to be blinded by partyism, that he represents a policy that shall lead us into those verdant American pastures. He probably does not willingly stand for this policy, but the necessity of politics has forced it on him, and he will vote for it if returned. If Peterborough sanctions such a vote, which we do not believe it will, it commits a crime against the budding prosperity of this young nation that cannot be easily wiped out. The issue is clear, men! When you go to the polls, be true Canadians — first, last and all the time.

DOMINION TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS DID NOT DISCUSS IT

Reciprocity is Not Endorsed by Organized Labor—Stratton's Plea to the Workingman Based on Misrepresentation

The circular issued by Mr. Stratton, and the statement published in flaring advertisements in the local papers he can reach, about "Organized Labor being in favor of Reciprocity," is quite characteristic. He uses the words of the executive of the Trades and Labor Congress meeting at Calgary to show that the congress was in favor of reciprocity; and therefore organized labor.

The Dominion Trades and Labor Congress has not endorsed reciprocity. It is true that the executive was made the tool of a political party, was used as the instrument of the Liberals to try to help a lost cause, but the congress itself refused to have anything to do with the question. The reporter who spread the story was threatened with exclusion, so high did the feeling of the delegates run against the brazen attempt to use a labor organization for the purpose of pushing the Laurier cause.

The Trades and Labor Congress has not endorsed reciprocity, and has not even discussed it. The opinion of three or four men on the executive formed and expressed previous to the congress is merely their individual opinion, and in no wise represents anything else.

It might here be stated that the presidents of many of the International Unions have sent out circular letters to all local unions warning the members to be prepared for hard times. This refers particularly to the United States. At least one of these has been received in Peterborough and communicated to the memers of the union.

Organised labor cannot in its own best interests be in favor of reciprocity. To say that the Dominion Congress is in favor of Reciprocity is a downright and unequivocal lie.

THE WORKINGMAN DECIDES THIS ELECTION. SHALL IT BE RECIPROCITY, OR SAFETY?

Catarrhal Bad Breath

Corrected Quickly by the Use of

Catarrhozone

Catarrh is an inflammation. Where there is inflammation there is always more or less offensive secretion. Inflammation may be of the very active sort, but it is often of the slow kind, and this is the particular form in which the breath is rendered offensive and the presence of the sufferer becomes an offence to every person of delicate sensibility.

Bad breath is in itself sufficient to urge you to correct it, because one dislikes to be unpleasant to their friends, but this form of catarrh is dangerous because it supplies a hotbed for the development of Consumption or of other diseases of the throat and lungs.

Bad breath is an evidence that the microbes have found a good resting place and are carrying on their evil inroads into the health of the body.

Catarrhozone acts at once and destroys these minute organisms, but it does more—it heals the inflamed surfaces in which they found a nesting place and consequently removes both cause and effects of their action.

If we only highly estimated the value of prevention and used Catarrhozone at the beginning of a cold or just before it becomes well seated, the deadly ravages of Consumption would be stayed and the terrible agonies of sufferers of Asthma or Bronchitis completely abolished.

There is no remedy as effective for bad breath, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., as Catarrhozone. Besides being healing and soothing it is germ destroying. Nothing ever offered to the public can compare with it in its promptness, efficiency, and permanency of action, and you can buy it from any dealer in medicine throughout the Dominion of Canada, 25c, 50c, and $1.00 sizes. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

A CONSCIENTOUS VOTE

Mr. Stratton may scream and paw the air through his organ as much as he pleases, but the Examiner's reputation for sliding around truth's sharp corners will make the effect of his reciprocity assertions very light. If the Review had the space, and desired to work twenty-four hours a day, it could show up one after another of the Stratton lies and the Stratton fables, and the Stratton evasions, ad nauseam.

But what is the use? Caught in a corner, the Stratton organ merely turns around next day and repeats either the same piece of misrepresentation or piece of hot air, or perpetrates something worse. It has not the slightest sense of decency or shame. They say in some newspaper offices that the Hamilton Times is the most incorrigible newspaper liar in Canada, but we think that the Peterborough Examiner goes it one better.

The one saving hope, and the one great light in the darkness of Examiner untruths, is the knowledge possessed by most people that what it says is to be taken with a bucketful of salt, especially in political matters and at election times. The reputation of the organ is so widespread for this sort of Stratton boosting, that it is like highly seasoned pudding,—it soon palls on the appetite.

We do not think that the election in West Peterborough can be safely gauged by allowing fifteen per cent credit to the Examiner claims, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the people of Peterborough will use the discrimination that is sensible and proper, in deciding how to vote. What Senator Cox has to say in support of J.R. Stratton is to be classed as political buncombe, just as much as a lot of what Mr. Stratton says in his interviews with himself, as to his prospects.

Let us impress on everyone that a vote on Thursday is not a vote for the men alone. It is not a case of whether you prefer Stratton or Burnham as men—though in this connection it may be said that there is no comparison between the men as regards honor and moral calibre. There is a bigger issue to be decided, and just as there comes a time when a nation decides its ultimate destiny, there comes a time when every voter must stop and think seriously of what he is voting for, and helping to decide.

Let us, without resort to the political arguments that are advanced on the hustings, without an appeal to party loyalty, without trying to use the usual brand of political appeal, ask every sane, reasoning man who wishes to cast a conscientious vote on Thursday, for the good of the country at large and Peterborough in particular, to say "Reciprocity must be beaten," VOTE FOR BURNHAM.

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE DEATH KNELL OF LAURIER IS RINGING!

Canada for the Canadians and Burnham and Borden for the British connection.

Chop off the Yankee rooster's head on Thursday. Let's have a good old pot pie dinner.

Vote for Burnham and help to down President Taft and his Hearst satellites. Do they wish Canada any real good?

The political letters of the Self-made editor to Himself seem to have stopped. The Fence-Straddler has an unusually hard job to perform this time in keeping the proper political balance.

Watch for the landslide in West Peterborough, in spite of money, of organization, of a well greased following. The vote of the people, rising en masse, is something that cannot be denied.

Hear what Arthur Hawkes has to say to-night at the opera house. He is a bright, forcible, witty and entertaining speaker. What he has to say to the British born will appeal also to Canadians. Join in the last big rally of the campaign to-night.

Stratton is on his last legs, politically. Never before in the history of the riding has there been such a quiet, determined opposition to him and the cause he represents. Never before has there been such unanimity among the workingmen to line up against the give-away to the United States.

It is to be hoped that the employers of labor in Peterborough who are opposed to reciprocity will give their workingmen extra good opportunity to go to the polls and vote. In some places a half holiday has been given, but while this is not necessary, it is important that every man in the city who is qualified should be given plenty of opportunity to express his opinion.

Mr Stratton has not seen fit to appear on the platform at the opera house or anywhere else to meet Mr. Burnham in reference to the Farmers' Bank case. It was only a Stratton bluff, and was pigeon-holed where it belonged at the time. The bluff that things look well for Stratton is another of the same color. Stratton is shaking in his shoes. He doesn't know what to calculate on in this election, for the city is an uncertain vote every time.

Men are but the puppets who move on the world's stage. They play their part, as Shakespeare says, and disappear. Some of them make history. This is a time when they make history in big capital letters. This is a time when Canada decides what groove her destiny shall run in—whether it is to be laced so as to lead in the years to come to the United States, or whether it will remain in a deep and seperate groove of national distinctiveness, of adherence to the empire, and to the British connection.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FINANCE ON THE FARM

What the Farmer Sells Has Increased in Greater Proportion Than What He Buys

The prices paid to the farmer for his produces have increased much rapidly than the prices which he pays to the manufacturer for his goods. The facts were concisely stated by the Hon. Clifford Sifton in his speech to the House of Commons on February 28th: "Grain and fodder, including thirteen selected standard commodities, have risen in value 49.9 per cent.; cattle and cattle products, hogs and hog products, sheep and sheep products, fowl and turkeys have risen 48.6 per cent.; dairy products have risen 33 per cent. Now, for the purpose of comparison, let us make a different division: Crude farm products have risen 37.3 per cent.; manufactured farm products have risen 34.1 per cent.; average for crude and manufactured farm products of 35.7 per cent. This is what the farmer sells. Now, consider what he buys. He buys imported foods, woollen goods, cotton goods, boots and shoes, metals and implements. The average increase of these commodities are as follows: Imported foods, decreased 4 per cent.; woollen goods increased 23.3 per cent.; cotton goods increased 25 per cent.; boots and shoes increased 25 per cent.; metal and implements increased 2.4 per cent.; an average of all of these of 14.3 per cent. Thus, we see that the staple lines of goods which account for at least nineteen-twentieths of the average farmer's expenditure, have increased 14.3 per cent., while the goods which he sells have increased 35.7 per cent. There you have an absolutely conclusive demonstration of the position of the two classes of the community. There you have proof of the fact that the urban community is not living at the expense of the farmer, but the farmer himself is getting more than his share of the general prosperity of the community. So, then, we have prosperity, soundness, and—what else? Independence; an independent market for everything we raise and everything we sell. The local market of Canada takes from 80 to 90 per cent. of everything raised in Canada by our farming population. Where do we send the rest? We send it to the great, free, open market of Great Britain, from which market nothing but our own foolishness can possibly exclude us. So, we have prosperity, soundness and absolute independence in our markets."

THE LEATHER INDUSTRY

Without the Tariff It Would Be Wiped Out of Existence

What is the outlook for the Canadian leather industry to-day? Any one who is familiar with trust tactics, as applied to the stifling of competition, in the United States, will not doubt for one moment but that the independent tanners of Canada will be viewed as legitimate prey, to be sacrificed to the voracious appetite of the Beef Trust the same as their American fellows have been. This view is practically substantiated by one of the members of the Trust, who admits that he and his fellows have already cast covetous eyes upon this country. An English buyer in Boston not long ago was talking to one of these leather magnates, and the latter remarked in the course of his observations on the tariff situation, "If Canada would only reduce her duties 2 per cent. on all leather we would wipe the Canadian tanners out of business in a year."

Color is lent to this prediction when we consider the enormous production of leather in the United States. Her total exports of leather and manufactures of leather in 1910 amounted in value to more than $50,000,000. This great volume of business is strengthened and buttressed on every side by enormous by-products which enable the parent industry to operate on the very smallest margin of profits. Besides making fine leathers and tanning hides, the packers of the United States manufacture, as side lines, glue, gelatine, oleo-stearine, tallow, butterine, sausage casings, fertilizers, soaps and numerous other chemical productions.

PANICS IN THE STATES

Panics seem to come periodically in the United States. They rise usually in the New York stock market, lead to scarcity of money, hamper industrial operations and the movement of crops, smash banks, ruin depositors by the thousand, and spread desolation and "hard times" throughout the Republic. But their highest waves break ineffectively upon the barriers of Canadian fiscal independence.

EX-PRESIDENT DIAZ IN PARIS

The Former Dictator and President of Mexico

The former dictator and President of Mexico, General Porfirio Diaz, who is spending his compulsory retirement quietly in Paris, paid a visit to the Invalides accompanied by the Mexican Minister and some intimate friends. Several French generals were present to receive him, and among them was General Lanes, who was in the Mexican Expedition, and who recalled the days when he and Porfirio Diaz were fighting on opposite sides. The two former foemen cordially shook hands, and when Napoleon's sword was presented to General Diaz the sturdy old statesman and general took it reverently and kissed it three times. He declared that all his life he had been a great admirer of Napoleon, and was pleased with all the Napoleonic relics which he saw at the Invalides.

If the market of 90,000,000 people is so good, why have 500,000 American farmers left it to come to Canada and a market of 8,000,000.

NEWSY NOTES FROM BENSFORT

Special Correspondence.

Bensfort, Sept. 12.—Rev. and Mrs. Lloyd Smyth spent a few days with Mrs. Smyth's father, Mr. John Fletcher, before leaving for India, where he will be engaged in mission work.

Mr Stratton's meeting was held in the S.S hall on Tuesday evening. Mr. Jas. Wood occupied the chair. The speakers were Messrs. Stratton and Hall. The main issue, reciprocity, occupied Mr. Hall's attention most of the time. He thought that now was the time to accept the terms of the United States, as other countries, comparing favorably with ourselves, would be given the privilege should we not accept now. He also dealt with the egg market, proving an enormous export trade in this commodity during reciprocity, as the hen would lay better when we have a free market. Mr. Stratton read a testimony from Mr. Burnham as to his estimable character, and then followed his usual routine of what he has done and is going to do for his constituents, launching out on reciprocity and winding up with his customary appeal to the electors for their support on the 21st.

Quite a number attended Toronto exhibition last week, amongst whom were Messrs. Frank Buckham, John Fletcher, Walter Finnie, J. W. Hall, John Montgriet, R. J. Pugh and Chalmers Pugh.

The prevailing dry weather is a great hindrance to farmers in putting in their fall wheat crop. Unless rain soon comes the acreage sown will be much below the average. Many wells are also very low, and much inconvenience is experienced in procuring water for the animals.

Miss Marjorie Finnie has returned to the Lindsay Collegiate, and Miss Alma Finnie has returned to school at Yelverton.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

One of the bands marched close behind and droned the tune of "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground." George decided that Corran must have selected that tune when he made his other arrangements; it fitted the general scheme so perfectly.

But the spectacle of the girl interested him most of all. She was obeying. She was fulfilling that dreadful compact dutifully, resolutely. She sat erect on her big horse, her black velvet habit scarcely more ebon than his shining coat. The black of her robe and her hat made her face seem very pale. Harry George had never beheld a more striking picture. But what attracted him most was the courage of the girl. He had been entertaining his own opinion of a daughter who could obey such an outrageous command from a father. His own eyes pardoned her, now. He felt that he understood better.

She led the way, marshaling that unspeakable parade, and yet so wholly aloof from it in poise and demeanor that her dignity did not suffer. She was Clare Corran, carrying out the wishes of a father who had always found her loyal. And so she passed, and the young man at the window looked down on her with a new appreciation of what such loyalty meant.

She glanced up as she passed. She caught sight of him. It might have been something in his expression — some hint that he understood; it might have been memory of her patronizing treatment of this young stranger at the railroad station; but color came into her cheeks. And in that moment, as their glances met, she seemed to him not "Queen Clare," of the Great Toban, but a very forlorn little creature who ought to be cuddled in motherly arms, instead of being forced to play such a part in the pageant on that solemn day that left her an orphan.

Behind the coffin, came the rest of the rout. Men on foot, most of them staggering. All had been doing full justice to the hospitality that Cornelius Corran had flung to them from his deathbed. And, last of all, the second band closed the file, playing "Auld Lang Syne."

George had laid aside only coat and waistcoat when he lay down for his nap. He put them on, and went below into the deserted men's room of the tavern, and woke himself thoroughly by dousing water upon his head at the sink. The westering sun had left a corner of shade on the porch, and he sat down out there in a rickety, strap-bottomed chair, and smoked his pipe. He was trying to compose himself in patience until such time as Mr. Bragg should conclude that he had exhausted the resources of the Corran funeral and should be ready to start on the trail of the eloping explorers.

Bill Kyle appeared to him. Mr. Kyle had apparently dropped out of the procession.

"I was afraid they'd call on that orator for another oration at the grave," he confessed to the young man. "I stood one up at the house, and that's enough for one day."

He filled his pipe, and lighted it.

"What do you think of her, now that you've seen her?" he asked, closing one eye as he looked at George. "I know a lot of young chaps that would fall in love with her before they fell in love with her timberlands. But, in your case, I suppose you can combine business and pleasure."

George was too disgusted to reply to this raillery.

"I was speaking to Blinn Wiggin about it," went on the jocose trouble stirrer. "I told him the Great Trust Co. knew what they were doing when they picked out a good-looking chap and sent him up here. Why, son, you began making good with her right there on the railroad platform, today, when you stood on the burning trunk and all but you had fled, or words to that effect. She began you, and that's something like loving. Now, you——"

"Kyle, I've told you once or twice that I don't relish that kind of joking. Now, you cut it out."

"What be you going to do about it, if I don't?" inquired Kyle lazily. He balanced his huge fists on his knees. "But I won't hurt you, son. All I'll do is brush you away, if you ever come at me. I'll have to do that much. But you really ought to get this matter with Blinn Wiggin straightened out. Save your muscle for him, son. For he didn't seem to like what I was telling him about you."

"What grudge have you got against me, Mr. Kyle? I'm attending to my own business. But you seem determined to get me into trouble."

"Don't they ever have a little innocent fun down where you come from?"

"Damn your sense of humor!" exploded the young man. "Try it on some one else."

"It seems to work best on you," replied Mr. Kyle serenely. Then he chuckled his appreciation of the young man's wrath. "And young Wiggin has been paddling in enough foolish water, to-day, to have it work on him just about as nicely. I like to see things brought to a head."

"What in Heaven's name do you want to be so malicious for?" pleaded George desperately.

"Maybe I ain't had theatre shows enough in my lifetime," confessed Kyle. "I have to get up my own shows. A man can't go through his whole life suffering for entertainment."

Others had begun to flock back toward the tavern, the centre of the village. The hot sun had dulled the marching ardor of some; in the tavern was a room where Corran cheer was dispensed freely. In a few moments the big room, the porch, and the street in front were thronged by clamourous celebrators.

One young man interested George in spite of himself. He passed and repassed several times, and stared at George with an expression that combined interest and insolence. When he strode by and stared, Kyle chuckled. George guessed the identity of this young man in the belted corduroy coat before his attendant tormentor saw fit to fully enlighten him.

Kyle was relishing the first rehearsal of the little drama he had planned.

"Blinn," he called, at length, when young Wiggin was at some distance, and the call therefore attracted attention, "you'd better come over here and be introduced. This is the feller, and he says he's going to show you a few city tricks in the girl-catching line that will make your performances up this way look like a June pelt after the moths have been into it."

Young Wiggin came forward promptly. It was plain that he was heated by liquor, though his gait was steady. He was excited enough by what he had drunk to be a victim to Kyle's malicious meddling

"There's such a thing as joking on the wrong subject," he declared hotly. He addressed himself to the two of them.

"I am not joking Mr. Wiggin — I take that to be your name," interposed George, with dignity. "Kyle is making all the talk. You'll kindly leave me out."

"If you want to pick this thing up," cried Wiggin, now turning on George to the exclusion of the real culprit, "go ahead and pick. But you'll find it's got a hot end to it." It was plain that Kyle had done some artistic provoking. Young Wiggin was ready to fight at the first word from the one whom he thought his rival.

"You may make a fool of your own self over gossip, but you can't make one of me," said George, keeping his temper.

"If you hadn't been making some kind of cheap talk," insisted the other, "Kyle wouldn't have had anything to start on. I don't stand for any gossip about me. There's been too much of it along this border already. This is a good time to put a stop to it."

"Begin with those who have gossiped about you,' advised George, coldly and contemptuously. "As far as I'm concerned, I never heard of you till a few hours ago."

This did not placate Blinn. It roiled him more. It was dismissing him as a nobody.

"Because you're a Montreal dude, don't you think that anybody else amounts to anything else in the world? Now, you can't come up here and sneer at people! I'm going to close your mouth for you, and close it, now."

"That's the kind of talk, Blinn," shouted one of the bystanders. "You've sure got a reputation up and down the border, even if they don't know you where the bantam come from. Back it up, now!"

There was a good-sized crowd by this time. Others came running, summoned by the magic word, "Fight!" They grouped themselves in a hollow square, hemming in the two principals. The celerity with which this was done showed that fist duels in the north country were prized, respected, and were common.

"I was just thinkin' that that band music was li'ble to smooth out tempers and spoil the fightin', to-day," confided a burly woodsman to his neighbor in the press; "and that wouldn't have suited Cornelius. But them two young chaps seem to be husky enough to start 'er off in good shape."

"Now, back up what you've said about me," demanded Wiggin. "And there's only one way of backing it up."

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que. — "Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise." — Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y.—I run a sewing machine in a large factory and got all run down. I had to give up work for I could not stand the pains in my back. The doctor said I needed an operation for womb trouble but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did more for me than the doctors did. I have gained five pounds. I hope that everyone who is suffering from female trouble, nervousness and backache will take the Compound. I owe my thanks to Mrs. Pinkham. She is the working girl's friend for health, and all women who suffer should write to her and take her advice.—Miss TILLIE PLENZIG, 3 Jay St., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

A FORLORN HOPE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes a Trip Into Joliette, Que.

Joliette, Que., Sept. 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke here on Saturday evening to a good crowd, who turned out to see the Prime Minister. The district is strongly anti-Laurier, and the Laurier man has a very slim chance of beating Mr Blondin, the late member.

The Premier devoted an hour's speech to an exposition of the navy bill. So clear and strong did he make his case, and so emphatic was he, that with the sweltering heat his collar wilted and the perspiration ran down his face and neck.

The Premier in Grand Mere predicted victory, and said that Liberals all over the country had no need to regret their votes, for the Liberal program had been carried out. In 1896 false prophets had urged that the churches would be destroyed and religion ruined, but the Liberal program was wide enough to shelter all creeds and classes. He appealed to Conservatives to support him, but he remarked that he preferred yet the opinions of his friends to those of his opponents.

On the reciprocity appeal, he said it was made to reason, not to sentiment, and it was an attempt on the part of the Liberals to do better for the country than ever before. It was also to the mutual advantage of the two nations.

The Premier explained the naval scheme carefully and refuted the attacks of the Nationalists, in whose naval ideas lay one salient feature, that of destroying Laurier. But it was easier to say than to do.

The assertion was absolutely false that there would be obligatory service. In the Cartier naval scheme it had existed, but had been eliminated by the present Liberal Government. The Premier went into the cost, the reason for and the future of the navy, and said it was an attempt on the part of Canada to assert her nationhood.

French Aviator Killed.

Verdun, France, Sept. 18.—Edouard Nieuport, the French aeronaut, died yesterday as a result of internal injuries received when he fell with his machine Friday. The aeroplane was caught in a gust of wind as it was rising from the ground and was capsized. Nieuport, senseless, was lifted from the wreckage and an immediate examination showed that no bones had been broken. The aeroplane, however, had struck the ground with sufficient force to be torn to pieces and it was doubted if the aviator had escaped without grave injuries.

Suspended City Engineer.

St. Catharines, Sept. 19.—By a vote of five to four the City Council last night voted to suspend City Engineer Benzie, pending investigation into all public work now in progress in various parts of the city. Mayor McBride produced samples of concrete from pavement construction work being carried on by Thomas Riley, subcontractor for the Warren Bituminous Co., which he claimed would not measure up to specifications. It was on the strength of the mayor's assertions that action was taken.

Chicago Police Enquiry.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Formal investigation of the charges that the Chicago police have systematically levied tribute for the protection of gambling and other forms of vice, began yesterday. Some of the evidence is said to be of a sensational character and is alleged to involve several police officials.

Ran Aground.

Kingston, Sept. 19.—The steamer Sinbad of the Hall Company of Ottawa ran aground on the Carlton sand, near Cape Vincent, N.Y., coal-laden, on her way from Erie to Quebec.

A permit has been taken out for a $40,000 hotel in Edmonton.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Threshing delay, due to wet weather in the Canadian northwest, brought about firmness to-day in wheat. A big increase in the United States visible supply, however, acted as an important offset. Closing figures were 1-8c to 1-4c to 1-2c higher than Saturday night. Latest trading left corn 1-4c to 3-8c to 5-8c up; oats at 1-8c to 1-8c to 1-4c advance, and hog products either unchanged or varying to 7 1-2c decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d to ¼d higher than Saturday on wheat, and ⅛d higher on corn. Berlin closed ½c to 1¼c lower on wheat; Buda Pest, ½c higher. Paris and Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 16, were 2900 cattle, 1975 sheep and lambs, 1975 hogs and 400 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1250 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 250 calves.

Considering the large run of cattle, of which there were fully 400 head of Canadian Northwest ranch stock, the tone of the market was remarkably steady, and prices showed no important change as compared with those of last Wednesday. The gathering of buyers was large and as the weather was cool and favorable for keeping stock, the demand from butchers and packers was good and consequently an active trade was done.

A few very choice steers sold as high as 6c per pound, but the bulk of trading was done in choice stock at 5¾c, good at 5½c, fairly good at 5c to 5¼c, fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Cows brought 3¼c to 5c and bulls sold at 2¾c to 3c per lb.

In sympathy with the lower prices ruling for hogs in the Toronto market and thruout the country, coupled with the more liberal supplies coming forward here, a weaker feeling developed in the market this morning and prices declined since this day week 40c to 50c per cwt. At this reduction the demand from packers was good and all the offerings met with a ready sale, selected lots bringing $7.25, mixd lots $7, sows $6 to $6.25, and stags $4 to $4.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Altho supplies of sheep and lambs were fairly large, a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices advanced ⅛c to ¼c per lb. The demand was good and sales of lambs were made at 5¾c to 6c and sheep at 3¾c to 4c per lb. The trade in calves was fair at prices ranging from $5 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 18.—Cattle, receipts, 4375; market, active and firm; prime steers, $7.50 to $7.65, butcher grades, $4.25 to $7; cows, $3.50 to $5.25 calves, receipts, 1400; market, active, 25c lower; cull to choice, $5 to $10. Sheep and lambs, receipts, 6000, market, active and firm; choice lambs, $6.50 to $6.65; cull to fair, $4.50 to $6.25; yearlings, $4.25 to $5; sheep, $2 to $4.25. Hogs, receipts, 16,450; market, fairly active and 5c lower; yorkers, $7.50 to $7.60; stags, $5 to $6, pigs, $6.90; mixed, $7.55 to $7.60; heavy, $7.50 to $7.55; roughs, $6 to $6.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Cattle, receipts estimated at 22,000. Market steady to a shade higher. Beeves, $4.90 to $8.15; Texas steers, $4.40 to $6.25; western steers, $4.10 to $7; stockers and feeders, $3 to $5.80 cows and heifers, $2.25 to $6.25; calves, $6.50 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts, estimated at 25,000 Market, generally 5c lower. Light, $6.80 to $7.27½; mixed, $6.65 to $7.25; heavy, $6.60 to $7.27½; rough, $6.60 to $6.80; good to choice heavy, $6.80 to $7.27½; pigs, $4.50 to $6.90, bulk of sales, $6.80 to $7.20.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, estimated at 40,000. Market steady; native, $2.25 to $4.15, western, $2.50 to $4.15, yearlings, $3.75 to $4.65, lambs, $4 to $6.10, western, $4.25 to $6.10.

RIOTING IN VIENNA.

Soldiers Are Forced to Fire on Mob Killing Many.

Vienna, Sept. 18.—A critical situation has arisen in Vienna, owing primarily to the high price of the necessaries of life. Riots broke out yesterday, and many persons were killed or wounded. There was a fierce exchange of bullets, and the soldiers were pelted with all sorts of missiles.

Following a large socialistic demonstration yesterday afternoon outside the Rathhaus, held for the purpose of protesting against the high prices of food, it became necessary to call out troops to disperse the rioters. In the early clashes fifty of the rioters were wounded, and one hundred arrested.

Fifty thousand persons were present at the demonstration, and fiery speeches were made, demanding that the Government permit the importation of foreign meat and take other measures to remedy the conditions which have resulted in the prohibitory price of food products. After the meeting a large procession marched to the Parliament buildings, cheering for revolution and Portugal. Revolvers were fired in the air, and the mob began stone-throwing. The windows of many public and private buildings, restaurants, tram-cars and street lamps were smashed. Finally a cordon of dragoons and a detachment of infantry appeared on the scene. They charged the rioters and dispersed them. The mobs reassembled, however, in the suburbs, which are occupied by the working classes, where they wrecked more property. The troops were retained throughout the day guarding the imperial palace and Government buildings, and holding all approaches to the inner city.

Towards evening the rioting in the Ottakring quarter became more furious. The mob demolished all the street lamps in the main thoroughfares, plunging the streets into darkness. They erected barricades and hurled missiles of various kinds on the soldiers from the upper windows of houses. The order was at length given to the troops to fire. At the first volley many rioters fell, either killed or wounded. Several of the soldiers and policemen were also injured, and 100 more of those engaged in the conflict were placed under arrest.

The agitation is the culmination of months of bitter discontent over the steady increase in the cost of not only food, but of lodging, clothing and all the necessaries of life, and unless Parliament takes action it is feared that the development of the disturbances will be very serious.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—Magistrate O'Keefe yesterday imposed a fine of $100 or four months' imprisonment on William Cruick, convicted of administering poison, in the form of wood alcohol to Texas Bill, a cowboy at the fair grounds here last week.

Heavy Sentences at Berlin.

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 19.—Louis Steckley, an ex-policeman, who pleaded to burglary, was yesterday sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Edward Kilby, a wife-beater, got the maximum penalty (two years less one day) in the Central Prison.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

New York Tailoring at Canadian Prices

"The Mark of High Degree."

LAST year we sold a great many New Yorkers and other American tourists Semi-ready Suits in the latest New York style at from $15.00 to $20.00 less than they could buy them at home.

The price-saving is obvious. The American tariff on fine woollens is 100 per cent; and yet they must have the best English woollens, for their domestic worsteds are inferior.

A Semi-ready Suit such as we sell for $20.00 costs $35.00 in the United States. And no tailor in New York can produce better work than Semi-ready.

HOME AND OUT BUILDINGS WERE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Misfortune Visits Richard Healey on Hilliard Street — Mother and Children Were Sleeping.

Yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in the home of Mr. Richard Healey, 108 Hilliard street, and though the firemen were called, the nearest hydrant was one half-mile distant and they could not do more than give their assistance towards saving the contents and the neighboring buildings. The damage will amount to about $1,700.

The buildings, which belonged to Mrs Moorhouse, East city, were insured but the contents were not.

STARTED IN STABLE

The cause of the fire, which started at the rear of the stable, is not known. Mrs Healey and her two small children were down town in the forenoon, and upon returning had a cold dinner, not troubling to start the fire.

Mr. "Pete" Weatherstone, of the Weatherstone Mat factory, which is nearby, was the first to notice the fire and he telephoned for the firemen. While they were making the run he went into the house with other men to get the furniture out, and found Mrs. Healey and the children sleeping. The inmates were first apprised of the trouble when the men began trailing out the furniture.

NO HYDRANT NEAR

When the firemen arrived they could not lay any hose as the nearest hydrant was one half-mile distant. A bucket brigade was formed by Acting Chief Menzies, in order to save the neighboring residences and buildings. Seven firemen were sent back to the station with the hose wagon in the event of another call, and the remainder stayed to help at the fire.

CONTENTS SAVED

Some of the furniture, the stoves, vegetables, fruit, etc., were saved, and the firemen and other helpers remained in the burning building until the flames were playing around their faces.

The stable, woodshed and house were finally swept away. Mr. Healey at the time of the fire was at work on the new Auburn Power dam.

REVIEW'S ELECTION BULLETINS

The Review has made special arrangements for election return bulletins. These will be received over the C.P.R. wire, and will be flashed onto a screen that will be put over the Oriental hotel front, as quickly as received. In this way thousands lined up on Hunter street will be able to see the progress of the election. The prospects that Borden will be returned at this election are so bright that the keenest interest will be shown in the fight in every constituency, for the way two or three go may decide the whole battle. It is likely to be a small majority either way. Watch the Review bulletin service, illustrated with special slides.

EXTENSION TO BYERSVILLE AWAITS ARRIVAL OF RAILS

Route Has Been Surveyed and Laid Out by Street Railway Co.

The extension of the Peterborough Radial Railway company's line to Byersville, is now an assured thing, and the manager of the company in answer to a Review inquiry this afternoon, said that operations for laying the track would commence as soon as the rails arrived in the city. They are at present on order and may be expected any day. The route for the extension has been thoroughly surveyed and laid out and when completed the line will be increased about seven-eighth of a mile. The proposed route is from the end of the Park street line out Chamberlain and ending at the C.P.R. crossing just past Byersville. The building of this extension will be a boon to the people of Byersville and a convenience to them in coming to and from the city.

Two of the new street cars have arrived in the city and the third is expected to be here shortly. Their arrival, however, was too late for them to be used at fair time. They are very serviceable cars and will add greatly to the equipment and efficiency of the company's line.

THE BIG HIT OF THE SEASON IN CRITICAL NEW YORK CITY

"Baby Mine" a clean Wholesome Hilarious Comedy at the Grand To-morrow Night—Big Advance Sale

With a laugh in every line, and a laugh quite worth while, such as will echo in your memory as you go home, with this requisite for a comedy that is destined to wear a very long time. "Baby Mine" will have its first local presentation at the Grand opera house to-morrow, under the direction of Wm. A. Brady, Ltd. "Baby Mine" is said to raise a veritable cyclone of honest, wholesome laughter during the course of its three rapid-fire acts. Not in many, many moons have the walls of the Grand re-echoed to more spontaneous laughter than they will to-morrow night, for from the rise of the curtain to its fall, the fun will not be allowed to flag for one moment. Many theatre parties have been forming for to-morrow night, and there is every indication of a large and representative audience on the opening night of the season. "Baby Mine" is a popular success, the biggest success ever known. It is now in its second year at the Vaudeville Theatre, New York. It is also shortly to be produced in the various continental cities, in South America, South Africa, Australia and Japan. The heroine of "Baby Mine" is a flippant little woman, who has so tried her indulgent husband, that in a fit of jealousy he deserts her. In winning him back, all sorts of complications arise, and there are just enough pauses in the merriment to give the audience time for the little serious human notes and to catch their breath.

There has been a large advance sale and the management ask that everyone be in their seats as soon after eight as possible.

THREATENING MANUFACTURER AND WORKINGMAN

The interests of the workingmen of Peterborough are those of the manufacturer of Peterborough. At his speech in Ottawa last night Sir Wilfrid Laurier threatened the manufacturer with a rod for their backs, for opposing him. What do the manufacturers and workingmen of Peterborough think of this—and Stratton says he is a manufacturer, too!

Toronto Globe.

"I speak in no spirit of menace or threat," he said, "but I must say plainly to those short-sighted manufacturers that they need not be surprised if they find later that they have prepared a rod for their own backs. If as a result of the election the Government should be defeated, then, rankling under a sense of injustice, the masses of Canada, as opposed to the classes, may demand a wholesale tariff lowering that cannot be withstood. If this appeal to selfishness should prevail, then those responsible for it must be prepared to take the result."

PETERBORO HAS BEST EXHIBITION

That's What Several Judges Told Local Officials

The big fair of 1911 is over. It was a splendid success. One very noticeable feature was the large attendance of people from outside points. One citizen remarked that never before had he noticed so many strangers in the city.

Their presence meant money for the exhibition treasury and money for the local merchants. The judges, some of whom visit many of the fairs of the provinces, informed officials of Peterborough exhibition that this year's show stood far above the others, and at the same time remarked that Peterborough people were lacking in appreciation.

"THE BEAUTY SPOT"

This Well Known and Popular Comic Opera Coming on Saturday Sept. 23rd—Catchy Music and Witty Dialogue.

"The Beauty Spot," which comes to the Grand next Saturday, matinee and night, Sept. 23rd, is said to raise the standard for musical comedy productions in these modern days, when quantity and not quality seems to be the aim of both producing manager and playright.

With Frank Deshon in the leading role, the book by Joseph Herbert and the music by Reginald DeKoven, "The Beauty Spot" is said to have hit the popular fancy, and is a striking exemplification of this new upward trend. That it is just the sort of production to please all classes of theatre goers, appealing to the artistic as well as the humorous sense, with song and melody skipping lightly to and fro the while.

The story of the play as told by the principals is interesting; Jacques Baccarel, an American artist from New Orleans, has completed a canvas of a lady just fresh from the bath. The model, Nichette, who also had been an actress, marries General Samovar, (Mr. Deshon) who knew very little of her past and had no suspicion that she was the model in the case. Baccarel meets the General and his new wife at the Grand Hotel, in Dinard, in the south of France. His painting has become famous. It is about to be hung on exhibition and he has been offered a big price for the canvas. Nichette, the General's wife is horrified. She will be ruined if the painting is hung publicly as the General will recognise she was the model. She offers the artist the purchase price for the painting, but he his playing for bigger game. He wants to marry Nadine, the General's daughter by his first marriage.

Baccarel compels Nichette to bring about his marriage to Nadine in order to prevent the public exhibition of the painting in its original form.

But the fussy old General is informed by the scheming Parisian detective that the painting is one that reveals his wife in far less than conventional supply of clothing. Flying into a violent rage, the General orders the painting produced. Barragel is warned and quickly makes alterations on the canvas and Nichette is saved from exposure.

The seat sale opens Thursday morning.

THE CLAIMS OF THE Y.W.C.A.

Mrs. W. Read, superintendent of the Y.W.C.A. boarding home wishes to inform the public, and especially those who are being canvassed to become new members, that nobody has ever been turned from our doors wanting a night's lodging or a meal.

We take young girls out of work, keep them a few days getting them as good a home as we can. We have had two different young girls here three or four times out of work and home to go to. We have kept them and found them work.

We hear the cry it is only a fashionable boarding place." I want it understood, we take all young women who are working for their living. Those who get good salaries pay for the highest priced rooms. Those who are getting less pay pay less prices. Those who are getting small salaries we suit the price to their earnings. I wish the public to understand, we do all the good we can and help many a girl out of work as the prosperity of the boarding home shows. All boarders are members.

We are known by our work.

The Peterboro Business College which opened for the fall term on Sept. 5th, is enjoying a splendid attendance, which promises to be the largest in the history of the school. 6d

LUXURIOUS NEW CARS FOR C.P.R. MONTREAL SERVICE

Another triumph in car building has been achieved by the C.P.R. and it marks a further advance in railroading.

The new compartment observation cars which have just been sent out from the Angus shops are intended for the service between Toronto and Montreal, and as evidence of the growing popularity of the service between the North Toronto station and Montreal, they are attached to the train leaving that station at 10.00 p.m. daily.

These new cars have seven compartments, a drawing room, an observation parlor and an observation platform. The entrance to the rooms is from aisles running along the sides of the cars, ensuring absolute privacy. There are two berths, the lower being made up from two double seats, and there are all toilet requirements in each compartment.

These cars are models of luxury and comfort in which the C.P.R. standard of equipment excels. 2d

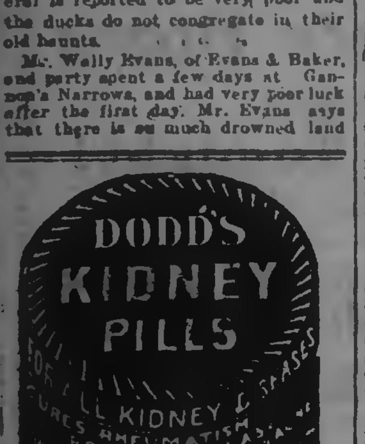
DUCK SHOOTING

Game is Scarce So Some Sportsmen Report

The duck hunters who have been out this season, do not report very good luck so far. They complain that the game is scarce. The rice crop in general is reported to be very poor and the ducks do not congregate in their old haunts.

Mr. Wally Evans, of Evans & Baker, and party spent a few days at Gannon's Narrows, and had very poor luck after the first day. Mr. Evans says that there is so much drowned land in that vicinity that it is hard to get the ducks after they have been shot down as they hide amongst the protruding stumps and mud. There is practically no rice in that vicinity.



RITCHIE'S GOOD TIME

The Chatham Horse Has Won Several Fast Heats

Few pacers have ever performed on the half-mile tracks with as much credit as the Chatham side-wheeler, Ritchie, 2.11¼, that is being raced by A. G. Bedford. This horse raced extensively on the ice last winter, and has been in the heat of battle since the campaign opened at Chatham the last week in May. He has been beaten, it is true, but he has also won race after race in fast time, and has always been up against the cracks. Recently at Toledo, O, Ritchie won a six-heat race after five of the six heats were paced in 2.11¼, or better, which was an extraordinary performance. Last week at Findlay, Ohio, he forced Nutmoor out in 2.06¾, and this time has rarely been seen in a race on a two-lap track.

MUSTN'T SLAY A NEIGHBOR'S PIG

Magistrate Leggatt, Windsor, fined Mrs. Lucy Strong, of Belle River, $5 for having beaten one of her neighbor's pigs to death. Mrs. Strong's defence was that the swine of her neighbor, Mrs. Ladouler, had annoyed her, and that she had merely driven the animal out of her yard, but the magistrate allowed the fine to stand, giving the woman the option of ten days in jail.

AN APPEAL TO ENGLISHMEN

Dear fellow countrymen—I hope you have not forgotten the dirty way in which you were treated at the trial. Although we spoke the truth, we were called liars. Now is the time to get your own back. The last election trial is what I am referring to, and the great J.R. Stratton mob, and now they are trying to tell us it is good for us to vote for reciprocity that it will be GOOD, (yes, it will be no good) The delegates called at my house and told me that if I vote for reciprocity that we shall get our food as cheap in the winter as in the summer, and the same mob tells the farmer he will get 25 cents more for his chickens and 35 cents a dozen for his eggs and 32 cents a lb. for his butter, and yet we are going to get it cheaper. How is it done? Well, there is only one thing to say and that is we know how far they can get as regards the truths.

Now my fellow countrymen, I do hope there is only one way you will vote on the 21st and that will not be for reciprocity. I was one who spoke the truth and was called a liar at the trial.

Yours

A TRUE ENGLISHMAN

MAJOR LEAGUE STARS

Many of Them Have Been Crippled This Year by Injuries

The year 1911 will go down in history as having been an unusual one for the big league stars, as there have been few who have been able to play regularly all season. Here is the Red Cross list: Nap Lajoie, Fred Falkenberg, Joe Jackson, Ivan Olson of the Naps; Del Gainor, Ty Cobb and George Moriarty, Detroit; Eddie Colling, Athletics; Tris Sppeaker, Boston Red Sox; Hal Chase, Harry Wolter, Yankees; Jimmy Callahan, White Sox; Manager Bresnahan, Cardinals; Hans Wagner, Pirates; Manager Dooin and Titus, Phillies; Manager Chance and Johnny Evers, Chicago. Evers has been of little use all season, while Nap Lajoie was missing from the game for months. Frank Chance has practically quite the active end of baseball, and his fellow managers, Dooin and Bresnahan, are out of it just when their teams need them most. In fact, the Phillies had a good chance to land the pennant until Dooin met with his injury. Just now the Pirates are handicapped by the absence of Hans Wagner. Ty Cobb was not the victim of an accident, but his health has been bad and necessitated his retirement for a brief spell. The Tigers have also been crippled by the injuries to First Baseman Gainor and Capt. Moriarty.

WHY TECUMSEHS SUCCEED

Charlie Querrie Knows the Secret of Handling His Players

Different coaches in the National Lacrosse Union employ vastly different methods, but to Charlie Querrie, of the Tecumseh's is due a lot of credit for the fine showing which the Indians have made in recent years. Always a great general, Querrie is still one of the finest home fielders in the game. He is cool and collected and he plays the game until the drop of the bat. Moreover he has earned the confidence and respect of his players, which, by the way, is half the battle. It was amusing to hear Querrie in a recent game at Toronto. One of the Eastern teams was then pressing Tecumsehs closely. A visiting defence man carried the ball and shot it ten feet over the goal net.

"Rotten work," shouted his coach through a megaphone, "You ought to be back in the bush league. What's the matter? Quitting?"

The next minute Jack Mackenzie of Tecumseh's dashed down with a rush and threw the ball into the bleachers, sacrificing a splendid chance to put Lol Solman's team in the lead. Did Querrie "call" him before the crowd? Did he cause McKenzie to hang his head and lose heart as his opponent had done? Well, hardly!

"What's the matter, Jack?" the Tecumseh chief inquired softly, "Got some friends in the grand stand?" That was all. No cussing. No grouching. But it had its effect on McKenzie. "I'll do better next time, Charlie," responded McKenzie. And he did. Is it any wonder that Tecumsehs are at the top of the heap? Querrie has his faults, but he knows the game and moreover the secret of handling players is also likewise stowed away in his cranium.

RIDPATH FOR TORONTO

He Will Likely Play Hockey in the Queen City

Bruce Ridpath will probably be lost next season to the Ottawa Hockey Club, for it is already pretty well settled that he will play with the Torontos. "Riddy," however, will have the best wishes of thousands of Ottawa friends. He is one of the greatest little wing players in the game, and what is more to his credit, he has never "flunked" in his loyalty to the Ottawa team. Riddy carries his smile through thick and thin, and is a gentleman whether winning or losing. Ottawa Hockey Club officers would regret to part with him, but have naught but kind words for the Toronto "phenom."

A GOLF PERFORMANCE

In the annual tournament of the Glenview Golf Club, Chicago, H. Chandler Egan, of Exmoor, and M. Wilson, of Glenview, made the seventh hole, 177 yards, in one. This duplicate performance is probably without precedent in any tournament.

Wild fruit is very plentiful this year in Manitoba.

BEWARE of the eleventh hour Stratton Roorbacks. Don't be influenced by them. There is a dandy bunch prepared for tomorrow. What is said at the eleventh hour in the way of scare stories seldom has any foundation. BEWARE OF ROORBACKS!

FARMER MISSED HIS PROPERTY

Alleges That Certain Article Were Taken From His Home

Magistrate Edmison was called upon by a North Monaghan farmer this week on a rather peculiar errand The man wished to have a search warrant issued to recover some missing property which he alleges was taken from his house.

It appears that the farmer, whose name is Robert J. Locking, is separated from his wife, he occupying the farm while the wife lives with her son. The farmer missed some carpenter's tools and three or four towels from his house and he is under the impression that they were taken from the house by his wife. He consulted Crown Attorney Wood who asked Magistrate Edmison to have a search warrant issued High Constable Cochrane searched the sons' home yesterday, but it is understood that nothing was found A goatskin rug, the property of Locking, is also missing.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The opening session of the intermediate Y.M.C.A. class has been fixed for Sept. 26th and not on Sept. 21st as first intended, so that the elections and the class exercise will not conflict.

During the summer, local men were interested in a fresh water proposition, a splendid spring being located at Otonabee, only a short distance from the city. Some sales were made at Toronto, and the water was highly recommended. The high freight rates however, proved to be too much of a handicap; and the project has been abandoned.

The Bowmanville fair is on to-day and to-morrow

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. held the last meeting of their year, yesterday afternoon. At the next meeting election of officers will take place.

A special meeting of Peterboro Circle, No. 193 O.C.H.C. will be held tomorrow night in K.O.P. Hall. Initiations etc. Bro. Walker, Port Hope, will be present.

RINGED TWO OF THEIR MEMBERS

B. A. C. Held Interesting Banquet at Hooper's

A most enjoyable social function was held in Hooper's palm gardens last evening in honor of two of the members of the B.A.C., Messrs. Ernie Best and "Bill" Richardson. Mr. Ernie Best is in the city en route for New York to take a special university course in preparation for Y.M.C.A. work. He has been stationed at Winnipeg for the past summer months. Mr. Will Richardson, another popular member of the B.A.C., will next week embark upon the matrimonial career, and it was chiefly for the purpose of remembering the two members in some stronger manner than mere words of good wishes that the banquet was held.

Each was the recipient of a handsome ring, on which the letters B.A.C. were engraved in monograph. Short, sincere and impromptu addresses were given by several of those present, wishing both young men the best of luck in their prospective futures. They made very appropriate replies, in which they expressed their sincere pleasure and appreciation of the tokens of good-will and friendship shown by the club.

REMINDERS

Already can be seen the great benefits of reciprocity, ladies and gentlemen. The clerks in the stores say they never saw so many five dollar bills around in a long time.

The money comes out like water, but money cannot buy everything. It cannot buy the strong determination of the voters not to practically prepare for the handing of Canada over to the United States.

On Thursday, vote early, but not often.

The Matthews company has given public notice of where it stands on reciprocity. The 125 workingmen know where it stands. Will the workingmen of the Canadian General Electric not also take notice?

It is to be hoped that the manufacturers in Peterborough will be able to let their employes have plenty of time for polling their votes The law provides that a certain shall be given, but it is important to those who want to see reciprocity defeated—and every manufacturer in Peterborough is on that list—should see that every vote is polled against the pact.

Do not let the plentiful supply of five dollar bills around town lead you into thinking that reciprocity is a good thing. The time for knocking at the give-away to the United States, comes but once.

M. STOLYPIN SUCCUMBS

Prime Minister of Russia Dies From Wounds.

One Hundred and Fifty Associates of Dmitry Bogroff Have Been Arrested In Kiev—Bogroff Talks Freely and Has Given Valuable Clues to the Police — Murdered Statesman Was Generally Hated.

Kiev. Sept. 19.—Premier Stolypin is dead, the victim of the assassin.

One hundred and fifty of the associates of Bogroff, who shot the Premier, have been arrested.

Dmitry Bogroff talked freely yesterday of his past life, and furnished the authorities with valuable clues. The original confident behavior of the prisoner has given place to despondency, and he is now receiving medical treatment.

Among the versions of the circumstances leading up to the crime, and which must be investigated, is the assertion that Bogroff belonged to a new autonomous revolutionary group, the aim of which is to assassinate individual statesmen. In the course of the questioning Bogroff declared that he held M. Stolypin as one of the most pernicious men of the state.

Another version is that the revolutionaries put Bogroff, who, according to the police, had been filling the dual role of revolutionary agent and police spy, in a dilemma, where he had to kill Stolypin or be himself killed. Bogroff chose to attempt the first alternative.

Representatives of the Jewish community were panic-stricken and begged for protection, and 30,000 troops were poured into Kiev, to prevent excesses. The city is depressed but calm. M. Kokovsoff, the Minister of Finance, who was appointed acting Premier after M. Stolypin was shot, has sent a peremptory circular to the various governors on the maintenance of order. It is stated on excellent authority that M. Kokovsoff will be appointed Premier.

PREMIER STOLYPIN.

Governor-General Trepoff has issued a public notice that disorders will not be tolerated and stringent regulations are published forbidding the carrying of arms. It is officially announced that the manoeuvres are ended and that the troops are returning to Kiev. Hundreds of well-to-do Jews are departing from the city.

Peter A. Stolypin was a tall, handsome man of 55 years. His short-cropped hair was gray, but his beard was dark. He has been described generally as an administrator of ability. He was neither a bureaucrat nor a reactionary in the ordinary sense of those terms, and has been said to have been imbued with liberalism, but determined to put down the revolutionary movements at any cost.

As governor of Saratov, he took such steps against the Terrorists and Liberals alike as won him the detestation of the advanced parties and his life was attempted in 1905. He was appointed Prime Minister by Imperial ukase on July 22, 1906, and stamped out the revolution that had grown to threatening proportions during the Premiership of M. Witte, and which Witte's successor, M. Goremkin, had not been able to control.

Stolypin's life was attempted again in August of that year, when a bomb that killed thirty persons was exploded at his home. The Minister escaped with slight injuries, but two of his children were wounded. As Minister of the Interior, preceding his Premiership, M. Stolypin came into conflict with the Douma, and when he made his first speech before that body, he was greeted with cries of "Murderer!"

The opposition's hatred of Stolypin reached a crisis last March when the upper chamber of the Douma, having rejected his bill for the estbalishment of the Zemstov or local government in the western provinces, the Premier resigned and only consented to resume office when the Emperor agreed to dissolve the Douma and promulgate the measure under the authority of the fundamental laws.

NEW CHURCH MOVEMENT.

Evangelization Project, Backed by Millionaires, to Be Launched.

New York, Sept. 19.—The new crusade to evangelize the American continent, financed by men whose combined wealth runs into ten figures, will be launched in New York to-day at the Metropolitan Club, commonly known as the "Fifth Avenue Millionaires' Club."

The movement, known as the Men and Religious Forward Movement, will be conducted along practical lines. J. P. Morgan is the head of the financial department, while the directors comprise the country's foremost financiers, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors and men of affairs, headed by James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank of New York.

The program of the crusade provides for meetings in 76 centres of population throughout the United States and Canada, beginning in Minneapolis, Oct. 2nd.

At the Metropolitan Club last night Mr. Cannon banqueted thirty trained workers who are to carry the message of church membership reclamation from New York to Vancouver.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

A convention of specialists in nervous and mental diseases in Moscow has been closed by the police on account of a sharp criticism of the Government.

The approaching betrothal is announced of Prince Boris of Bulgaria, the heir apparent, to Grand Duchess Olga, the eldest daughter of Emperor Nicholas.

During a severe electrical storm on Sunday night two valuable horses belonging to Mr. Hugh Messecan, Townsend Centre, were struck by lightning and killed.

The French aviator Bregi arrived at Fez, Morocco, Sunday from Casa Blanca, carrying a passenger in his aeroplane. The Arabs exhibited wild enthusiasm.

Earl Dudley says the difficulty with the Australian navy is the supply of men. It is expected for some years that Britain will have to help Australia to man her ships.

A child was killed in Lauf, Bavaria, by Thomas A. Edison's automobile. His chauffeur does not appear to have been careless, but the auto party is detained pending a hearing.

Lewis S. Allen, president of the Brockport, N.Y., Board of Health and a leading citizen, committed suicide yesterday by drowning in the Erie Canal. The body was recovered.

Fully 15,000 people journey to Cote Des Neiges Cemetery, back of Mount Royal, Montreal, Sunday afternoon to participate in the R. C. ceremony of publicly commemorating the dead.

Former U. S. Senator Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, for many years a notable figure in politics, and chairman of the American section of the International Joint Commission, is dead, aged 57.

Davis, the confessed abductor of the Snowflake, Man., school teacher, has been taken to Borden, Man., having waived extradition when he learned he had not killed Adams, the hotel man he shot while escaping.

One man is dead, another seriously injured, due to his heroism and a third is missing as the result of an incendiary fire in the Mountain View Hotel, Colfax, Cal., and which consumed a considerable part of the town.

Of No Use to Canada.

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 19.—In presenting the report of the German Conference to the general council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in North America yesterday, Rev. Dr. E. Hoffmann, of Berlin, Ont., said that the educational institutions of the church in the United States were of no benefit to the church in Canada.

Of a score of students sent to the States in the past twenty-five years to be educated in the seminaries, with one or two exceptions, they had remained on this side of the border, and the exceptions had returned to the United States after having spent a year at the most in the Canadian field.

The report of the Board of Education asked the council to recommend to the synods that have no apportionment for education a per capita apportionment of ten cents for educational purposes, and also asked the synods to make a canvass of their congregations for students for the ministry. The report was approved.

Irish Railway Strike.

Dublin, Sept. 19.—The discontent which has been evidenced for a long time among the employes of the Irish railways reached an acute stage on Sunday night when a general strike on the Great Southern and Western line was declared.

This is Ireland's largest railroad, and it is feared that the strike may become general, although at present the other railroads are only slightly affected.

In Dublin itself large numbers of freight handlers have gone on strike, while at Limerick no trains were sent out owing to a strike among the men there.

Mass meeting were held Sunday in many places in England in order to express dissatisfaction with the railway companies' interpretation of the agreement of August 19.

Two Fallen Stars.

New York, Sept. 19.—Two worn-out prize-fighters, Martin Costello and Albert Griffo, who less than 20 years ago, were classed as stars of the fisticuff, were sent to the workhouse yesterday on charges of vagrancy.

Costello is 45 and Griffo 44, but both were grey-haired, ragged and destitute.

They asked the magistrate to send them where they would be cared for during the winter.

Big Oil Fire.

Los Angles, Cal., Sept. 19.—Nine immense storage tanks of oil have been destroyed and firemen are fighting to save several others from a fire which started Sunday night at the Hercules Oil Refining Co.'s plant, between Los Angeles and Vernon. The loss so far totals $500,000.

A large addition is to be built to the St. Eugene Hospital at Cranbrook, B.C.

OH LET US BE JOYFUL
VOTE FOR STRATTON AND A NEW FLAG
GOD SAVE THE KING
W.H.B.

This cartoon was drawn by a local humorist to illustrate the platform methods and discoveries of Mr. Stratton's supporters, one in particular whose name is not Bill Nye, but not so very far removed.

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the "secret" method of making such trade agreements, whereby citizens and even members of parliament are denied the right to make effectual protest against the terms, before ratification.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian working-men.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

LAURIER'S WORK

He Has Revived the Dream of Annexation in the Breast of Every American.

He Has Made Millions of American Workers for Annexation.

He has started all the Hearsts on a Fresh Crusade against Canada.

He has started Yankee Money flowing into Canada's Elections.

One thing will stop this once and for ever, and it is A DECISIVE VOTE AGAINST RECIPROCITY

A Vote for Reciprocity will be followed by a more Advanced Movement by the Hearts and the Trusts.

Never a Day's Rest for Canada thereafter!

WILL RESIGN QUEBEC.

If Leduc Can Prove His Charge, Says the Premier.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in a statement issued yesterday, undertakes to resign his seat in Quebec East, if the story of Rene Leduc, that his resignation was extorted from him, is substantiated. The Premier's statement reads:

Last evening I received the following telegram:

"Quebec, Sept. 17, 1911.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Ottawa:

"One of your most important chiefs in Quebec East extorted from me, while I was under the influence of liquor, my resignation as candidate against you. I have asked the returning officer, to whom the document has been delivered, to give it back to me. He has referred me to the clerk of the Crown in Chancery. I have telegraphed the latter, and I hereby ask you to give instructions that my extorted resignation be given back to me, and that the election be not stolen. The people of Quebec East desire to vote, and they trust that you will not take advantage of the mistake made.

(Signed) "Rene Leduc."

"It is difficult for me to believe that any friend of mine would be guilty of such conduct as is alleged in the above telegram. I am all the more loth to believe it as the candidature of Mr. Leduc never was considered serious. I have no power over the clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who is an officer of the House of Commons, and who, moreover, I think under the law, cannot take action.

"I have only to add that should the facts turn out to be true, I would not keep the seat under the circumstances, and would deem it my duty to resign and seek a new election.

"Wilfrid Laurier."

Leduc's withdrawal in Quebec East, under whatever circumstances, does not seem to help Dr. Lortie, the Opposition candidate in Soulanges. So says J. G. Foley, clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who has been looking up the law. The election act does not say that a member of Parliament may not be a candidate in another constituency, and in the absence of any direct prohibition, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, though member-elect in Quebec East, will run against Lortie in Soulanges.

It is a foregone conclusion that if he carries Soulanges, he will elect to sit for Quebec East and Lortie will go up against the odds of a bye-election.

Official notification of the postponement of the Thunder Bay election has been received by the clerk of the Crown in Chancery. Mr. Foley has a letter from Returning Officer Horrigan, stating that the size of the constituency did not allow of carrying out the necessary preparations within the time specified. The ballots, he says, were only issued on Saturday, and there are 75 boxes to be distributed over an area of 800 miles.

Appeal Ruled Out.

Ste. Scholastique, Que., Sept. 19.—The petition for a writ of mandamus to restrain the returning officer who declared J. A. Ethier, Liberal candidate in Two Mountains, elected by acclamation on account of omissions in the nomination papers of his opponent, Andre Fauteux, was argued yesterday before Judge Robidoux. The judge dismissed the petition with costs to the petitioners on the ground that the returning officer, having already made his report to the clerk of the Crown in Chancery, was no longer returning officer and consequently a writ could not be served on him.

Not a Mormon, Will Sue.

Hamilton, Sept. 19.—Hiram Dickout, the Labor candidate in West Hamilton, has instructed the Masten legal firm, of Toronto, to issue a writ for damages against The Herald. He complains that it described him as a Mormon. He is a member of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

Speeding Auto Mounted Sidewalk.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—While going at high speed in Westmount, an automobile driven by O. Drouin mounted the sidewalk and jammed M. A. Bourseil between the machine and a store window. Bourzeill sustained a broken collarbone.

Cranberries are of excellent quality and are growing profusely.

MR. BURNHAM EXPLAINS THE FREE PENSION PLAN

Splendid Meeting at Bridgenorth — The Pact and British Connection.

A large and enthusiastic meeting greeted Mr. Burnham, Dr. Morrison and Mr. Dawson Kennedy, in the Foresters' Hall, Bridgenorth, last evening.

Dr. Morrison in a fine address of an hour's duration, pointed out the grave damage the pact would be to British connection. There could be no doubt of this, for did not Taft say to the convention of editors at New York, "If we would break up the British empire we must do it now."

Mr. Kennedy showed from examples and conversations, how absurd it is to talk of the U.S.A. being an agricultural market for Canada. "They are afraid of us in the British market and want to head us off, and get control of us," said Mr. Kennedy. (Applause.

Mr. Burnham dwelt upon the Bourassa changes. This gentleman is breaking up the Liberal majority in Quebec. There is only one way to save Canada from Bourassa, who by the way is not a candidate, and that way is by joining hands with Borden and the Conservative party. The speaker explained his state pension plan as adopted in Great Britain, by which men and women attaining the age of 65 years would have free of all cost pensions from the government. "We must give the French credit for what they have done," said Mr. Burnham. "They threw out Lanctot and refused to have him as their representative again in spite of Mr. Laurier's wishes," said Mr. Burnham.

Crookedness and whitewash and endorsation in high places cannot bamboozle the electors at any rate at Sorel.

The meeting closed with cheers.

Mr. Peck and Dr. Morrison will accompany Mr. Burnham to Temperance Hall, Smith, this evening.

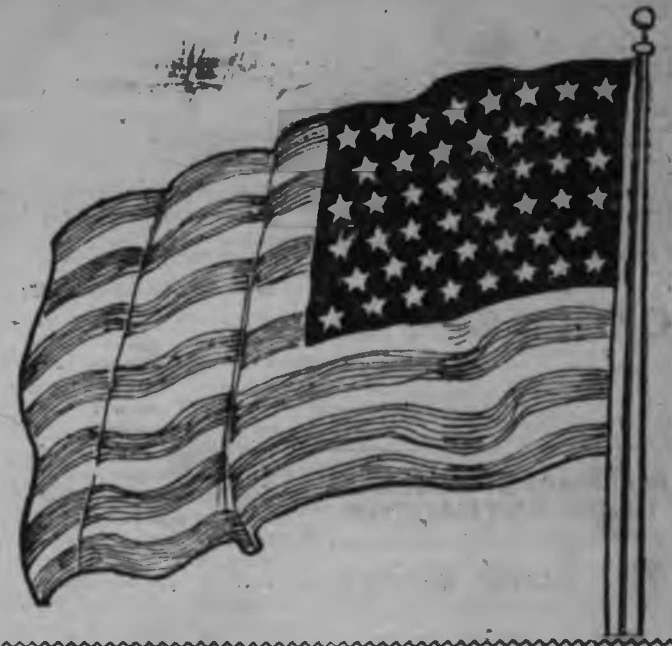
Under Which FLAG?



BRITAIN, BORDEN AND BURNHAM

A Voice From the Grave

" As for myself, my course is clear—a British subject I was born—a British subject I will die. With my utmost effort, with my latest breath, will I oppose the 'veiled treason' which attempts by sordid means and mercenary proffers to lure our people from their allegiance. During my long public service of nearly half a century I have been true to my country and its best interests, and I appeal with equal confidence to the men who have trusted me in the past, and to the young hope of the country, with whom rest its destinies for the future. to give me their united support and aid n this, my last effort, for the unity of the Empire and the preservation of our commercial and political freedom."—Sir John A. Macdonald.

TAFT, LAURIER AND STRATTON

Sir Wilfrid Laurier

" Already England and Canada have interests which are far apart, and the day must come, will come, when Canada and England will have to separate and sever."

* * *

" The only tie that binds Canada to the mother country is a sentiment of affection. But this dependence will not always last. When the hour of separation comes we will part as friends, when as a son leaves his father's house to become the head of a new family."

* * *

" If we are true to our record we will again exhibit to the world the unique, the unprecedented example of a nation achieving its independence by slow degrees and as naturally as the severing of the ripe fruit from the parent tree."

"Canada is at the Parting of the Ways"

President Taft.

A vote for Burnham is your declaration for a Canada for the Canadians, independent of the United States; for the preservation, unimperilled, of the British connection: for keeping our capital at Ottawa, not making it at Washington; for a continuance of our national policy and our prosperity.

A vote for the principles Burnham represents is your contribution of loyalty and patriotism and a declaration that we shall hew out our destiny independent of the great nation south of us.

A vote for Burnham means that you refuse to let them make another Cuba of Canada; no "Star Spangled Banner" for us; that you, whether Conservative or Liberal, put country before party.

VOTE FOR BURNHAM

A vote for Stratton is your declaration for a policy that will lead to Canada being tethered by a Yankee halter; for a policy that will cut us loose eventually from the empire; for a policy that invites at the very outset, American competition and interference.

A vote for the reciprocity pact and Stratton is your contribution to the day when Canada and the United States become commercially one—when Uncle takes us in.

A vote for Stratton means that you are willing to take down the tariff bars to give the United States control of half of our markets; enabling it to get a strangle-hold on all of it; to invite peaceful conquest. Shall blind partyism be an excuse for such a vote?

VOTE AGAINST STRATTON

Do not let little side issues blind you to the necessity of West Peterborough declaring for Borden and strong clean government, and FIRST, LAST AND ALL THE TIME CANADA FOR THE CANADIANS, AND OUR BRITISH CONNECTION. "CANADA FOREVER."

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares "Nerviline" Is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P. E. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

Nerviline CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs, and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 50c, trial size 25c, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CORNS CURED IN 24 HOURS

You can painlessly remove any corn, either hard, soft, or bleeding, by applying Putnam's Corn Extractor. It never burns, leaves no scar, contains no acids; is harmless, because composed only of healing gums and balms. Fifty years in use. Cure guaranteed. Sold by all druggists. 25c bottles. Refuse substitutes.

A LAST WORD

The day is at hand. Tomorrow Canada must answer the call, To London, or To Washington? Shall it be King, the empire and Canada, or shall it be Taft, the United States and Canada?

The clarion call "To Arms" is sounded for all true Canadians. Those who believe in Canada maintaining a separate destiny, in working out her salvation as a great and free nation under the Union Jack, cannot to-morrow endorse that trade measure which, in the words of old Sir John, "seeks to lure our people from their allegiance by sordid means and mercenary proffers." They say that where our treasure lies, there is our heart also. It is safe to say that the great heart of Uncle Sam beats high with hope that to-morrow Canada will declare that the path she shall tread shall be away from the empire, and toward that continentalism which would almost seem to be our natural destiny.

Canadians have a long stern battle to fight. If they would retain their full measure of independence, down the decades as they roll around, and in spite of the almost irresistible drawing together of two kindred peoples, they must set their faces like flint against all attempts to bring them on free and easy terms in a business way with the republic. Canada is a nation of nine millions against ninety. It is a small boy beside a big and clever man. Shall we be able to hold our own in competition with that big man, unless there is a protecting and a stimulating arm ready to assist us in time of need?

The issue is bigger and broader than men. It is not a movement of a day or of an hour. It is not a tendency that once under way can be diverted into another channel. Once we set our course for that day when the two peoples on this continent shall be commercially one, that day we bid good-bye for the centuries to come to those aspirations and those patriotic feelings which animate the breast of every true Canadian.

The only danger is that the mass of people will not be able to take that broad and penetrating look into what the future holds, and there foresee the time that must inevitably arrive. The great public may feel a blind, instinctive distrust of that future; it may feel that to make common cause with a nation ten times as powerful as we are, involves risks that we can measure and estimate only in an inadequate manner.

The day has come, Peterborough, when Canada makes the choice of her ultimate destiny. Whether J. R. Stratton is elected, or J. H. Burnham makes a big difference—not so much as the men themselves are concerned, for we all are but clay—but because of their voice in the guidance of the country along or away from the path that leads to a solidifying and a permanent British connection. These are no hollow platitudes, no partisan appeals. It is a day when every man who is not a blind follower of the great god Pan will shake his locks like a Samson, and tear down this fabric of Uncle Sam's cunning.

A conscientious vote to-morrow, a vote for country before party, will lead to a vote for J. H. Burnham and the principles of which he, as the nominee of the Conservative party, is the visible representative.

Vote for Burnham to-morrow, and help save Canada for King and for ourselves.

MR. HAWKES' RALLY

It was a great send-off, this Arthur Hawkes rally last night in the Opera House, to the campaign in West Peterborough. It was a rare treat to those who were fortunate enough to get seats, this conversational talk by Mr. Hawkes, and the tremendous enthusiasm had only one definite meaning, one definite trend. That trend showed that the British born in Peterborough will vote as a body in the polling to-morrow, and its vote is not going to J. R. Stratton, either.

Mr. Hawkes made clear to the audience that the movement to consolidate the British born in Canada in the election as a political force had been entirely successful. This force is not a party weapon, but is being used in the interests of the British tie and British patriotism wherever there seems to be a call. In the present situation with an American alliance in prospect for Canada, the British people have a most excellent chance to exercise their votes as a solid force to be contended with, and the Hawkes movement has been entirely successful in its purpose.

The lies and the libels of the Examiner on Mr. Hawkes were refuted in splendid style, and much sarcasm and humor on Mr. Stratton enlivened the meeting. It was a thoroughly sympathetic audience, and cannot fail of having considerable effect on the voting to-morrow.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Strattonism has had its day, we hope.

Borden for Premier, and Burnham for Peterborough.

Vote early to-morrow, and vote for Burnham and British connection.

The dark-lantern brigade has been working these bright moon-light nights. But Peterborough people can see another light—that is the star of Canada, and not another star added to the thirteen.

Let us tell President Taft that though we will always be friendly with him, we do not desire to give him a foothold on Canadian trade that can only end in harm and in disaster to ourselves.

J. R. Stratton has used every means, every effort to whip, coax, coerce and soothe the people of Peterborough into voting for him. Shall his personal appeals, for his own political salvation, be allowed to stop the hand of the people determined to stand up for Britain?

Mr. Stratton gets $2,500 a year for representing us. Yet he would take our money, and advocate a policy of wiping out half of our protective wall, to bring on us the American business Juggernaut. Is he the man who talks of "who pays for Arthur Hawkes' tour?"

Mr. Stratton made a house to house canvass yesterday. But even though Mr. Stratton be forced to ring the door-bells like a mendicant, it will be of little avail against the avalanche of the people's will. The money may flow, the organization may get out the vote, every effort to look after the votes around the city and in the country may be made, but still if the people will or the people won't, it is like trying to stem the onrushing tide, to stave off the inevitable.

TAKE THEM IN IRON GRASP.

New Chapter In Russian History Begun By Assassination.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 20.—The court influences are mobilizing for the fight to control the Government that shall succeed that of the late Premier Stolypin, who succumbed from bullet wounds received last Thursday night at Kiev. The impression prevails that the tenure of office of M. Kokovsoff, the acting Premier, will be temporary. The Nationalists fear that they would be set aside if Kokovsoff remained at the head of the Ministry. Several Ministers are also out of harmony with the acting Premier.

M. Kokovsoff is generally respected and is enlightened on foreign and financial matters and a straightforward conservative in home politics. The phrase, "It is time to wind up the nationalistic animation and inaugurate conciliation" is attributed to him.

There is much speculation as to whether a more liberal or a more reactionary policy will be adopted.

The Novoe Vremya yesterday said. "A new chapter in the history of Russia commences with the death of Stolypin. Socialism and Judaism must be taken in an iron grasp."

The Rech considers that Stolypin was big in individuality, but a political bankrupt, and that he has left the country an enormous task as a political legacy.

Throngs Cheer the Czar.

Kiev, Sept. 20.—A mass for the repose of the soul of the late Russian Prime Minister, M. Stolypin, who was shot Thursday night, was celebrated yesterday at the Kiev Hospital. Emperor Nicholas participated.

His Majesty left Kiev last evening for Sebastopol, where the Imperial party will take up for three months their residence in the newly-built palace at Yalta, in the Crimea. Thousands of persons, cheering enthusiastically and singing repeatedly the national anthem, accompanied the Emperor through the streets.

LOOTING IS RAMPANT.

Attacks on Yamens at Two Places Are Reported—Chengtu Threatened.

Pekin, Sept. 20.—The French legation has received a despatch from Sui-Fu that the precincts yamen at that place have been attacked and burned by the rebels. Many persons were killed. The Chinese Foreign Board has received reports of an attack on the yamen at Kiotung-Fu, but details are lacking. The board also has been advised that the yamens have been looted in five towns in the neighborhood of Cheng-Tu.

A message from General Charles Ezh Feng, commander of the troops within the besieged capital, says that he will despatch troops to the disturbed districts as soon as it can be arranged. He is evidently awaiting reinforcements.

Official advices received by the Government indicate that Chengtu, the Szechuan capital, was safe up to September 15.

London, Sept. 20.—The Foreign Office has received a cable despatch from the British Consul-General at Chengtu, of date of Sept. 14, which was transmitted through the Minister at Pekin, in which he says that the city on that date was still threatened with attacks. Up to the time of writing all the attacks had been repulsed.

Unrest In Norway's Army.

Christiania, Norway, Sept. 20.—The Government, through a general court-martial, has handed down sentences against nearly two hundred soldiers, who have taken part in mutinous demonstrations brought about through the influence of the young Socialist party, which of late has obtained great influence in the army.

The ostensible reason for the demonstration by the troops was that the men who violated some of the rules of the army were punished too severely, but the anti-militarist propaganda of the Socialists is believed to be at the bottom of the trouble.

Yesterday a general court-martial sentenced 130 soldiers to 24 days' arrest. Of the other demonstrators two were sentenced to 25 days' arrest, and fourteen to 20 days' confinement.

Liberals Have Two In Court.

Chatham, Sept. 20—Following quickly on the heels of the four arrests for perjury in registration at the instigation of the Conservative Purity Committee, the Liberal Committee yesterday had John Robinson, a young Englishman, and Thomas Wilson, a young Scotchman, arraigned on charges of falsely swearing that they were residents of Canada for the past twelve months, and of Chatham for the past three months. Both pleaded not guilty and asked for a speedy trial.

The four other men arrested refused to either plead or elect, and got an adjournment till after the elections.

Morgan as a Peacemaker.

New York, Sept. 20.—A cable to the World from Paris says:

J. Pierpont Morgan has been asked by German financial interests to lend part of the money that may be needed to avert any possible panic and failures that may threaten in Germany. Mr. Morgan has agreed to lend the money at 7 per cent. interest on one condition:

That the German Government accept France's proposals relative to Morocco and the Congo; the American millionaire expressing the opinion that a prompt acceptance of the proposals will of itself go far to relieve the financial uneasiness.

To Woo Japan for Peace.

New York, Sept. 20.—Rev. John W. Hill president of the International Peace Forum, and pastor of the Metropolitan temple, left New York yesterday for Japan in an effort to bring Japan into the peace treaty between Great Britain, France and the United States.

Hyde Guilty.

Anderson, S.C., Sept. 20.—The jury in the case of Samuel Hyde, charged with the murder of his wife and father-in-law, returned a verdict of guilty yesterday afternoon after fifty-five minutes' consideration.

Michigan bakers must henceforth distribute bread in covered baskets or trays.

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—There was an increased enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, there being bids in the market for over 250,000 bushels, but as they were all 1c to 2c per bushel out of line, no business was done. The Least Fuel. The Most Satisfaction

It Was the Best 25 Years Ago—It is the Best To-day

You have all heard of the Happy Thought Range, and most of you know some one who owns one. One of the first ranges made exclusively for the Canadian market, it is still first in the estimation of the Canadian housewife. The

Range has maintained its leading position through the determination of its makers that nothing short of the very best was good enough to put into it.

The best material, the best workmanship, the best ideas. Every year has seen it a better range.

Every new idea in range making has been thoroughly tested and when found to be an advantage it has been added to the Happy Thought.

By this means alone could its supremacy be maintained—and that it has been maintained is testified to by the enthusiastic praise of the thousands of housewives who use it.

Come and see one at our store. In appearance, as in general worth, it leads.

More than a quarter of a million "Happy Thoughts" are in daily use in Canada.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

The crowd had massed around so quickly that George could not retreat without fighting his way through the press. But he had no quarrel with this young fire eater. He had no appetite for fight. His desire at that moment was rather to fight the meddlesome Bill Kyle. The grin on that worthy's face stirred fury in his victim. To the astonishment of the crowd George turned his back on Wiggin, who already had his fists up, and walked over to Kyle.

"I'll not stand for this. You tell that man, there, that you've put up this job, or I'll settle this thing with you, Kyle, here and now. You've gone too far."

"Oh, go get a reputation!" chuckled the imperturbable boss. "Begin with a man of your own size. I'm startin' you right, son."

"Look-a-here," cried Wiggin, rushing to them, "don't you insult a friend of mine. You tattled your gossip to the wrong man, young fellow. Bill Kyle told me. Now, don't you go to giving him your impudence."

George kept his hands at his side in spite of the flourishing fists of his adversary.

"I'm not in the prize-fight class, Wiggin," he said. "When I have any reason for fighting with you, I'll do so. Just now, I don't propose to be made a spectacle of to entertain these drunken cattle."

It was righteous resentment, but it turned them all against him. The onlookers were used to seeing any man fight when he was provoked to it. This stranger seemed to be shirking.

And his insult capped the climax. A man swore, and ran at George from behind, jolting both hands against his shoulders. The blow drove him forward toward Wiggin, and that young man did not wait for more definite challenge. He did not even give his opponent a fair chance. George's hands were still at his side. Wiggin struck him in the face and he went down. A roar from the crowd greeted the act, but it was not applause

"A dirty trick Wiggin," shouted Kyle, first to resent it. "And now I hope he'll do you." There was no mistaking the sentiment of the crowd. They were woodsmen, and fair. A chorus of protest showed that they had turned against Wiggin in an instant.

Several men leaped to George, and raised him to his feet. His face was bleeding, and they wiped away the blood, giving him profane encouragement at the same time.

"I've a mind to give you a wallop, myself, for that," Kyle went on. "If you was that afraid he'd lick you fair, you ought to have stayed out of the fight. And now I hope he'll get the girl, too."

Drink and these reproaches drove out of Wiggin what little self-restraint he had left.

He cursed the lot of them. "This feller," he growled, "came up here bragging all along the way that he'd do me and have Clare Corran away from me."

"You lie, you drunken pup " George wrenched away from the hands that supported him. He was still dizzy from the blow, but his righteous anger now cleared his brain and steadied his nerves. As the other had become frantic, he became master of himself, though his face was rigid and gray with passion; the blood was a scarlet smear against the whiteness of his skin.

"I know what I'm talking about," screamed Wiggin. "It's my girl he's up here after, because she's got money, now."

Men in the crowd were crying protest. In that section, it was not well for any man to bandy Clare Corran's name in public brawl.

It was a mob that had grown till it filled the street. All the throngs had returned from the cemetery. They crowded on the outskirts. A man for whom they made way came thrusting through. He was tall and gaunt, a figure of angles. Even the gray beard on his cheeks was cut in the form of a carpenter's square.

"It's Jepson Wiggin — Blinn's old man," was the mutter that followed him through the crowd. "I guess he'll cal'late the youngster is talkin' too dev'lish much, just now."

In the wake of the old man followed Clare Corran on her big horse. She had caught a word on the outskirts of the crowd.

Hats came off to her as she passed. But she was too indignant to respond.

"Blinn!" cried his father, over the heads of the crowd, trying to get to him. "What do you mean by disgracing yourself in this fashion?"

But his son did not turn his head. Neither he nor George saw the girl, though she was lifted above the throng on her horse. The two, like gladiators in the arena, had eyes only for each other.

"Every one along this border knows how I stand toward Clare Corran," insisted Wiggin. "There's no Montreal dude coming along here and take her! You've got one sample of——"

A man stood between the two, wondering whether he had better let them get together. George settled his doubts. He seized the man, and tossed him far against the bulwarked bystanders. He faced Wiggin, breast to breast, and eye to eye.

Silence fell on them all. They wanted to hear what this stranger with his blood-marked face had to stay to the man who had struck the foul blow. George broke in on the threat.

"You cheap coward! I never saw you before to-day — but you are a coward. I'm not talking about how you struck me. I'll settle that with you, later. I'll do it without making a public show of it. But just now I want to say to you that if you insult a woman's name by bringing it into this quarrel again I'll drive your blatherskite tongue down your throat. And I'll do it now."

In his rage, Wiggin might have provoked the decisive combat there and then by persisting in his charges, but an interruption occurred that checked even his speech, much more his attack.

Clare Corran leaped her horse through the ring of humanity that hemmed the foes, and rode between them.

"I heard my name, here," she said simply and icily. It was a tone that hushed both the combattants. She gazed first at one and then at the other. It was the same look for both—indignant reproof.

Shame, sudden and almost unexplainable, choked George when he strove to speak. He did not wholly understand his embarrassment.

"You were the one that spoke it," she went on, turning at last to Wiggin. "Come, sir, tell me — by what right are you shouting my name in your street brawls?"

Wiggin hesitated, sullen and apprehensive.

"Excuse me, Miss Clare," said Bill Kyle, stepping forward, his hat in his hand. "I'm disinterested in this thing." He refused to be frozen by Harry George's accusing stare. "The stranger, here, name o' George — Great Trust Co.'s new man up this way — ain't to blame. I'm fair, and I want to see fair usage. But, for some reason, Blinn seems to think the stranger is tryin' to cut him with you, and——"

But George broke in, his ire breaking bounds.

"I am a stranger here, Miss Corran, as this man says. And, as a stranger, it seems to me that I have met nothing but fools and prize fighters, so far. This man attacked me without cause."

"Hit you when you wa'n't lookin'," cried a man in the crowd. "If Wiggin is your beau, Miss Clare, you'll have to be ashamed of him, after this!"

Sudden passion painted the scarlet on her cheeks. But, before she could speak, George came close to her horse.

"It is shameful — shameful!" he protested. "I beg you to believe that I'm not responsible for this insult to you."

"You needn't try to lie it off on to me," shouted young Wiggin.

"You was the one that claimed she was your gal," cried the babbler "And t'other feller was tryin' to shut you up!"

There was uproar, but she checked it by raising her hand. The spirit of command was in her.

"I heard enough, myself, to understand where the fault lies." She did not raise her voice. But in the hush, she was heard to the farthest limits of the crowd. Jepson Wiggin had squirmed through the press, and was trying to speak to her.

"Blinn was excited, Miss Clare," he pleaded. "He didn't mean all that." But she ignored the father. She fixed her gaze on the son.

"This isn't the first time you have bandied my name in public, Blinn Wiggin. You have been making a boast of me along the border. Don't you dare to speak, now! I know what I am talking about. I have not said anything, before; but I tell you to your face, now, that a boast from you is an insult to an honest girl. I know about you. I haven't any father, now, to protect me from insult. I haven't brother or lover to take my part."

"I can protect myself, though. And for you, or any other cur that lies about me, I have—this!"

Cobwebs in the Morning.

Cobwebs in the head on rising in the morning is the result of a Lazy Liver, one or two mornings in succession and sick headache follows.

Father Morriscy's Liver Pills will clear the Brain.

These Pills are a purely vegetable compound prepared with great care, and are without doubt the very best pills for general use, on the market. As a Liver Invigorator, Blood Purifier and General System Renovator, they are unequalled. Sick headache is invariably brought on by a sluggish liver, constipation or irregular bowels; these pills are a cure for sick headache in any form.

Pimples, eruptions and yellow skin are often caused by a lazy liver; one pill three times a week, will soon clear the complexion.—Price 25c per box.

CHEQUE FOR MILLIONS

Minneapolis Man Staggers a Toronto Bank Clerk.

Frederick A. Turner Presents a Piece of Paper for $250, Then Finally One For $6,686,000 — Police Are Called In and He Informs Them That It Was Written Out by a Friend Who Has Made a Lot of Money.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—"Is this any good?"

Frederick A. Turner handed the cashier of the Dominion Bank a yellow slip of paper which purported to be a check of the Bank of England for $550, payable through the Dominion Bank of Canada, Montreal branch.

On the bottom of it was a seal which read: "Official stamp of the Court of Superior Sessions, Toronto, Canada, Aug. 22nd, 1911."

The cashier looked up in surprise at the note.

"Oh, I have a bigger one than that," said Turner.

Then he produced a similar check for $6,686,000 made payable to him and signed John Dodgson.

The police department were notified and Detective Wallace went to the bank and took the man into custody.

At detective headquarters Turner claimed he was a foreman of the Canadian Fish Co. of Minneapolis and to prove it he had letter heads of the company in his possession.

He said that he had received the notes from John Dodgson, who was an egg dealer of Minneapolis and an Englishman. He had helped Dodgson when the latter had a sore leg and the two were coming to Toronto together to cash the checks. He, however, had lost Dodgson at Detroit and came to Toronto alone.

Turner claims he just went to the bank to see if the checks were all right and that he had not tried to cash any of them. There were five altogether, the other three being for $225, $225 and $100.

VAN HORNE CONFIDENT

Sir William Says Reciprocity Advocates Are Beaten.

C.P.R. Magnate Makes His First Appearance in a Political Campaign and Gives Crushing Negative to the Proposed Pact—U. S. Ignoring Party In Hope of Gain, and Canada Should Do the Same.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Sir William Van Horne appeared last night in Montreal on a political platform for the first time. The Monument National, in the heart of St. Lawrence Division, was crowded to the doors to hear him and he received an enthusiastic welcome.

Sir William's theme was reciprocity, which he attacked unsparingly, both from the economic and national viewpoint. He addressed his appeal to all the various elements, which make up the population of the division having something to say, to French, English and Hebrew alike.

Mr. G. F. Johnston, the Opposition candidate of the division, also spoke to the electors.

After brief introductory speeches by local orators, Sir William was called upon.

"The campaign is now practically over so far as argument is concerned, and there is no doubt that the advocates of reciprocity have been completely worsted in the argument. It only remains to do the necessary work of polling the vote.

SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE.

"To-day, I believe that there is not a single constituency in Ontario which is really safe for the Government. It is sincerely to be hoped that every man who feels the importance of defeating this ill-advised and improvident surrender of our national interests will not cease to work for the good cause until the election is over.

"With earnest and enthusiastic work during the next two days, I am confident that we shall win.

"When it came before the American Congress reciprocity was supported by a large majority of both political parties. They had much to gain and they ignored party lines. We have much to lose by it and we should likewise ignore party lines."

Sir William then quoted extensively from speeches and articles appearing in the American press to show that the leading men of the United States hoped that reciprocity would finally be consummated by political union.

The divergence of traffic to the American railroads and ports would greatly harm those of this country.

He then pointed to the freedom which the French-Canadian enjoys in Canada. The speaker referred particularly to the school question. If Canada should ever be swallowed by the United States, he said, the British treaties which guarantee French and Catholic rights would be gone; the Canadian constitution which supports religious schools for the Catholic people would be gone; annexation would put an end to parish law in this province and would refuse to French-Canadians the right to speak in their own language in the national parliament.

In the Thick of Fight.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Every Minister in the Ontario Cabinet is still in the thick of the political campaign. Yesterday the Premier was in Cornwall, where he addressed a meeting last night. Hon. W. J. Hanna and Hon. Dr. Reaume are in Western Ontario, Hon. J. S. Duff is in the Georgian Bay district, and Col. A. J. Matheson is in the east. Hon. Adam Beck left yesterday afternoon for Markham and addressed a political meeting there last night. Hon. F. Cochrane is nearly always at the Conservative organization headquarters, while the Attorney-General, Hon. J. J. Foy, is assisting in the campaign in the Toronto ridings.

Every Man Should Vote.

St. Catharines, Sept. 20.—"Any man who lives in a free country and takes no interest in an election for representatives to Parliament and lower Houses, disdaining to mix up with the common herd and voting, is not fit to live in a free country," said Mr. Justice Riddell, in his address to the grand jury on opening the fall assizes.

He added that any man who would sell his vote, is not fit to have a vote, and should be in the penitentiary, likewise any man who buys a vote.

Garage Burned.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 20.—Fire destroyed Humphries garage with touring cars at Queenstown. An overhead engine is believed to have caused the blaze, which did nearly $3,000 damage.

The Adirondack deer season is now open and it is estimated that at least 1,500 hunters are there already.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

So yesterday a seizure was put on the deposit, and if he is to receive his deposit back after the election he must get it from the court with the $85 and cost deducted.

SPLENDID HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICE AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Beautiful Harvest Decorations and Inspiring Sermon by Rev. Dr. Boyle of Toronto.

A most impressive and beautiful service was held at All Saints' church last evening, the occasion being the annual thanksgiving harvest festival ceremony observed yearly in connection with the church.

The artistic skill and decorative abilities of those in charge, was noticeably revealed by the tasteful manner in which the interior and chancel of of the church was adorned. Sheafs of wheat and various grains symbolical of the harvest season were arranged and placed throughout the interior with most noteworthy effect and the scene presented one of rare beauty and attractiveness. The chancel especially was decorated most effectively. Flowers, stalks of fresh corn and other Autumn growths were placed on the altar and woven around the chandeliers. The electric illumination enhanced the prettiness of the view.

The sacred service was distinctly solemn and uplifting. Most appropriate music was supplied, Master Cyril Devey presiding at the organ and the choral part of the service being in harmony with the occasion. Rev. Dr. Boyle, of Trinity College, Toronto, who had been secured to preach the festival sermon read the scriptural lesson. His texts were most suitable, being the first and last verses of Psalm 44, as follows. "We have heard with our ears O God, our fathers have told us what work thou didst in their days in the times of old," and "Arise for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies sake."

Rev. Dr. Boyle is a young man and his words were listened to with the keenest attention. His remarks were based upon three fundamental thoughts namely that God is in our individual, personal lives, and lastly and most important of all that God must be taken into our national life, if we are to excel.

The learned divine enlarged considerably and most intelligently upon these three enumerated important factors.

In speaking of the second thought he referred to the near departure of the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Trumpour, regarding it as perhaps one of the things which some people might look upon in the light of a discouragement. While it was a trial to lose the pastor of a church, yet he said God will raise up other servants to carry on the good work. In commenting on the third factor, he considered it to be one of paramount importance. On it depended the future success and prosperity of the country which we are proud to call Canada and our own.

After the sermon the choir gave the anthem in which the solo was very sweetly taken by Master Rose.

The sprightly little dancers with "The Beauty Spot" which comes to "The Grand" next Saturday, Sept. 23, matinee and night. Seat sale opens to-morrow.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE HELD MEETING IN SMITH AT THE TEMPERANCE HALL

Electors Hear the Issues of the Campaign Discussed by Three Speakers — Western Farmer's Arguments.

Mr. Burnham was accompanied to Smith, last night, by Mr. Colley, of Regina, Sask., a horse dealer, and Dr. Morrison of Peterborough. Dr. Morrison opened the meeting by referring to the proposed trade relations between Canada and the United States. He said that Canada had prospered more since all reciprocity talk with the United States had been given up than ever before. It was admitted when reciprocity was voted down by the people in the nineties that Canada would now turn her attention to the development of her own country, and to the trade with Britain. This has proved true and Canada was now on the highway to become a strong nation. Wasn't it strange that at this juncture the United States should seek reciprocity with us? There could be no doubt about it that their aim was to control our export trade. The United States and Canada both exported to England only about one-third of the food stuffs that Great Britain imports. The future in this respect was glowing. Why should we put our foreign trade in the control of the United States and more particularly why should we do it when as President Taft himself said in addressing the editors at New York, that "now was the time to break up Canada's connection with the British Empire, and that this opportunity might never occur again?" Patriotism, national pride and good business all demand that we should reject the pact. He closed with a glowing appeal to stand by the British Empire.

AN AUTHORITATIVE SPEAKER

Mr. Colley, who is a quiet spoken man, a little past middle age, born in Otonabee, said that he had been in the horse and general farming business in Regina district for 23 years. Horses across the border were fully 30 p.c. cheaper than in Ontario. The consequence is that many horses are even now imported from the United States and if the duty were taken off, of course the Canadian West would get horses at American prices and the trade with Ontario would die immediately, for it could not be supposed that the West would pay 30 p.c. more than was necessary. He said that the farmer had certainly nothing to hope for from reciprocity and he was not aware that anybody else would either because things that would otherwise be cheaper in the States were controlled by Trusts and the future of both Canada and the United States so far as the consumer was concerned lay in breaking up the power of the Trusts. The United States exported all kinds of produce and the price of it depended upon the export market, both for the producer and consumer excepting so far as the Trusts interfered. Mr. Colley's remarks were listened to with great attention. He endorsed Borden's stand for provincial rights denied to the West by Sir Wilfrid.

BORDEN AND BOURASSA

Mr. Burnham opened by referring to Bourassa. He said Liberals were trying to blame Borden for Bourassa's attempt to smash up the Liberal majority in Quebec. This of course was nonsense, but there was one thing certain and that was that if Bourassa could smash up the Liberal majority in Quebec, the hope of holding Bourassa did not remain with the Liberal party, and for that reason Liberals should join with Conservatives to that end in supporting Borden.

FREE PENSIONS

The speaker referred to the free pensions for the aged which, if elected he would introduce immediately into the House of Commons. People over 65 would draw enough to make them independent of charity without any cost to themselves whatever. This plan has worked splendidly in both Great Britain and Germany, and it was high time that it was introduced into Canada. Any other measure effecting West Peterborough could not possibly be of equal benefit.

THE WHY OF IT

Mr. Burnham took up the question of apples. The United States exported millions of barrels of apples to Great Britain. Why? Not because the United States market was better. The same thing applied to all exported produce and allowing for differences in freight and proximity to market it was quite plain that the British market settled the price of produce for both the Canadian and American consumer, but apart from all trade arguments a child could see that the prevailing desire of the United States was to control Canadian trade and that meant to control Canada. He appealed to the electors of Smith to assist in preventing the wreck of British connection and Canadian hopes.

Canned Music

During the late war with Spain, General Miles, at that time ostensibly the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, got himself into all sorts of trouble by saying that the troops were being served with embalmed meat, referring to the meat done up in cans and sold for the use of the Army, says Washingtonia. Of course he had in mind the age of the prepared article, as well as the chemicals used for preserving the meat. This was before the days of pure food laws, and at a time now when it is claimed the packers went upon the theory that any old thing was good enough to can, and that some chemical preservatives are actually beneficial to health.

"Canned Music" does not stand in this class. Some of the old songs may be old, in fact some of them are old, for they were written by such eminent composers as Handel, and Hayden, and Meyerbeer, and Gluck, but they are fresh and as young as when they were first given to the public. Those songs sung by the best singers, and the music accompanying them, rendered by the orchestras and bands of Europe and America, has been canned, and so perfectly has the work been done that when served up from the can they are almost equal to the best produced in the opera house.

Every evening hundreds of thousands of people listen to a delightful entertainment without the trouble of going to the opera house. They can have this entertainment when the opera houses are closed and the professional singers and musicians are taking their summer vacation. There was a time when eminent musicians as Sousa railed against this music, but now Sousa and his incomparable band are playing through the canned process to thousands who have never had an opportunity to hear the band any other way.

It is not alone the music of this high class that one can get from his can, but if he desires he can have that of the popular order, and the reproducing instruments are especially fine in rendering sacred music, and there are few church choirs that render as sympathetically and well the grand old hymns of Luther, Wesley, Watts, and others who have made their songs of praise so touchingly beautiful. The chants and songs of the early missionaries had more to do with civilization among the barbarous and savage nations than the priestly vestments, church ceremonies or eloquent sermons. Music is a great civiliser; not only a great civilizer, but a great refiner. The household wherein music is found is always more peaceful, more refined than is the one where music is never heard. Edison in his invention of the Phonograph was a greater benefactor to the human race than even Bell, who gave us the telephone. All styles of Edison Phonographs sold on easy payments. DRIVEN TO THE WALL, STRATTON BURSTS OUT

Made a Verbal Attack on License Inspector To-day

People are asking how it is that Mr. Stratton is showing, in this contest, an irritability, a rancor, a direct and venomous anger, never before manifested in any contest. The answer is easy:

HE IS FIGHTING WITH HIS BACK AGAINST THE WALL.

HE SEES NOTHING BUT DEFEAT.

HE KNOWS THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST HIM AND AGAINST RECIPROCITY HAS BEEN SWUNG AND PUSHED AS HE NEVER WAS PUSHED BEFORE.

This morning, with jeers and recrimination, he so far forgot himself as to attack Mr. Joseph Stewart, on the street, asking if Mr. Stewart had no time for his duties, but plenty of time to stand around and talk politics, which Mr. Stewart was not doing at the time. Mr. Stewart's friends will resent this attempt at [illegible].

How many Reform heelers and officials are talking politics to-day in favor of Mr. Stratton? Nil.

Mr. Stratton's burst of anger is the last thing he can do. Thursday will will settle that.

DO NOT ALLOW ANYONE OR ANY PARTY TO PLACE A POLITICAL LABEL ON YOU

Appeal to British-Born at the Grand Opera House by Mr. Arthur Hawkes—Rousing Address Greeted by Emphatic Approval From Large Audience — Personal Attacks are Answered.

There was no mistake about the success of the rally of the British born, at the Grand Opera House, last night.

It didn't take Mr Arthur Hawkes very long to win the sympathetic attention of his audience, which truly represented all classes of Peterboro citizens. The advance notices, regarding the merits of both the subject and speaker were ably sustained and that Mr. Hawkes made an impression was evidenced throughout the meeting He had something to say all the time and he expressed himself well. Time and time again he was forced to stop speaking until prolonged outbursts of cheering and handclapping, in answer to his splendidly explained remarks had subsided.

He was interrupted but once and on that occasion by a person, who had apparently by pre-arranged plan, secured a position near the speaker.

Mr. Hawkes had gotten away to a good start.

Suddenly the protesting one rose from his seat and tried to speak on the stage. He was greeted with persistent cries of "sit down" but notwithstanding these attempted to continue his little part. He was finally assisted from the stage and to the street by way of the rear exit.

Verily the best laid plans of mice and men "gang aft aglee."

LADIES WERE OUT.

The Red White and Blue drapings were prominent in the Opera House, and judging by the actions of the audience, the significance of the old flag was indelibly imprinted on their hearts Many ladies graced the meeting with their presence and facing the visitor of the evening was an audience which was second to none both in intellectuality and prominence. Before such a gathering, the speaker made point after point with a subject, which the supporters of the agreement between the United States and Canada, and on which the people of Canada will pass sentence to-morrow, have attempted in vain to ridicule.

He was introduced by the chairman, Mr. Wm. G. Common, who very ably performed his duties, he himself giving a short preparatory address in which he among others remarks, put before the audience the question is the future of Canada to be Canadian-British connection or Canadian-American connection.

The reception tendered Mr. Hawkes was worthy of the man. He is a Britisher through and through, is editor of the British News of Canada and in dealing with the subject of "The Place of the British Born in the Coming Elections," he speaks with the experience of one who has seen and studied conditions for himself.

Mr. Hawkes remarked that he had to thank Mr. Stratton and the Examiner for the splendid advertising given him. He felt sure that the debt would be repaid with interest. The speaker gave his attention to J. R. and the Examiner for a short time, winning the close attention and approbation of the big audience. Politics, he said, was an important subject, on which much enlightenment could be found in the Bible, a book which Mr. Stratton and the editor of the Examiner was not very fond of.

Proceeding with his address Mr. Hawkes said that it must be a great thing for one from the old land to stand on the shore of the Atlantic and look across the vast waters, or for another to come up the mighty St. Lawrence, to have travelled through the province, or to the north, or go into the prairie country across to the Pacific and be able to say this is my own, my native land. It was a great thing to be an inheritor of Canada.

Politics, he said, was the science of government. It ought to be part of a man's religion to see that the country is governed as it should be. It should not be the cause of strife between the fellows who are striving to get their hands in the public treasury and those who have their hands in already.

The speaker explained his reasons why the Britisher coming into Canada needed advice. There was responsibility resting with every man as to his vote. How was the newcomer to grasp the fundamental principles of Canadian politics, coming as he did from a country where conditions were altogether different. And who was more competent to give this advice than those who have gone through the same experience.

In explaining another reason, the speaker held that the real crucible of nationalism was in the west. But there could be found the Britisher among a band of men, from all countries. He was all the British empire they knew of, and on him was placed the responsibility of making himself worthy in his high vocation as a British citizen.

MR. ARTHUR HAWKES.

And in coming to Canada, the Britisher found something different in the politics of the country than when he cheered for Lloyd-George, or Balfour, or Chamberlain. It was for him to leave his political labels behind him and to be slow in allowing anyone in Canada to put a political label on him. "Wait and put it on yourself," was the advice of the speaker. At this point Mr. Hawkes made a passing reference to the attacks made upon him, and asked if it was a crime for a man to stand up in the open in the interests of his own brethren.

DON'T BE FOOLED

Again, party issues did not mean the same in Canada as they did in the old country. "Don't be fooled and believe because you were a Liberal in the old country you have to vote here for J. R. Stratton," he said. Existing conditions should be weighed by the British born Canadians, and on the present issue, and they, irrespective of party should vote accordingly.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had said that the 20th century belonged to Canada. Then issues should be settled by the people of the 20th century. The reciprocity pact affected the future, and the opinions of men now dead had nothing to do with it. The politics of the future have got to be decided with our eyes on the future and not glued on the past. And again the great political questions were not settled by the little arguments. Here the speaker warned the British born to look around and view the national situation and pay no attention to the small argument. The little details didn't count.

CANADA ROOTED.

The old National policy had built up the prosperity of Canada, and the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty of 1845 was the best thing that ever happened to Canada. She had to root, hog or die. She rooted, said the speaker, amidst deafening applause. Now United States wanted to step in and share the results of her rooting.

Mr Hawkes took up the statements of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in regard to reciprocity and showed how utterly inconsistent his present platform was. He also referred to the development of railways, and gave one striking instance of his management on the part of the government. The economic side should be considered, he held, from the point of our day, and we were small beside the United States. We should thing twice before making a deal with them.

The government thought the arrangement would go through like "greased lightning," but they reckoned without their Borden.

The aim of the United States was to divert commercial union with the British Empire, but the speaker held that he very much mistook the temper of the British born, if they would allow an outside power to say that there shall not be a commercial union within the empire.

To give his audience a sample of what was being said on the other side, he read an extract from the Minneapolis Journal

Speaking of flags, he said that the United States had done well to make much of their flag. It flew on every school house. But after all what was their flag compared with ours—an emblem of world-wide growth, freedom and liberty and hope for the oppressed.

PERSONAL ATTACKS.

Mr. Hawkes concluded his address amidst the wildest applause and after a short interval proceeded again, this time to deal with personal attacks made upon him. He denied having said anything improper, or made any statements other than were for the interests of his countrymen. He denied the accusation that he was a paid agent of the Conservatives. The statement was utterly untrue, he said. He did not represent the Conservative party. He told of his original meeting in Toronto, of the organization of the Canada British Association and the work it was doing.

As to the statements made in the Examiner, Mr. Hawkes held that it ill-became J. R. Stratton to ask where the money came from. He would, however, make an offer to Mr. Stratton, which was that he would give an account of what he had done with all monies as soon as J. R. Stratton makes an affidavit telling how much it cost him to run the election in Peterborough at the last campaign.

He also told of the offer made by Hon. Mr. Graham at Brockville to give up his addresses in Ontario and go to Quebec and his explanations throughout were received by the audience as those of a man who was in no way attempting to hedge, but give the actual facts.

Secretary Scammell, in a three minute speech, told of the object of the British Canada Association and the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

During the evening the Grand Opera House orchestra gave a most enjoyable program of varied selections and Mr. Harold Lee was heard in two vocal numbers, each of which was given in splendid voice. Mr. R. J. Devey played the accompaniment.

DOCK HAND MURDERED

Body Was Found With the Head Badly Battered

Special to the Review.

Windsor, Sept. 20.—The body of Thomas Mills, 50 years of age, was found near the M.C.R. bridge this morning with his head almost beaten to a pulp. Evidences of a terrible struggle were also found. Mills had been employed on the docks and had been consorting with a number of vagrant negroes. His home is in Kingston. Robbery was apparently the motive for the assault on him.

SPORTS PROGRAM AT THE ARMORIES

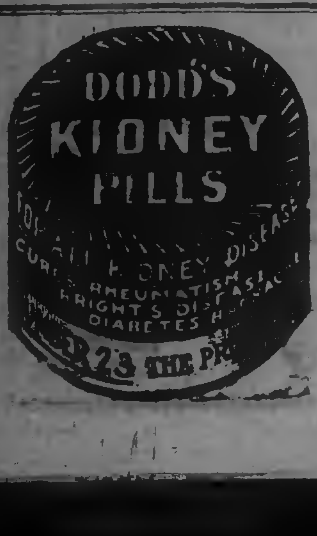
Preparations Being Made for the Coming Season

A live committee is in charge of the athletics in connection with the Peterborough garrison this season and there will be something doing around the armories this year.

The bowling allies, which have been closed during the summer months, will be opened on Saturday night next when the officers will bowl and on Monday evening it will first be opened to the men. The alleys are in good shape this year and the men should make use of them. Teams will likely be formed among the companies and a suitable trophy offered.

INDOOR BASEBALL

By October 1st the Indoor Baseball Committee expects to have a schedule drawn up and the game in full swing. Only teams who intend finishing out the schedule will be allowed to enter as it is not desirable that a member start and drop out after a couple of games.



LACROSSE AT THE COAST

Prospects for the Permanency of the Game in British Columbia

It is beginning to get to the people of the farther West, says The Telegram, that if Vancouver land that British Columbia championship, and incidentally the Minto Cup, the game of lacrosse is liable to take a horrible slump in that country. They figure that with age creeping on and no championship to defend, the old guard will hang up their sticks and retire, to become part and parcel of the armchair brigade. Westminster players have undoubtedly rallied to the defence of the cup. They have stayed with the game in order to defend what by their powers they had annexed. Now whether the game will die suddenly with the exit of some of the older players is a question of another color. Doubtless the Westminster team of next year would have many juniors on its line-up. It would probably be weaker, but to just what extent is problematical. It is not likely that Vancouver will be able to hold all her stars next season. Torontos are coaxing back a couple of erstwhile blue and white men, who have been towers of strength to Con Jones' aggregation. If New Westminster is not there with the opposition it is not likely that Con will keep a stable of stall feds. So, if Vancouver takes down the Minto silver ware, it may just put lacrosse in the West on a permanent basis. There is lots of good lacrosse material in both New Westminster and Vancouver. Though they may lose their grip on the world's championship for a while, it is not likely that the people who enjoy lacrosse as a spectacle will be much worse off.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Spanish Strikes Spread.

Madrid, Sept. 19.—A general strike, which has behind it revolutionary support, has broken out at Valencia, a maritime city. Martial law has been proclaimed.

Just before communication with the city was broken off, it was reported that serious disturbances had occurred. The Government is considering a suspension of constitutional guarantees throughout Spain. Strikes are general at Bilbao and Saragossa and partially successful at Cadiz, Valencia, Seville and Gijon. It is expected that the workmen will go out at Barcelona, Corunna, and Ferrol.

The police have discovered a revolutionary plot directed by Spanish and foreign anarchists and a certain political group, whose methods provide for general strikes and violence against property.

THE OKLAHOMA GIANT

If Looks Count for Anything, He Will Be a World-Beater

If looks amount to anything, Carl Morris, the Oklahoma Giant, may be a world-beater. He is the biggest pugilist physically in the ring, and if he turns out to be the man to lower Jack Johnson's colors he will earn enough money to buy the town of Tulsa, Okla. Morris has dark brown hair, blue eyes, a rather prominent nose, square jaws and a thick neck. His head is well shaped, and the facial expression indicates intelligence and courage. The shoulders are wonderfully developed, the chest and back display great lung power, and the arms unusually long, the reach being eighty-four inches. Morris carries no surplus flesh about the belt. The stomach shows plenty of muscular development, and the waist is not too slim. The legs are well developed, long and solidly constructed, but there's considerable flesh about the upper part of the thighs that will have to come off. The big fellow's hands are enormous. When he doubles up his fists the knuckles bulge like bunches of iron knobs. His wrists, forearms and biceps indicate great strength. In spite of his size he moves around without a sign of awkwardness, and impresses one immediately with his apparent self-possession. Morris isn't inclined to talk much. He is modest and retiring when put under a cross-examination. He doesn't proclaim himself a world-beater, but says he is doing his best to develop sufficient fighting ability to warrant a match with Jack Johnson. He weighs 241 pounds stripped.

STANTON TO TAKE CHARGE

Will Coach College Football Team This Season

It is stated on good authority that Rev. Father Stanton will take full charge, on the re-opening of the University, of the Ottawa College football team. Father Stanton's duties in the past few years have been such as to prohibit his taking a great interest in the game, but the garnet and grey followers are anxious that the team should make a better showing this year and have forwarded a request that Rev. Father Stanton again assume the duties, which he successfully carrier out when College won the Intercollegiate championship in 1907.

RITCHIE'S GOOD TIME

The Chatham Horse Has Won Several Fast Heats

Few pacers have ever performed on the half-mile tracks with as much credit as the Chatham side-wheeler, Ritchie, 2.11¼, that is being raced by A. G. Bedford. This horse raced extensively on the ice last winter, and has been in the heat of battle since the campaign opened at Chatham the last week in May. He has been beaten, it is true, but he has also won race after race in fast time, and has always been up against the cracks. Recently at Toledo, O, Ritchie won a six-heat race after five of the six heats were paced in 2.11¼, or better, which was an extraordinary performance. Last week at Findlay, Ohio, he forced Nutmoor out in 2.06¾, and this time has rarely been seen in a race on a two-lap track.

MUSTN'T SLAY A NEIGHBOR'S PIG

Magistrate Leggatt, Windsor, fined Mrs. Lucy Strong, of Belle River, $5 for having beaten one of her neighbor's pigs to death. Mrs. Strong's defence was that the swine of her neighbor, Mrs. Ladouier, had annoyed her, and that she had merely driven the animal out of her yard, but the magistrate allowed the fine to stand, giving the woman the option of ten days in jail.

LIBERAL WORKERS DEPOSIT $5000 AMERICAN GOLD BONDS

Sensation in St. John N. B. Over Election Story—Prominent Business Men Attest to the Facts

St. John, N.B., Sept. 19.—All the electors throughout the city and county of St. John have been aroused by the charges which Mr. W. Shives Fisher made last Monday evening, to the effect that several American gold bond bills of $5,000 each had been changed into Canadian money at local banks by prominent reciprocity workers in this city.

To-day, the anti-reciprocity workers are in a position to back up this statement by positive facts, and the revelation regarding the deposit of one $5,000 American bill concerns a well-known Liberal of St. John.

On August 30th last, Mr. Frank Smith, one of the partners in the firm of Scovil Brothers & Co., wholesale and retail clothiers of this city, and closely connected with the Liberal organization of St. John, walked into the Bank of Montreal at the corner of King and Prince William streets, and, going up to the paying teller of the bank, handed over a $5,000 American gold bond bill, which he deposited in his own name.

He, thereupon drew out $1,300 of the deposit and walked out.

These facts are attested to by a prominent business man of St. John, who saw Mr Frank Smith deposit the American bill, and subsequently draw out the money. Further investigation, it is said, will undoubtedly show from the bank books that the money was deposited as aforesaid.

Mr Frank Smith is an ardent Liberal and a supporter of reciprocity; and while he is not himself directly connected with the Liberal organization, Mr. W. G. Scovil, his head partner, is one of the prominent ward workers for the Liberal party.

In addition to this, Mr. Scovil's brother is one of the heads of the Liberal organization in Kent County.

Mr Frank Smith, who deposited the money, is not a wealthy man himself. "Why should he, all of a sudden, deposit $5,000 American money, and then draw out $1,300?"

This is the question which the electors of St. John will naturally be anxious to have answered.

Connected with all this is the fact that a prominent shipping man from Portland arrived at St. John in his yacht the week before and for several days in succession was seen in the company of Liberal organizers.

There is also reliable information in connection with the deposit of two additional $5,000 Amerlcan bills in other banks of the city—the Bank of New Brunswick and the Bank of Nova Scotia; and it is said that those deposits were made by two of the leading backers of the reciprocity forces.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING FUND

Of the Salvation Army

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission I wish to call the attention of your readers to the annual canvass now being made in this city in the interests of the Harvest Thanksgiving fund of the Salvation Army, and also to explain the objects of this fund.

In the first place this harvest thanksgiving effort is an annual appeal to the people of Canada to unite with us in a practical expression of gratitude to God for all His goodness to us as a people, irrespective of our race, creed or calling. We most assuredly must admit that in the Divine policy Canada comes under the "Most Favored Nations" clause, for few nations are more favored than is this fair country of ours.

Then the object of the fund—which is for the benefit of the officers of the Salvation Army in Canada. There are over 1,000 men and women who have given up their secular callings and are devoting their lives to helping the unfortunate, the poor, the needy, and the down-trodden. Just think what a mighty force, this body of men and women constitutes in the home mission field, and let me ask if, in return for their devotion and the tax upon their health and strength, they are not deserving of the practical help and co-operation of all Christians, who are interested in the cause of Christ and of Canada's unfortunates.

Last year the total amount raised in Canada for this fund was $25,784.87, and the expense of the canvass was $183.40. The proceeds were expended as follows;—$8,000 for the benefit of officers and families in impaired and brokendown health; $4,000 for the training and equipping of officers for their various duties; $7,624.13 in grants to officers in poor and difficult stations, $3,300 in repairs to property and rents in poor stations, and the balance was distributed in various ways as the necessity of the field demanded.

The amount contributed by Peterborough corps and friends last year was $315, a very creditable sum indeed. The "Target" set for this year is $325, and I make an earnest appeal to all our friends to unite with us in raising this amount, so that Peterborough—the fair and prosperous city—will again be "right in line" at the head of the procession in this, as it usually is in all other religious and charitable enterprises.

Donations sent to Ensign J. H. Merrett, 530 King street, Peterborough, will be duly appreciated and acknowledged. Or phone 440 will find him.

Thanking you for your valuable space.

I am, yours sincerely,
J. H. MERRETT,
Ensign.

Giant Steamship Struck by British Cruiser—Passengers Are Landed in Safety

Special to the Review.

London, Sept. 20.—Rammed by the British cruiser Hawke to-day, in Cowes Roadstead, just after leaving Southampton, the White Star Liner Olympic had to beach in order to save her from sinking. The water poured through the gap on the starboard quarter. Twelve hundred passengers were transferred by smaller craft and landed in safety. Much damage was done to the mails, and the cargo holds were flooded.

AN APPEAL TO BRITISHERS

Mr. Webb Calls on Them to Resent Remarks

Fellow Countrymen,—Followers of Mr. Stratton are openly boasting in the bars of the city and in other places, that they can buy the British vote in this election, that $2 will buy any Britisher. They are openly boasting, and boys, I want you to give the lie to this once and for all. Show by voting for Burnham and British connection the Liberal party, where it stands. By voting for Burnham you are voting for Canada's best interest for the best interests of the Home Land. Remember boys the Old Land to-morrow and vote pro-British not pro-American. Stand by the Union Jack boys and not by the Stars and Stripes. The Stars and Stripes are good for the Yanks, but the good old Union Jack for Canada every time. Stand on your honor boys, and show Peterboro that if Liberals can buy Canadians, they certainly can't buy us British. We were born free, let us keep free. Vote against the party who drags our fair name in the mud by boasting we Britishers can be bought for $2. Defend our national honor boys and vote down the party that says we are cheap guys. Vote for Burnham and Britain, and above all else vote for our honor as Britishers. Burnham is a Britisher and he stands for British institutions.

Yours faithfully,
PERCIVAL G.S. WEBB.

OVER 77 MILLIONS

Value of the Cut Lumber Output of Canada in 1910

Interesting statistical comparisons may be made from the 1910 lumber report prepared by the Dominion Forestry Department. Of the twenty-six native species of wood which together were cut in 1910 to the extent of four billion, nine hundred million board feet, worth over seventy-seven million dollars, the first nine were coniferous or soft woods. Spruce was the most important, alone forming over one quarter of the total cut. Spruce and white pine, together, formed barely one-half of the 1910 cut, while in the year previous, these two species made up nearly three-fifths of the total. This decrease in proportion is due not to a smaller cut of the two species but to a very great increase in the amount of Douglas fir, hemlock, cedar and yellow pine produced in British Columbia. One-quarter of the 1909 cut was formed of these four species while in 1910 the total cut of the four was increased by seventy per cent. While pine lumber is undergoing a gradual evolution in its importance to the lumber industry, up to three years ago, white pine stood at the top of the list, when it was supplanted by spruce although the actual cut of the former had not decreased. The prediction of last year that white pine had nearly reached its maximum cut has proven true this year, the 1909 cut being decreased by four per cent. or forty-two million feet. Yellow pine increased in its cut nearly six hundred per cent. in British Columbia during one year. This increase of over one hundred and fifty million feet was sufficient to raise it from fourteenth place in the species table to sixth place in importance, thus surpassing in one year red pine, beech, balsam, and the four most important hardwoods.

CANADIAN APPLES

Take President's Cup at International Convention in Detroit

The apple men of Canada scored a great victory at Detroit when their exhibit won the President's Cup at the International Apple Shippers' convention for the most comprehensive display of apples, after a keen competition from displays made by the numerous apple-producing districts of the United States. The Canadian collection comprised thirty leading commercial varieties, selected from carefully sprayed orchards, and the principal points on which the Canadian apples won were fine quality and commercial value.

PICTURE, BUT NO POSTER

How an Ingenious Moving Film Proprietor Meets the Law

At least one ingenious moving picture theatre proprietor in Toronto has found a method of getting around the edict of the police prohibiting the display outside such places of amusement of posters picturing acts of crime and vice. Special Notice: "A Western Woman's way." We are not allowed to show this poster, but we have the picture inside." Such is the announcement of the Eagle Theatre that stands out in striking contrast to the flaring colors of the pictures around, in the place where the forbidden poster would otherwise have been. The case seems to raise the delicate point as to whether a picture that was not fit to be seen on the street is permissible within the walls of the theatre.

GIRLS' WAGES TOO LOW

Y.W.C.A. at Hamilton Claim Manufacturers Pare Things Down

That the manufacturers of Hamilton pay such low wages to the girls employed by them as to make it impossible for the girls to pay a proper price for their board, was the statement made by a representative of the Young Women's Christian Association, who asked for the remission of the Association's taxes to the city. The Y.W.C.A.'s representative told the board of control that some of the young women cared for by the institution worked for as little as $4 a week, and out of such a wage could not pay more than $2 a week for board.

UNDER MARTIAL RULE

King Alfonso Suspends the Constitutional Guarantee.

Revolutionary Agitation In Spain Is Growing and Under Cover of Strikes the Republicans Are Furthering Their Plans For a General Uprising — General Strike to Be Called—A Serious Crisis.

Madrid, Sept. 20.—King Alfonso yesterday signed a decree suspending the constitutional guarantee throughout Spain. This is equivalent to declaring the country under martial law.

This act which had been under consideration for some days, was taken to give the Government powers to deal sharply and promptly with the revolutionary agitation now fermenting in many parts of Spain, especially in the cities and industrial districts where Republican and revolutionary plans are being furthered, under cover of workingmen's strikes.

Well-known Republican Parliamentary leaders stand aside from the present movement, which is socialistic and destructive in character.

The most serious situation is at Valencia, where a general strike was declared Monday. The city was at once placed under martial law, and there more or less rioting throughout the day. After dark the disturbers attacked the officials in the adjacent township of Cullera, murdered a judge and wounded other officers of the court, which had been engaged in the trial of those arrested earlier in the day.

The General Union of Labor yesterday decided to call a general strike throughout Spain on a date to be fixed later.

Boy Burglars.

New York, Sept. 20.—Two boy burglars, aged 9 and 5 years, were on Monday captured at the revolver's point by a reserve squad of three detectives and three uniformed policemen, while ransacking the home of August T. Day in Williamsburg. John Konchinsky, the older boy, defiantly cried: "I ain't a squaler. The gang knows I'm square," while little George Bills, anything but a bold burglar wailed: "I wanna go home!"

The younger lad was taken home, while the elder was sent to the children's court. It is thought that they were being used as tools by some gang of burglars.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Pleading guilty to seven charges of burglary, committed in the north end of the city and of securing in this manner goods to the value of $2,000, Emile Harpin, the 19-year-old son of respectable parents, came before Judge Choquet yesterday morning for sentence, and was committed to the penitentiary for three years.

Irish Strikers Quiet.

Dublin, Sept. 20.—There was no improvement yesterday in the situation resulting from the strike declared originally on Friday night on the Great Southern & Western Railway, and which is extending over the Great Northern and the Midland Great Western, the three principal lines in Ireland.

Traffic generally is disorganized.

The executive of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was in session yesterday. Pending the outcome the strikers generally are quiet.

An effort to fill the places of the men who quit is being made. Forty Scottish strike-breakers arrived yesterday morning, and met a hostile reception. A big police escort routed the attacking party. Another party from Manchester were met by strike pickets, who persuaded most of them not to work.

Bernier Coming Back.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Captain Bernier, the Canadian Arctic explorer, is back from a year's cruise in the far north. Bernier wintered in the Arctic seas, and had not been heard from for over six months up to yesterday morning, when the Arctic was reported off Point Amour, on the Labrador coast.

Bernier's long silence, and the uncertainty as to the exact whereabouts of the Arctic, had caused some anxiety in official circles in Ottawa. The return by way of Labrador suggests that Capt. Bernier failed in his intention of making the northwest passage.

Yes, Gotham's a Big Place.

New York, Sept. 20.—It will cost $174,000,000 to run the city of New York this year. To show how this immense sum is spent, the city will lay out $35,000 next month on an exhibit that will plainly reveal the details of city administration.

The city employs 107,000 persons, 86,000 of them all the time. School teachers number 17,200, police 10,118, firemen 4,366, streets, parks, sewers, docks and bridges employes total 19,200, and in winter 7,000 snow shovelers and drivers are employed. The total pay roll of the city is $88,660,021.

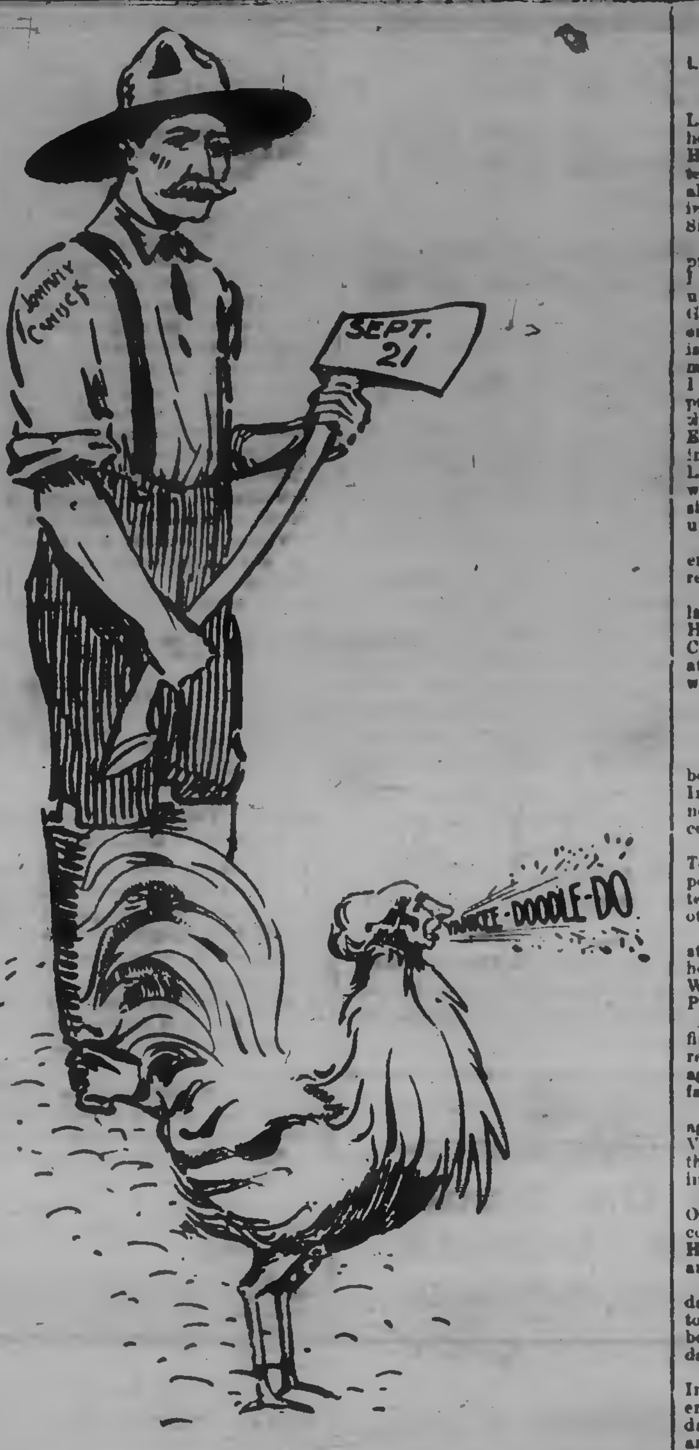
Aviator to Cross Line.

Lockport, N.Y., Sept. 20.—James J. Ward, the second aviator to start in the flight across the continent for the $50,000 prize, in order to thank in person a benefactor of his earlier years, is diverging one hundred miles from his course in his daring coast to coast flight. Yesterday he visited Wm. A. Heacock, a Lockport manufacturer, and later will proceed westward to Brantford, Canada, where he will deliver a message.

Burned His Baby Sister.

Charlotte, N.C., Sept. 20.—The peculiarly atrocious burning to death of the two-year-old child of E. G. Friday, a farmer of Iredell, by her brother, four years old, came to light yesterday. The older child deliberately ignited a small torch and applied it to the clothing of his baby sister. Asked his reason the child replied: "Just because." He has repeatedly set fire to furnishings of the house.

A large addition is to be built to the St. Eugene Hospital at Cranbrook, B.C.



JACK CANUCK — He's a fine bird, but I don't like his crowing

WHAT A VOTE FOR BURNHAM MEANS, IN THIS ELECTION:

A blow to Strattonism that should have been given long ago. The end of a regime in Peterborough against which all self-respecting electors must, in their hearts, rebel.

The retiring to private life of an individual, as the Ross government was retired to oblivion a few years ago, and for much the same reasons.

The triumph of a candidate whose personal record is beyond reproach; and the performance of one twentieth of the work of ending Laurierism which Liberal Joe Martin says "stinks in the nostrils of the people of the old country."

The return of Mr. Borden who will give to Canada a clean government; a policy of Canada for the Canadians; a policy of strict adherence to the British connection; a premier who will do for Canada what J. P. Whitney has done for Ontario.

A protest against reciprocity with the United States, an agreement that involves many dangers to Canadian freedom and nationality; direct loss to Canadian farmers; loss to many Canadian working-men; and a step toward continental free trade that would bring destruction to Canadian industries.

A protest against the "secret" method of making such trade agreements, whereby citizens and even members of parliament are denied the right to make effectual protest against the terms, before ratification.

A protest against the policy of handing over Canadian raw material and natural resources to the Americans, to be manufactured in the United States, to the loss of Canadian workingmen.

A protest against the policy of opening the Canadian markets to the strenuous competition of a panic-ridden business people, involving Canada in the mad turmoil of financial depressions.

For a British administration and a patriotic government, whose policy will be to further, not to discourage, attempts at bringing the parts of the empire closer together.

The preservation intact of the old National policy, which has meant so much to Canada.

A declaration to Taft and the United States that Canada is determined to go her own way, neither permitting her fiscal policy to be made at Washington, nor truckling to the great American commonwealth, but that Canada is ready to live pleasantly and harmoniously as neighbor to neighbor.

The maintenance of present Canadian prosperity, without the dangers of a reversal of our policy for decades, and in keeping with Canadian dignity and ideals.

Let us hoe our own row. Vote for these principles, and you will vote for Burnham, their exponent. A vote for Burnham in this election will be the most patriotic and common-sense vote you have cast in twenty years.

A public auction sale of school lands will be held at Regina on the 28th inst.

It is expected that a regular street car service will soon be inaugurated in Moose Jaw

CAN'T AROUSE INTEREST.

Laurier's Old Crowds Hear Van Horne and Bourassa.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed several meetings here yesterday but Sir William Van Horne and Henri Bourassa cut his attendance down to 5,000. Bourassa alone and 20,000 in the Ontario Skating Rink and nearly 30,000 outside. Sir Wilfrid spoke in both languages.

In talking to the English electors present he said: "In my early career I determined to model my Liberalism upon that of Bright, Cobden and Gladstone. I am a Liberal of the Liberal school of old England, and there is therefore a bond between you and me. The measure of freer trade which I am giving you it but part of the principle adopted in England during the past century. I rely upon the English-speaking people of this Dominion to do their part in returning the Liberal party to power in order that we may put into effect this most desirable measure of reciprocity in natural products."

Speaking in French, Sir Wilfrid entered into an exhaustive argument regarding the reciprocity agreement.

Sir Wilfrid left the city at 11.30 last night and proceeded to Quebec. He will speak to-day in Quebec County, and in Montmorency County at St. Anne de Beaupe. This will wind up his tour.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

John Spalls, a lineman for the Bell Telephone Co., fell from a telephone pole in Hamilton early yesterday afternoon and broke his wrist and was otherwise painfully injured.

A public subscription has been started with the object of securing a house and lot to present to Private W. J. Clifford, winner of the King's Prize at the Bisley rifle meet.

Guilty of attempted murder was the finding of a jury yesterday in Montreal in the case of Harry Lusher, aged 25, accused of having shot his father. Sentence was deferred.

Judge Constantineau's libel case against H. C. Jones, editor of The Vankleek Hill Review, was dismissed, the judge failing to appear, and being compelled to pay the costs.

Thomas Sproule of Westbrook, Ont., aged 66, an ex-warden of the county, fell five feet from his stile. His head struck the cement floor, and he died of a fractured skull.

The marriage of Miss Alice Amos, daughter of Mrs. L. Amos, Montreal, to Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, took place at nine o'clock yesterday morning in St. James' Cathedral.

Two special freight trains on the Intercolonial Railway crashed together head on near Tracadie, N.S., Monday night, demolishing both engines and shattering four freight cars. The crews jumped.

Lighting a match to look for a coin he had dropped, a customer set fire to material in Samuel Bernstein's tailor shop in Montreal Monday night. The loss is $2,000, while Bernstein was badly burned.

The law officers of the crown have given the opinion in the Two Mountains election case that the acceptance of the deposit by the returning officer does not validate the nomination.

Alfred Rosenbaum of Chicago was killed at Dewitt, Iowa, when his aeroplane fell from a height of fifty feet. He had been in the air only twenty minutes when he lost control of the machine.

Pleading guilty to seven charges of burglary committed in Montreal, and of securing in this manner goods to the value of $2,000, Emile Harpin, aged 19, was committed to the penitentiary for three years.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has interested himself in the campaign to prevent the scheduled Johnson-Wells' fight, and has written the British Home Office, urging that action to suppress the contest be taken.

Judge Colter at St. Thomas sentenced two Toronto men who were found guilty on charges of picking pockets at Port Stanley, August 10. John McGrath was given three years in the penitentiary, and George Crane two and a half years.

Actions for $10,000 each have been entered by Mr. Meredic Martin, Liberal candidate for St. Mary's, Montreal, against Mr. Jules Fournier, publisher of L'Action, against La Patrie Publishing Co. and against Publicite, Limited, publishers of Le Devoir.

Volunteer Police For Britain.

London, Sept. 20.—The Home Office has issued a detailed circular to the chief constables in the United Kingdom, instructing them how the volunteer police force, which it is proposed to raise in each of the large centres of population, should be organised. It will consist of a registered police reserve in two bodies, the first reserve consisting of men who have previously undergone police or military training, and who could be temporarily attached to the regulars with uniform and pay, and the second consisting of men registered as willing to serve as special constables.

Home Secretary Churchill suggests that this scheme would to a great extent obviate the necessity of calling out the troops. He further proposes that in times of strikes it might be legitimate to enroll strikers as special constables, because strike disorders, he points out, are for the most part prompted by hooligans, and the strikers themselves would likely be anxious to suppress disorders which would bring discredit on their cause.

Getting Nearer Agreement.

Paris, Sept. 20.—A semi-official note issued yesterday afternoon says that the French negotiations with Germany entered a new stage during the conversation between the German Foreign Minister and the French Ambassador to Germany on Monday, promising an early agreement.

The conversation, the note adds, makes a satisfactory issue probable, but it would be premature to consider all divergencies as having disappeared.

It is hoped that, by the end of the week, the negotiations will have reached a decisive turn.

The City of Nelson, BC, has appealed for provincial help to run down fire bugs.

PROPPING UP THE CAUSE

PETERBOROUGH, Sept. 20th, 1911

TO THE EDITOR OF THE REVIEW:

DEAR SIR,—The Examiner of last night printed "Some Pointers for the British Born," and from a careful study of said pointers, it seems to me that they find the Liberal cause in West Peterborough a lost one, and for this reason they are trying to make a prop for this "Tottering Liberal Seat"— not "Tottering Protestantism"—by raising race strife between the British-born and the French Canadians. If, as the Examiner says, Bourassa and Laurier have quarreled over an office, why do they want either the British-born or Mr. Borden to patch this quarrel up for them? Is it not between Bourassa and Laurier? I also notice they have left the main issue in this election strictly alone. They know they cannot fool the British-born with any of their reciprocity cant. I am British-born, born in Britain, and that is a cheap place to live. The food and other things are cheap, but what is the good of that if a man cannot get work to earn the money to buy it? If a loaf of bread is selling for one cent, and a man does not have the price, where is the benefit? There are thousands over there who cannot buy food, though it is cheap, but who are dependent on charity. What is the reason of so many English people coming out here? Is it because they want to leave home? No, but they come here to this protected country, where they can get work and higher wages and can afford to pay a little more for food and other things. What is driving the English people out here is the Free Trade Policy. The United States or any other country can manufacture articles and can put just enough on their own market to keep the price up and make exorbitant profits. Then they dump the surplus on the English market at a price the English manufacturer could not hope to compete with, so that English money is paid to keep foreign workmen employed, thus keeping English mechanics out of work, and not even able to buy the cheap food. That is why the Examiner does not mention reciprocity to the British-born. So they raise this lame business of Bourassa for our special benefit, but we will prove to the Examiner to-morrow that the British-born cannot be so easily gulled, by piling up a big majority for Mr. Burnham and Protection, thus laying in the dust once and for all this free trade talk, and ensuring at the same time the continuance of the good times now prevailing for the working men, and also our jobs.

From yours truly,

ONE OF THE BRITISH-BORN.

WHO HAS BEEN HELPING TO BOOST STRATTON AND TAFT

Something About the Buncombe Thrower on The Examiner—A Man Employed for Years by an American Publication

The people who have been wading through the slush and buncombe with which the columns of the Stratton organ have been overloaded in this campaign are entitled to some information which will enable them to classify the stuff properly.

The man who was imported to write this stuff and who has been engaged on the tremendous task of making out the best possible case for J. R. S., is H. F. GADSBY, no other than the EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN SECTION OF COLLIER'S MAGAZINE — a man employed in his profession ordinarily by an American publishing concern. This is the man who writes about British ideals and yells to preserve Canada from Bourassa, etc. They say that he used to get $3,000 a year from Collier's. We do not know whether this is flattering Mr. Gadsby or not, but his campaign effusions have been sickening to most people. He it was who threw the buncombe about the swimming hole, about the Goodwin (St. James Church) affair — this holy man who was astonished at such awful political iniquity! Hired by J. R. Stratton and kept there for a month and a half, at what expense?

Who is Stratton who talks about Arthur Hawkes and the British Born? Stratton advocates an American alliance and employs to boost it a man who has been working for an American publishing concern! What do you think of that?

Bourassa is only a herring across the track. Don't forget, Canada cannot afford to have reciprocity at any cost.

MR. KENDRY'S WARNING

To the Editor of the Review

Dear Sir,—I would like to sound a warning note to the electors through your columns on this the last day before the decisive vote is taken on the reciprocity issue. Remember that a vote for Stratton to-morrow is a vote for an agreement which may bring disaster to Canada and British connection. Surely every side issue should be forgotten in the face of this serious state of national affairs. As President Taft says we are indeed at the parting of the ways. Vote against this infamous pact while there is yet time. The Globe says the agreement can be tried for a year. Do not be deluded by such statements. Common sense teaches us how impossible that will be. If Canada is enticed into the web which the American Taft has spread for her she will certainly be seriously, if not hopelessly entangled, and regret will be too late.

I would like to remind my Liberal fellow-citizens that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is an old man, and as he himself says, will not likely run another election. But the work to which he has so unaccountably put his hand must go on to the bitter end. This is inevitable, no matter what the politicians may tell you. Help break the pact by your vote to-morrow, and when this crisis is past is not your vote in your own hands still!

JAMES KENDRY.

PRICES LESS TO THE FARMER AND HIGHER TO CONSUMER

What H. P. Kennedy Says in a Letter to His Father, Dawson Kennedy, From Dakota.

Mr. Dawson Kenedy, father of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, the well known live stock dealer, received yesterday a letter from his son dated Watertown, North Dakota, in which the following paragraph appears:—

"I visited the packing houses here this morning, just to find out how things are done in this country. I find that the packers are paying $1 less for hogs than we do in Toronto, and that they are receiving much higher prices for their product"

H. P. Kennedy was in favor of reciprocity when he left on his trip. He found out some actual conditions on the other side of the line. He did not believe what the reciprocity press tried to shove down the people's throats, but found out the truth.

T'WILL BE LIKE BATTLE OF ALMA

As in 1854 French Will Help to Route Invaders

Crimean Veteran Sergt. Major Martin to Do His Part

The following, which is taken from the Lindsay Warder, incidentally refers to Sergt.-Major Martin, of Lindsay, who is the father of Mrs. William Godfrey, 421 Sheridan street, of this city.

One of the biggest events in the history of the world occurred on Sept. 20, 1854, namely the famous Battle of Alam.

Another big event in the history of Canada will be pulled off just 57 years and one day later, namely the general elections on Sept. 21, 1911.

There are many people who will wonder just what connection the two events have with each other, but note the following:

To go back into history, it was on Sept. 14, 1854, that the allied British, French and Turkish armies, under Marshall St. Arnaud and Lord Raglan crossed the Alma river, a small river and village on the west coast of the of the Crimean peninsula, Russia, and entered Crimea. There they made preparations for the fight with the Russians, and excellent preparations they were, the result being that when the real struggle took place on Sept. 20th, the enemy was routed and the Russian army utterly and hopelessly defeated. The French allied nobly and bravely to the aid of the British and the true sons of the home land fought as never before, a notable victory perched on their banners as a result.

Now to return to the present times. The Laurier administration was hopelessly "up against it," to use a slang expression, and Laurier and his followers were brought to task from day to day by the loyal members of the Opposition. The Liberals were criticed severely for wasteless expenditure and graft in almost every department, for the failure of the Farmers Bank, and finally for the manner in which they endeavored to force through the Free Trade Pact with the United States. Despite the fact that reciprocity mean annexation to the United States and that Canada would as a result be in the hands of the Yankee monopolies and trusts and that Canada would be exploited to the detriment of the country, the Liberals tried to force the agreement through without consulting the people of Canada. The Opposition demanded a halt and the derelict government was forced to come to the people, and like unto the days of old when the British crossed the Alma on Sept. 14th, the nominations for the Dominion elections were held on Sept. 14th; and just as the French rallied to the support of the British on the 20th of September and routed the enemy, so it is confidently expected that they will again rally to the cause of right—the Conservative cause—and rally around the standard of Leader Borden on September 21 and defeat the enemy. At the battle of Alma the Russian foces under Prince Menschikoff were shattered and scatterd, and so it is expected that the Liberal forces under Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be defeated on the 21st of Sept. when it will be demonstrated that the people of Canada want Canada for Canadians and do not believe in any annexation with the Yankees. Laurier is being allowed one extra day for the run, and instead of the battle of ballots being fought on Sept. 20 it will be on Sept. 21.

The French in Quebec will again do as they did fifty-seven years ago, they will rally round Leader Borden's standard and fight for their rights, will break the enemy up and run them out of the country.

It is interesting to note here that there are a number of old veterans of the battle of Alma who will figure in the battle of ballots on Sept. 21st, and they will be found on the right side, the side of the Conservative party, in the fight for Canada. In the number will be our fellow townsman, Sergt. Major Martin, who will do his share in routing the enemy. Canada first, Canada alwys. No annexation with United States but independence for Canadians. Mark your ballot on the 21st for Leader Borden and the Conservative cause, which is the cause of the people in the fight against the Yankee invasion.

SERGT.-MAJOR MARTIN.

LUXURIOUS NEW CARS FOR C.P.R. MONTREAL SERVICE

Another triumph in car building has been achieved by the C.P.R. and it marks a further advance in railroading.

The new compartment observation cars which have just been sent out from the Angus shops are intended for the service between Toronto and Montreal, and as evidence of the growing popularity of the service between the North Toronto station and Montreal, they are attached to the train leaving that station at 10.00 p.m. daily.

These new cars have seven compartments, a drawing room, an observation parlor and an observation platform. The entrance to the rooms is from aisles running along the sides of the cars, ensuring absolute privacy. There are two berths, the lower being made up from two double seats, and there are all toilet requirements in each compartment.

The cars are lighted with electricity, and in the warm weather are kept cool with electric fans.

METHODISTS SAY BETTING IS ON INCREASE IN CANADA

Moral Reformers Discuss the Miller Bill—Pari Mutual System Has Helped Gambling Spirit.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—The General Board of Temperance and Moral Reform of the Methodist Church in session yesterday, considered a great many phases of the social reform movement throughout Canada. Delegates were present from all the provinces and Newfoundland.

The board appealed to the clergy to denounce from the pulpit the various forms of gambling. The inefficiency of the Miller bill was noted. Although the bill should have had an opposite effect, the number of race tracks had greatly increased. The pari-mutual system, it was asserted, had increased betting. The board also observed that the law regarding the dissemination of gambling information was apparently not being enforced to any great extent.

The conditions in Canada regarding the temperance and local option were surveyed and a campaign for improvements resolved on. In Ontario the convention commended the Government for their action and success in the enforcement of the license laws. The extension of the provincial police approved, the board believing that the laws were enforced better from headquarters than locally, where prejudices might enter in action.

The board sweepingly recommended that the license law should be amended so that liquor should not be sold for consumption on the premises where bought, except for medicinal purposes. Another resolution was to the effect that cities of over 25,000 should be empowered to make bylaws regarding the shortening of the hours of selling. The board strongly urged that all the temperance forces of the country unite to secure the complete enforcement of the provincial liquor laws.

The innumerable phases of the great social evil confronting the reformers were discussed at length, and several important changes in the laws were recommended. The board will seek to have the law so amended that all classes of employers may be punished equally if guilty of seducing a girl under 21 years of age. The board will endeavor to have the age of consent raised from 14 to 16 years.

The reports of investigations in several large cities of the States and in Montreal and Winnipeg regarding segregation of houses of ill-fame were read, and the pronouncement after discussion was against segregation. The only remedy that the board could find was a full and constant enforcement of the present laws relating to this evil.

A new executive was appointed, consisting of Drs. Carman, Chown, Moore, Rose, Hazlewood, Williamson, J. W. Aiken, John Garbudd, S. W. Folles, Prof. Bland, Controller Spence, Ald. McCarthy, Dr. Watson, Alex. Mills, Samuel Carter, James J. Mason and John J. Mason.

BIG RALLIES ARE HELD IN HALIFAX

Closing Scenes of a Memorable Campaign.

Halifax, Sept. 21.—The election campaign in Halifax closed last night with two great rival processions. R. L. Borden and A. B. Crosby, the Conservative candidates, were in a big open team and headed by brass bands and torch-bearers, proceeded through the city, spending two hours en route and addressing several meetings. Messrs. MacLean and Blackadar for the Liberals spoke in a hall, and also at street corners. They also had a big torchlight procession.

The Conservatives say they are confident of being able to divide the province equally, or do even better, and the Liberals claim that the followers of R. L. Borden from this province will be less than in the last Parliament, in which they numbered six.

The Conservatives in P.E.I. talk of capturing Queen's County from the Liberals, in addition to holding Queen's, which they had in the last House. The Liberals, on the other hand, say there will be no relative change.

Shot His Daughter's Lover.

London, Eng., Sept. 21.—A man named James Robinson shot himself dead at Winloton, Durham, Tuesday, after firing at a young man who had been keeping company with his daughter against his wishes. The tragedy occurred in the daughter's presence.

Her sweetheart, Thomas Bilclough, was not seriously injured.

The Right Way To Do It.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—A telegram was sent out yesterday to all officers of the C.P.R. and signed by the president, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, to the effect that it is the desire of the company that every employe who can possibly be spared from his duties at any time during the day should be given opportunity to vote, and that no questions be asked as to his politics.

U. S. Customs Lost $500,000.

New York, Sept. 21.—Sigmund L. Fleischer, a member of the dry goods importing firm of Naday and Fleischer, on Fifth avenue, was arrested by a United States marshal yesterday on charges of being concerned in a conspiracy to defraud the Government out of customs duties amounting to $500,000.

Couldn't Get Away.

Queenstown, Sept. 21.—The White Star liner Cymric sailed from Queenstown yesterday, leaving behind 150 passengers, who, owing to the strike on the Irish railways, were unable to reach port in time to catch the vessel.

CARBOLIC ACID ENDED HER LIFE

London Young Woman Found Dead on Lawn

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 21.—The body of Nellie O'Kane, aged tywnty-three years, and whose home is in London, Ont., was found on a lawn on East avenue this morning. She had taken carbolic acid.

IRELAND MAY HAVE A BIG RAILWAY TIE-UP AFTER ALL

Small Strike Promises to Develop Into Something Big.

Dublin, Sept. 21.—Manager Dent of the Great Southern Railway, in an interview, complains that the Dublin Castle authorities have undertaken only to protect the property and traffic of the company, but have said nothing about safeguarding the lives of the men who are willing to work.

Without more definite assurance for the men, he says, the company would be afraid to undertake the risk of running the trains. He declares that it is imperative to have more military protection.

The strike, by which the south and west of the island are already practically isolated, last night took on a new aspect, which is arousing the most serious apprehension.

The members of the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, which declared the recent strike on the English roads, have gone to Dublin, and Tuesday night issued a threat of a national Irish strike.

Seeing that the genesis of the Irish railway strike was the fact that two porter refused to handle timber consigned to a firm whose men were "out," and that in practically all respects the present developments are what is known as a "sympathetic strike," the public is confronted with the threat of a national railway strike for which no direct grievance is put forward by the railway employes. The managers of the Irish railways refuse to have any dealings with the executive committee of the union. The principal railways refuse absolutely to comply with the demand of the men that they should pick and choose among their customers. They say they are common carriers and are bound by law to forward all goods properly consigned to them; they have no business with quarrels between third parties.

Ate Sulphur Matches.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Gaston Jacobs of 1,645 East Ontario street died yesterday in the Royal Victoria Hospital despite the efforts of the staff. The woman, who was 25 years old, had eaten the heads of a number of sulphur matches which she had got into the habit of chewing, and the diet resulted in her death from poisoning.

Body Carried 18 Miles.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 21.—Herman Regenhardt, after being struck and killed by a New York Central train, was carried a distance of 18 miles before his body was discovered on the fender of the engine. He had been in this country only a year and was an expert linguist.

SIX PEOPLE ARE MURDERED

Their Heads Were Battered and Cut Open.

Colorado Springs, Sept. 21.—With their heads battered and cut open six persons were found murdered here yesterday in adjoining houses. The dead: Mrs. Alice May Burnham, her six-year-old daughter and three-year-old son; Henry Wayne, Blanche Wayne; the one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne.

A. J. Burnham, who is a cook at a sanitarium, was immediately sought by the police, although there was nothing to connect him with the crime. He was found at the sanitarium and brought to the city. He stoutly denies any knowledge of the killings.

It is rumored that an arrest has been made in the Burnham murder case and that the man in custody has confessed his guilt. However, the sheriff's office refuses either to affirm or deny the report or give out the name of the man.

SIR ROBERT HART IS DEAD; BIG MAN IN CHINESE AFFAIRS

He Had Long Record of Service in the Celestial Country — Behind the Fiscal System.

London, Sept. 21.—Sir Robert Hart, director-general of customs in China from 1901 to 1908, and inspector-general since 1863, died yesterday. Sir Robert had been living in England since his retirement from the Chinese service on account of ill-health.

Sir Robert Hart, who was an Irishman by birth, had been in the Chinese maritime customs service since 1859. He was born in 1835.

The office of director-general of Chinese customs—inland as well as maritime—was bestowed upon him, together with other high honors exceptional in the case of a foreigner, as a reward for services rendered the Chinese Government in connection with the international settlement of the Boxer troubles.

Sir Robert Hart was the most potent link between China and the wester nworld. He created its customs service; he gave China a comprehensive tariff, and was behind practically every commercial treaty that China made prior to 1908, when he returned to England on account of ill-health. Soon after his return, he retired from the Chinese service.

He was secretary to the commission of the allies, which met in Canton in 1858. He entered the Chinese customs service as deputy commissioner next year. After being advanced to the post of inspector-general of customs in 1863, he reorganized the service on modern lines. Chinese and Malay pirates at the time made Chinese waters unsafe to commerce.

Hart equipped a large fleet of steamers to hunt the pirates down. He established lighthouses, and later, a postal servicee. In recognition of his innumerable services, he received the greatest honor in the gift of the Chinese Government.

MOTHER AND SON FOUND DEAD

Gas Turned on in Queen Street Home, Toronto

Special to the Review

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Strong evidence of suicide was found this morning at the home of Mrs. George C. Egley, Queen street west, when her body and that of her one-year-old son were discovered in their bed. The gas had been fully turned on.

Easier to Talk It Over.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—Several bankers stated on the Bourse yesterday that they had been informed by the Foreign Office that the Moroccan question would be settled in two or three days.

The adoption of the verbal method of negotiations, it is thought, will facilitate a settlement, as one of the chief impediments heretofore has been the reluctance of either side to abandon points once formally proposed in writing, lest such action be construed as a sign of weakness.

C.N.R. Lake Boats.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—It was stated yesterday by Guy Toombs, general passenger agent of the Canadian Northern Steamship & Railway Co., that by the spring of 1913 the Canadian Northern would be operating its own line of passenger, freight and ore steamers from Duluth or Port Arthur to a port on the Georgian Bay Canal route not yet decided upon.

Found Dead In Ditch.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 21.—Patrick Farmer, a former employe of the Ontario Power Co., was found in a ditch on Fourth street yesterday morning, with a broken neck.

It is not known how he came to be there, but it is thought that he fell into the ditch while returning home intoxicated. He has a sister in Prince Edward Island.

MANY ARRESTS MADE IN SPAIN

Political Unrest Shows Itself in Public.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—Soldiers are doing police duty to-day. Arrests were made during Tuesday night in several provincial cities. At Barcelona, 158 persons were apprehended, and many were taken into custody at Bilbao, Seville, Valencia, and Saragossa. Despatches from these places say they are quiet to-day.

There have been some disorders in small industrial centres. The revolutionaries apparently are still in possession of Jativa, toward which troops are marching from Valencia. At Jativa and Carcagente, rioters set fire to the public buildings and tore up the railway tracks. There has been trouble in Amurrio.

At Gijon the workingmen's committee outwitted the military, and meeting secretly Tuesday night, planned a general strike. They sent agents to all workshops and factories early in the morning and the strike has become general. The garrison here is small.

LAURIER TO BE IN QUEBEC

Premier Will Hear His Fate in Old City.

Quebec, Sept. 21.—After his strenuous campaign Sir Wilfrid is a guest at the Chateau Frontenac, where he will, as usual, receive the election returns to-night. The Liberal leader held two meetings in the Quebec district yesterday, and last evening he took a walk on the Terrace, where under the bright lights of Quebec's promenade he was afforded the first absolute relief from his labors of many weeks past.

Sir Wilfrid had another very hard day yesterday, when he addressed two meetings. The first was at Ste. Anne, where George Parent is the candidate against Rodolphe Forget. Later he spoke at Beauport in the interests of J. B. Caouette, who is being opposed by Hon. J. P. Pellttier. Both meetings were largely attended, and the Prime Minister spoke in the usual strain of his recent speeches.

Although Hon. L. P. Pelletier had expressed his willingness to meet Sir Wilfrid wih Armand Lavergne or Henri Bourassa, the offer was not accepted, and Sir Wilfrid had the field to himself. He was accompanied by Dr. Beland, Postmaster-General, and other speakers.

London's Water Supply.

London, Ont., Sept. 21.—London's water supply has been greatly overestimated for years. Recent meterings of the Springbank supply show that instead of the five and six millions a day that were supposed to be pumped from the springs, little more than three million gallons has been the volume. The auxiliary system of the Horton street wells reach a daily capacity of between four and six millions.

Spanish Cruiser Ashore.

Melilla, Morocco, Sept. 21.—The Spanish protected cruiser Cataluna went ashore yesterday at Azanen, west of Cape Tres-Forcas.

Woman Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—"You told me to take it and finish myself, so I have done so.—Louise."

Writing this note Mrs. Louise Morgan, who roomed at 301 Parliament street, took carbolic acid yesterday afternoon and died a short time later. Dr. Coatsworth was called in, when the body was found, but life was extinct.

Inquest Was Adjourned.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—After viewing the body last night at the city morgue, Dr. J. J. Thompson's jury on the inquest of Walter A. Woodhouse, an Englishman found dead on Sunday in the waters of the bay, adjourned until Friday evening at 8.15, for further evidence and the report of the autopsy.

BIG LINER IS IN COLLISION

White Star Liner Olympic is Rammed.

Protected Cruiser Hawke is Also Badly Damaged.

Southampton, Eng., Sept. 21.—The great steamship Olympic of the White Star Line, which left Southampton shortly before noon yesterday with a large crowd of returning American tourists, lies off Calshot Castle, at the entrance to Southampton Water, today with a gaping hole in her side as the result of a collision with the British protected cruiser Hawke. Fortunately no lives were lost, and of the 3,000 or more passengers and crews of the vessels no one was injured.

The accident occurred a few miles from the spot where the American liner St. Paul and the British cruiser Gladiator collided nearly four years ago, and as in the previous case the warship came off second best, so far as can be ascertained. The extent of the damage to the liner, however, cannot be decided until she is docked and an examination is made of the rent which the cruiser's ram cut in her side.

The warship, moving at great speed, was following the liner out of the harbor, but apparently was quite clear of her. Suddenly she swerved in, and before the passengers could realise what was happening the cruiser struck the liner in the starboard quarter near the stern, tearing through a section about forty feet in extent. The miracle is that the Olympic was not sunk, as the Hawke is fitted with a ram especially designed to sink a vessel in spite of its watertight compartments. The liner' frame stood the shock well, and the waterdoors, which automatically closed, held the compartments hermetically sealed.

So far as can be learned the Hawke suffered more severely. Curiously enough twelve feet of her upper deck was twisted out of all recognition. The stem appears to be completely gone. The plating was ripped open, exposing the forward torpedo tube, and the fore compartment filled with water. Both ships' crews acted with coolness, and even among the passengers there was no panic.

Drowning at Cornwall.

Cornwall, Sept. 21.—A young man named E. Gouin, employed as cook on the freighter Hebron, plying between Montreal and Cornwall, was drowned here yesterday afternoon by falling off the railing of the boat into the canal. Gouin joined the crew at Montreal last Friday, and little is known of him by the other members of the crew. He was about 25 years of age, and his mother lives in Montreal. The body was recovered.

MONTH TO REPAIR OLYMPIC DAMAGE

Big Boat is Being Unloaded at Southampton

Special to the Review

Southampton, Sept. 21.—After being towed to the dock here today the stevedores immediately started to unload the cargo and remove the baggage from the White Star liner Olympic, which was in collision yesterday with the Hawke. The big ship will be taken to Belfast for repairs which will take a month to complete. Her captain blames the commodore of the warship for the collision.

Labor Leads Sentenced.

Sydney, N.S.W., Sept. 21.—One hundred and eight persons, who took part in the riots here in August, were fined from $5 to $20 each. The secretary of the Federated Iron Workers was sentenced to two months at hard labor for aiding the disturbance.

Harvester Trust May Re-adjust.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 21.—That the Government is ready to permit the International Harvester Co. voluntarily to re-adjust its organization to conform to recent interpretations of the Sherman law became known here yesterday.

POLLING BIG VOTE

Indications From All Parts Point This Way

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Rain is falling to-day in the Lake Superior district, but there is no rain elsewhere in the Dominion, although the clouds in some places are threatening. The weather is cooler in the west and from all points come indications of an exceptionally heavy vote being polled.

DON'T KNOW WHETHER HE IS A SON, OR JUST FAKING

Charged With Murder.

Coatsville, Pa., Sept. 21.—The most important development in the recent negro lynching case came yesterday, when warrants charging two members of the mob with murder and two policemen with involuntary manslaughter were issued by Judge Butler upon the recommendation of the special grand jury. The jurors were discharged. They had been in session for three weeks, and it had been charged that they were reluctant to take action.

The men indicted are: Richard S. Tucker, insurance agent, who was the first man to enter the hospital on Sunday night, August 13, when Zack Walter was dragged by a mob from his bed and burned to death; Walter Mark Wood, millhand, who, it is claimed, took only an abscure part in the lynching; Policeman Stanley E. Howe, who was on guard on the hospital, and did not exert himself to prevent the crime; and Chief of Police C. E. Umstead, who, it is claimed, failed to do his duty to prevent the lynching.

STATION AND BUILDINGS LOST

Pioneer Steamboat "Clermont" Escaped Being Burned in Fire

Special to the Review.

Poughkeepsie, Sept. 21.—The Albany day lines pier station and half a dozen buildings together with hundreds of Vassar girls' bunks were burned early to-day. Fulton's pioneer steamboat "Clermont," was saved by being towed out into the river.

Old Acquaintances Differ About the Identity of a Man in Michigan.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 21.—Stepping back from the proffered embrace of the man who claims to be her son, Mrs. Estella Kimmel yesterday faced him for the first time since a dramatic meeting in the prison at Auburn, N.Y., four years ago.

"Why, mother, don't you know me?" exclaimed he who claims to be George Alfred Kimmel, as the woman entered the home of a cousin where the man of mystery has been acknowledged as a relative. With the words, he stepped forward with arms extended, but the woman recoiled and responded sharply: "I'm not so sure about that."

Then she subjected "Kimmel" to a cross-examination that went into details of her son's early life and school days in Niles. She asked him also why, if he was her son, he had not written to her during the many years he was away from his birthplace.

Mrs. Kimmel is not ready to deny flatly that the man is her son, neither will she admit that his claims are just. Former acquaintances of the woman's son are divided as to the identity of the man. Some asserted that he has readily recalled happenings of boyhood, but others declared yesterday that he was an impersonator.

"Kimmel," who says he disappeared thirteen years ago, and now returns after $5,000 life insurance had been paid Mrs. Kimmel for his death, said he had no motive for returning other than love for his mother. "I do not want to cheat any one out of the $25,000 more life insurance which my relatives would receive if they could prove I m dead," said Kimmel, "but I am not dead."

A RETROSPECT

Well, it's all over but the shouting. By the time that this reaches the eye of the reader around the city, there will remain but the counting of the ballots, and the announcing of the returns. To use a slang phrase, it has been some election.

Anyone who knows Mr. Stratton knows that he leaves no stone, be it a boulder or a pebble, unturned to get in again, and on the other hand there have been what have all along seemed to be, unmistakeable evidences of a general revolt against the domination that Mr Stratton has been accustomed to exercise in Peterborough. At this writing, polling is in progress and the outcome is good or bad, according to which side you are on.

Dropping the strenuous air that is the accompaniment of a hard political struggle, isn't it funny that men should fight so hard, and get so angry, and abuse each other so much once every three or four or five years, while the rest of the time they can along very well together as citizens. And while in this election there are issues along patriotic lines that have called for considerable attention, and more warmth than is usual, it is perhaps as well for the people at large that the mud-slinging and the muck-raking are over. Our illustrious contemporary, the Examiner, made some awful exhibitions of itself during the campaign—honestly it did, without any prejudice or any feeling in the matter at the least. Perhaps our opinion may be somewhat biased, but some of its mistakes would not have been excusable in even a journalistic beginner. The importation of a high-priced press-gallery man like H. G. Gadsby, editor of the Canadian section of Collier's Magazine, does not do the good that one might at first sight suppose. In the first place, any outsider is a stranger to the political temper and feeling of the community. He does not realize the weak spots, the danger zones, the best methods of attack. His lack of local color is a serious handicap, and though his general knowledge of politics may be good, the imported man is not, as a general rule as good as the home-brew. This stands good, whether Mr. Stratton or Mr. Burnham is elected to-day. We venture to say that if the conduct of the Examiner's campaign had been left exclusively in the hands of the regular staff, and of its editor, who is a political writer of unusual attainment, the Examiner—we were almost tempted to call it the Stratton organ—would have come through with greater eclat.

But of course, these matters are subject to opinion. The Review has tried to get up a good, hard campaign, and believes that it has been successful. By some of its friends the enemy, it has been accused of being slanderous and rather dirty in some of its methods. But the Review has not hit below the belt at all. The public record, the character and proclivities of an opponent are just marks for campaign criticism, and Mr. Stratton as an old campaigner knows that there were many avenues of attack which lay open. We do not need to refer to the Examiner's ways in a campaign—they are known to all men, at least around Peterborough, and while some of our friends have been kind enough to say that the Examiner did not get away with anything on the Review in this campaign, it is certainly clear to those who have read both papers that the Review did not make the personal attacks, the mean pin-pricking jibes to which Mr Burnham was subject. We do not think that such tactics gain anything either for a cause, or its exponent. In fact extremes usually are more of a boomerang than a help. It was certainly rather surprising to find the Examiner with old, experienced political heads watching over its campaign, making such breaks as it did—some of them almost making it the laughing stock of the town.

However, it is all over and whether to-night Stratton or Burnham wins, or whether Laurier or Borden is sustained, let us settle back into our usual work with the endeavor to be as good citizens as possible, all working together for the advancement of Peterborough and the progress of its business.

ECONOMY OF ENERGY

Sir William Ramsay's presidential address to the British Association, noticed briefly by cable a few days ago, contained much that is interesting from a general as well as a scientific standpoint. It is indeed a happy faculty of each succeeding head of the famous society, now in its eighty-first year, that he can, in discussing in this address some aspect of modern science before the leading scientific men of this country, express his views in language within the easy understanding of the average man, says the Montreal Gazette. While he roamed over half a dozen subjects, Sir William Ramsay devoted the larger part of his address to a discussion of the conservation of natural energy and a speculation as to the possibility whether if elements are capable of disintegration the world may not have at its disposal a hitherto unsuspected source of energy. He traced step by step the progress of investigation into radio activity, pointing out that if radium were to evolve its stored up energy at the same rate that guncotton does, we should have an undreamt of explosive, could we control the rate we should have a useful and potent source of energy provided always that a sufficient supply of radium were forthcoming. If the energy in a ton of radium could be utilized in thirty years instead of being evolved at its invariable slow rate of 1,760 years for half disintegration, it would suffice to propel a ship of 15,000 tons, with engines of 15,000 horse-power, at the rate of 15 knots an hour for 30 years—a work which actually requires a million and a half tons of coal. Unfortunately the supply of radium is very limited; in Sir William Ramsay's opinion it will never surpass half an ounce a year. If, however, he adds, the elements which we have been used to consider as permanent are capable of changing with evolution of energy (as has been demonstrated in the case of radium); if some form of catalysis could be discovered which would usefully increase their almost inconceivably slow rate of change, then it is not too much to say, that the whole future of our race could be altered. The field for future discoveries is unlimited. Back of the present workers is the remarkable record of the past to inspire them. The whole progress of the human race, asserted the president, has been due to individual members discovering means of concentrating energy, and of transforming one form into another. At present there is in the world only a limited one, namely the coalfields. What this stored-up energy means to Britain he illustrated graphically. The Commonwealth of Athens attained a high water mark in literature, and thought which has never been surpassed, because a large proportion of its people had ample leisure, due to ample means. Each Athenian freeman had on an average five slaves to do his bidding and save him from manual labor. Yet the average British householder was much better off to-day. The fifty million tons of coal consumed annually in British factories works out to seven million horsepower or 175 million man-power. Taking a family as consisting on the average of five persons, there would be nine million families in the British Isles, and each of these has accordingly the equal of nearly twenty slaves doing his bidding.

But how long is this wonderful work-producer to be available for the British family? Sir William points out that since 1870, when 110 million tons of coal were mined in Great Britain, the amount has been increased by three and a half million tons a year. If the rate of working increases as it is doing, British coal will be exhausted in 175 years. Between 1905 and 1907 the amount raised in the United Kingdom was equal to six tons per head of population, as compared with three and a half tons in Belgium, two and a half tons in Germany and one ton in France. The British commercial supremacy and her power to compete with other European nations are governed largely by the relative price of coal; what can follow but famine and misery when the price rises with the approaching exhaustion of supplies? Sir William discusses several possibilities. Briefly he places his hope on the concentration of the stored up energy now available in the form of electric current, distributed directly from the pit-mouth, using as an intermediary turbines or preferably gas engines. An invention that would permit the energy of coal to be converted directly into electrical energy would revolutionize present ideas and methods, but it is not unthinkable. The stored gas battery already shows some advance in that direction. But whatever final form the solution of the problem will take, Sir William Ramsay believes that it demands the combined efforts of legislators and experts for a generation and that there is need at once of a permanent, non-political commission to study how the wasteful expenditure of energy-supplies may be checked and a policy of conservation initiated. On its success must rest the future of Britain's commercial prosperity.

EDITORIAL NOTES

With deepest apologies: (Vote against Stratton.)

Wanted—a few gallons of soothing syrup. Apply at the Examiner office, at seven o'clock and later.

Watch for the stereopticon show in front of the Review office. Better than moving pictures ever knew how to be.

Late advices indicate the landslide in motion all over the country. We will tell you which way after to-night.

The Gadsby campaign on the Examiner was a great exhibition of how to use the King's English not to convince anyone.

By the way, why do not some people take a walk along the river to see the old swimming holes that are so much famed? 'Twould sure be a sight worth seeing.

Perhaps Mr. Stratton will take to the old swimming holes for cover when the returns come in; get back where he started from.

This is the day when the hard-worked newspaper men sit around and smoke fat cigars, and watch the poor fellows work—the electioneers getting out the vote.

If we were to slip into the columns of the paper VOTE FOR BURNHAM, some of these days, please remember that we have had a campaign, and are entitled to at least a little temporary aberration.

There will be a lot of slides to-night, lantern slides, and slides home by the disappointed ones. There will be a great bunch of Kellies around the city and throughout the country.

We do not know whether this is true or not, but at any rate it is reported that Senator Cox told Mr. Stratton that he would come back once too often. From the indications in this election, J. R. may have "gone and done it" this time.

At the beginning of the campaign some friends of the Review wanted what they were pleased to term a dignified campaign. But the Review preferred what might be termed a vigorous campaign all the way along. We think that the results have shown the wisdom of this course.

Watch the Review election bulletins to-night. Special slides of the principal political leaders of Canada have been secured, and special slides illustrating many Rocky Mountain and other western scenes. In addition, there will be some quips and local hits put on in between waits for returns. It will be a great night, whether Conservatives win or lose. It is so probable that they will be able to make great inroads on the Liberal strongholds, so possible that Laurier will be defeated, that the bulletins will be watched with a fever of anxiety.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Doubt about the success of reciprocity rallied the wheat market to-day after a decline due to free movement of the grain from the harvest fields of Germany and France. Closing figures were steady at a shade lower to 1-8c higher than last night. Latest trading left corn 1-8c off to 1-4c up, oats 1-16c to 1-4c increased in cost, and hog products varying from unaltered to an advance of a nickel.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d lower than yesterday on wheat and ¼d lower on corn. Berlin closed ⅝c to 1⅛c higher on wheat. Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—There continues to be a good inquiry from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat and in some cases the prices bid were 4½d higher, but even at this advance no business could be done. There was some demand for American corn and sales of car lots of No. 2 yellow were made at 74c per bushel, ex-store. The tone of the market for oats was stronger and prices advanced ½c per bushel with a good local and outside demand. A firm feeling prevailed in the flour market to-day under a good steady demand for local account. Bran and shorts are in good demand and scarce. A good business is passing in cheese at firm prices and butter is quiet. The demand for provisions is fairly good.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings were 800 cattle, 1100 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 200 calves.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle and prices declined 15c to 25c per cwt., owing to the fact that the demand was very limited, as the butchers' requirements were small and they were not disposed to operate for future wants. It was reported that fully 600 head more Canadian northwest ranch cattle were near at hand for the market on Monday, and this, coupled with the very slow demand from packers, tended to depress the market, and the trade on the whole was dull, even at the above reduction in prices.

Choice Ontario steers sold at $5.75 to $5.85; good, at $5.50 to $5.65; fairly good, at $5.25 to $5.40; fair, at $4.75 to $5; and common, at $4.25 to $4.50; choice northwest steers sold at $5.50 to $5.65, and mixed carloads, at $5.40 per cwt. A few heavy bulls brought $3.25 to $4; light, at $2.50 to $3; choice cows, at $4.60 to $4.75; good, at $4.25 to $4.50, and the lower grades at $2.25 to $4 per cwt.

The trade in sheep and lambs was slow and the market was quiet with no change in prices to note. Lambs sold at $5.50 to $5.75, and sheep, at $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt.

A fairly good trade was done in hogs and prices were steady at the recent decline with sales of selected lots at $7 to $7.25, and heavy fats, at $6 to $6.25 per cwt., off cars. Calves sold at from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the offerings of live stock were 850 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 100 calves. The demand for hogs was good and the tone of the market was steady at the recent decline in prices, with sales of selected lots at $7 to $7.25 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

Before Wiggin or the rest of them realized what she was about to do, she lifted her whip, and brought it down across his upturned face. He leaped back, a weal blossoming across his pale cheek from eye to eye. Then, she whirled her horse, and galloped away, men tumbling out of her course.

"By the jumped-up beeswax, old Corn Corran didn't take all his grit to tophet with him," declared a voice in the crowd.

George drove himself forward toward Wiggin, elbowing men to right and left. He was no longer in the mood of one lacking subject for quarrel. His fingers itched to get at the adversary who had brought him into such shameful situation. He was not thinking about the blow whose badge he wore on his face. Even in the whirl of his thoughts, he realized that he had now become the champion of the girl who had been insulted, and who had been forced to be her own protector.

Jepson Wiggin saw him coming, and flung himself on his son, pushing him farther into the crowd.

"Keep him off! Keep him off!" cried the father. "Hold 'em apart. There mustn't be trouble here. It will disgrace us to have trouble."

"That cur has got an account to settle with me," raged Harry, struggling with the men who seized him. The commands of the magnate of the village had summoned volunteers.

"I'm sure there must be a misunderstanding, Mr. George — do I get the name right — Mr. George, I believe? Of the Great Trust Co.?" He was nervous. He was apologetic. And, underneath the eagerness of his appeal as mediator, there was something that stirred the wonder of the young man, excited as he was. It was as though Wiggin were trying to convey a hint to him; trying to signify that there was a mutual understanding.

"I shall see you again as soon as possible," the old man went on. "We can arrange the matter. I'm sure we can." Again, he spoke with significance. He reached down, and took George's hand and shook it. Then he turned away. His son had begun to cry threats and further insults.

"I have just this much to say to you, sir," said George. The hot blood of his youth rose in him. He wanted to declare himself before them all.

He took one step toward young Wiggin, and wagged a monitory forefinger. "The trouble between us will be squared when the time comes. But you keep the woman out of it, you yapping hound!"

He forced his way through the crowd, got a pitcher of cool water in the tavern washroom, and went to his room. He had got a look at his face in a mirror in the office. He suddenly realized that he was not a pleasant object for the eye to rest upon.

VI.

By what he saw from his window and what he heard after night fell George decided that the "funeral parade" was far from closing the obsequies of Cornelius Corran. That part of the programme had merely started the event off in good shape.

In the evening, there were fireworks. The bands played with a drunken persistency and a lack of harmony that nearly drove the young man frantic. Revel roared in the single street. Hoarse mirth was broken in upon by the howls of fighters. It was plain that a wild night was to be devoted to the memory of the lord of Toban.

George drew down the ragged shade of his one window. He tried to occupy his mind with a cheap novel that he had picked up in the office on his way back to his room from supper.

A discreet tap on his door startled him. He opened to the visitor, thinking Romeo Bragg had come to consult about a start in the morning.

Jepson Wiggin stepped in, and closed the door behind him.

"I watched my chance to come up," he said. "I'm sure no one saw me. It's a busy gang of ruffians out there, Mr. George."

The young man accounted for this air of mystery by the ready supposition that the father of Blinn Wiggin would not like to be seen in company with his son's sworn foe.

The gaunt old man eased himself upon a chair, scrutinizing his host keenly.

"I'm sorry you got mixed up with my son in that way. But you came to town at a bad time. Too much liquor all around! Blinn wouldn't have done it if he'd been sober. But I know you won't blame me! It's a matter entirely outside of business, eh, Mr. George? A young fool's performance mustn't get in the way of more serious things. Eh?"

His shrewd eyes were boring the young man. He acted like one who was treading carefully up to the door of a subject, waiting to be assured that he might enter.

"I'll not let your son interfere with my business, you can be certain of that! You advise him to keep away from me."

"I'm done with him," protested the old man. "It's just as though he wasn't my son at all! I haven't been able to do anything with him. He had his chance, and he's fooled it away! You've got eyes, and you've got ears! If any one, after this, tells you that I'm playing to arrange the thing through any hitch-up between Blinn and the girl, you're in a position to know better, eh? I've got that much reason for being glad that the thing did happen, bad as it was. But they can't fool you, after this — you saw enough to know that's all off. He had his chance. He fooled it away, I say!"

George stared at him, understanding only a part.

"So you see we can do business. I haven't got any interests anywhere else."

He sat and looked at the young man for several minutes; he seemed to be waiting for him to speak.

"You're not suspicious of me, after what you saw, are you?" inquired Wiggin. "You can see my interests don't lie that way, now!"

It was on George's tongue to declare that he had not the least idea what all this meant, but he suddenly decided to meet craft with craft. He had discovered that ingenuousness did not work well in this north country. Every man's hand seemed raised against him. He resolved that he would take a hand in the game of guile himself, for self-protection, if for nothing else.

"You know what people I represent, Mr. Wiggin," he returned. "You probably know why I'm up here. You've got the advantage of me in that. You've got to talk a little plainer."

"I knew a man was coming," said Wiggin. "Of course, I knew it couldn't be same one that made the other trade. He's marked in this section! But I've looked for some line from the big folks — a little something from you, in the way of credentials."

"My folks do not put things on paper — when those things can be arranged by word of mouth," declared George, hating himself for this deception, but firmly resolved to uncover any more plots against himself if he were able.

"An excellent plan," affirmed Wiggin, "even if it does put other parties in the way of guessing a bit." He fondled his long nose, and studied the face of the Great Trust Co.'s man. "You received some instructions, I suppose?"

"I did."

"I don't like to beat about the bush," said the old man. "I know your folks understand how I stood with Corran. And, of course, you know. I have been his right-hand man ever since he started in business — he couldn't read or write, as you've heard."

George did not betray by a flicker of the eyelids, even, that the information was new.

"I'm going to tell you very frankly that I've hoped that my son would get the girl," continued Wiggin. "There's no chance of that. I've helped Corran steal half the lands he owned. I'll say this — if he hadn't stolen them, some one else would have done it. That' the style up here. He could have made a fair division with me and still left the girl enough. But that will — I drew it myself for him — left me just where I've always been — his agent. I'm sole trustee, too Now, just what kind of a proposition have your folks sent to me? The other man said the proposition would come along just as soon as Corran dropped out."

"Our folks would like to know just what you can do," stated the young man. He felt no sense of guilt, now, in leading this plotter on. Clare Corran's interests were threatened. He hardly knew the girl. But never had the desolate condition of any one so appealed to his chivalry. She was alone in the midst of them.

Outside his window, the uproar of the drunken mob celebrated the memory of her father. But that kind of disorganized loyalty, ignorant support, could not prevent the subtle plans of schemers. Common sense suggested that it was none of his business. But there was something pitifully pathetic in it all.

He shut his eyes, hiding his own from the boring regard of Wiggin. Her brave face came before his inner vision — he saw her again riding past — and he believed he knew her well enough to understand in what agony of spirit she had obeyed. Sudden determination took possession of him. It was quixotic resolution. He loved Mary Laroche. That was a sentiment that made him tender toward the helpless in the world.

He opened his eyes. Wiggin was surveying him anxiously, almost suspiciously.

"I don't propose to turn myself wrongside out before a stranger — I've gone far enough as it is," insisted the Corran trustee. "Say something, yourself."

"Are you in a position to turn over anything worth while to the Great Trust Co.?"

"If you think I've had the handling of all the papers of old Corran without getting ready for just such an emergency as this, you've got another guess coming."

"Here's my credentials," said George, producing papers. "I'm an accredited agent of the company. But, of course, you understand that I can't settle matters with you. I can only hear and report. The fellows higher up arrange the price — it's their money."

"That's all right. I expected that. I'll say this, now: I've left deeds open so that when the time comes, claimants who haven't signed off their rights in certain tracts can be produced. Those claimants will never come forward to contest the Corran claims until the proper work is put into the matter. They don't know anything about their claims. You see, don't you? You've got to have me in the thing to make it go. I know the claimants — I know how to produce claimants."

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Midgic Station, N. B.—One can hardly believe this as it is not natural, but it was my case. For ten months I suffered from suppression, I had different doctors, tried different medicines, but none helped me. My friends told me I would go into a decline. One day a lady friend told me what your medicine had done for her, so I wrote you for advice and received your reply with pleasure.

I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at the second bottle showed improvement. Now I am regular and never was so well in my life, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine.

Please publish my letter for the benefit of others.—Mrs. Josiah W. Hicks, Midgic Station, N. B.

Indian Head, Sask.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is indeed a boon to women who suffer from female ills. My health is better now than it has been in my five years of married life and I thank you for the good your advice and medicine have done me. I had spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without receiving any benefit.—Mrs. Frank Cooper, Box 448, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HEADS THE LIST

The winner of the Prince of Wales Scholarship in the recent matriculation examination is George Gordon Galloway, son of Mr. W. O. Galloway, of the Department of Agriculture, Toronto. He is only seventeen years old and a pupil of the Harbord Collegiate Institute, Toronto. His sister, Eva, recently was the winner of a piano firm's contest. The Prince of Wales Scholarship is $50, and the winner also gets the Edward Blake Scholarship prize of $60. This makes $110 in cash that the young man will get, as well as his four years' tuition.

A VENERABLE CHURCH

St. Andrew's, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Celebrated its 117th Birthday

St. Andrew's Church, Niagara-on-the-Lake, has celebrated its one hundred and seventeenth birthday. Among the historic landmarks of Niagara St. Andrew's stands pre-eminent. The old record book of the church, dated September 30, 1790, contains the following quaint entry: "A number of people met this day and resolved that as religion is the foundation of all societies, and which cannot be strictly adhered to without having a place of worship dedicated solely to Divine purposes, that a Presbyterian church be immediately set on foot in the town of Newark as well as for the support of a clergyman of the same persuasion." What was known as the original building was finished during the next two or three years. During the war of 1812 this building was burned to the ground and until 1831, when the present church was built, services were held in the schoolhouse. In 1894 the centenary of the church was observed, which was described by Toronto papers as a national event. Sir Oliver gave his reminiscences, his brother, Dr. Mowat, preached from the old-fashioned high pulpit; Hon. John Beverly Robinson also spoke. The history of old St. Andrew's, as written by the well-known historian, Janet Carnochan, to this day a faithful member of the church, gives a splendid account of the many trials and vicissitudes through which the church has passed.

GERM-LADEN FRUIT

Montreal Seeks to Prohibit Exposed Fruit in Front of Stores

Dr. Louis Laberge, the chief medical health officer, Montreal, is working on a by-law to prohibit showing of food exposed in front of stores, and to prohibit the sweeping out of grocery stores without sprinkling the floors. He points out that dry sweeping a shop stirs up clouds of dust, which just teem with microbes. Fruit exposed in a shop for one day will show when washed 575,000 germs per tenth of an inch of water, on a second washing 21,000 germs, and on a third 7,000. This statement is the result of actual experiment. A single grape, washed in water after being exposed in the dust, left in the water 3,200,000 microbes per tenth of an inch of water.

"DOLLY VARDEN" IS DEAD

Famous Fat Woman Passes Away, Aged 61

Mrs. Letta Campbell, a negress, famous at one time as the fattest woman in the world, died at the home of J. B. Richards, Toronto. Mrs. Campbell was 61 years of age, and had been ailing for about four months. She was known in the circus world as "Dolly Varden," and travelled in many lands. At that time she weighed over 700 pounds, but recently declined to 400. Thirty years ago she was with the original Tom Thumb, and exhibited herself up to four years ago, when she sat knitting in a Yonge Street window as an advertisement during the Exhibition. Filled with a foreboding that her days on this earth were rapidly drawing to an end, Mrs. Campbell had her business affairs settled and her funeral arrangements made five months before her death.

ANOTHER SPLENDID SUCCESS FOR THE LAKEFIELD FAIR

Ideal Weather Brought Out Crowd of Three Thousand People—Good Horse Races

The annual exhibition held at Lakefield Agricultural Society, which opened on Thursday morning, ended last evening and the results so far as learned were a source of complete satisfaction and encouragement to the management committee and to the hosts of farmers, villagers and others who attended this popular county fair. Lakefield fairs have established an enviable reputation for thoroughness of management and splendid programs of attraction, and this year's fair only tended to add more praise to their already coveted reputation.

3,000 PEOPLE

The fair got away with a most encouraging start on Tuesday, the attendance being remarkably good for a first day. The people continued to arrive and in a very short passage of time the spacious grounds echoed with the usual fair time sounds, and the jolly crowds proceeded to take in all the sights and patronize the numerous attractions. Yesterday the crowds were larger than ever and in the afternoon at two o'clock, the attendance reached its climax. It was estimated on good authority that three thousand people were on the grounds altogether and the gate receipts were considerably in excess of previous years. Many from Peterborough drove up or went by train, while the other county towns and villages each contributed to swell the patronage.

LIKES THE MUSIC

The 57th regimental band arrived on the grounds early in the afternoon, and taking the band stand supplied a highly delightful program of music, with their customary snap and efficiency. The varied nature of the musical program was a noticeable feature, and the crowds thoroughly appreciated their efforts, adding as they did to the success of the fair. The band was under the direction of bandmaster, Rupert Gliddon

In the exhibit building were attractively displayed products of the field, orchard and garden in a most tempting arrangement. Some remarkably fine specimens of apple growth were shown. The long tables were literally piled with prize winning produce.

GRAFTON EXHIBIT

The Grafton Company had an attractive exhibit, in a conspicuous location, under a canvas canopy. Suitings and cloth samples of the high grade stock which has won for the Grafton company, its wide and popular reputation, were neatly arranged for inspection. The goods of this company have won their name for reliability and genuineness through years of catering to the clothing needs of thousands of satisfied customers, and wherever the name Grafton is known it is synonymous with good wearable and high grade manufacture.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture had a tent on the grounds which was visited by many.

GOOD HORSE RACING

The races however were undoubtedly the greatest attraction of the day. They provided some of the keenest kind of excitement, and kept the spectators on edge. Some splendid entries were in the free for all, and the 2.35 class and some of the prettiest racing seen in these parts for many a long day was witnessed. Exciting finishes were recorded.

The first heat in the 2.35 went to "Adrian Pointer," owned by James Elmhirst of Keene. N. Nichol's "Barber Girl," of Lakefield was a close second. The second heat also went the same way for first place with Hazel B. not next. "Barber Girl." broke her hobbles in this heat.

The third and final heat brought first honors to Adrian Pointer. The division of the money was as follows Adrian Pointer, first; Hazel Brook, second, and Barber Girl, third. The final heat in this race was a beautiful exhibition of speed. In the second lap of the three lap track, the winner sped away to the front, a lead which she maintained to the finish, never altering apparently, and covering the ground with a most graceful action.

The free for all also supplied all kinds of speed exhibitions and good racing. "Furioso" winning.

It was in three heats and resulted as follows:—

Furioso	1	1	1
Dot. L	2	2	2
Orillia Belle	4	3	3
Harry Direct	3	4	4

The competition for the best lady driver was a very difficult event to for the judges to decide. It was eventually awareded to Miss Preston, and the second place to Miss Hamlin. There were nineteen events altogether.

About six o'clock the fair had practically come to an end, and tents were pulled down and the crowds dispersed.

"DELIGHTFUL MUSIC" IN THE BEAUTY SPOT

Catchy Songs and Funny Speeches Galore in Saturday's Attraction—Matinee and Night Performances.

All last season the delightful music of this production was whistled and sung so frequently that every music lover in this city is now thoroughly familiar with the catchy melodies of its many different songs. It is not alone on account of the tuneful melodies by Reginald DeKoven, that the fame of this play depends, for Joseph Herbert has displayed in the libretto much originality.

One of the most striking features promised in "The Beauty Spot," is its chorus

The story of the play concerns an artist who paints a picture of a married woman that almost loses him his sweetheart, but the girl finally comes around in a sweet willing fashion, and all ends happily with a delightfully clever solution to the story of the much talked of painting.

Of the book, by Joseph W. Herbert there is to be said that it has many bright lines; of the music, by Reginald DeKoven, that it contains many pretty airs, some of which are bound to be popular. The audience laughed and applauded and demanded that many of the songs and dances be repeated. These songs that seemed to hit the popular fancy were, "She sells sea shells," "Creole Days," "A Prince of Borneo," "Foolish Questions," "When Cupid Comes a Tapping" and "In a Hammock."

There was a lot of dash to "The Boulevard Glide," and "The Gobble Glide" waltz numbers which will probably be much talked about.

There will be two performances of this attraction, on Saturday, Sept 23 matinee and night. Already there has been a large advance sale.

THEATRICAL

"BABY MINE"

Those who went to see "Baby Mine" at the Grand last night for the purpose of having a laugh did not go away disappointed. It is undoubtedly one of the funniest plays ever presented in this city. The ridiculous situations into which Jimmy Jinks, a friend of a jealous husband, is placed by the strategy of his wife and his friend's wife in trying to appease the jealous husband, keeps the audience convulsed in laughter. When number one baby arrived the situation was funny, and the fun increased as did the babies in Alfred Hardy's home, and the troubles of Jimmy Jinks. There was some evidence of "thin ice" during the initial part of the first act, but before the curtain descended the admirable work of the company had banished all fears, and the audience enjoyed the program with keen delight. The company was strong, with Miss Miss Marion Welsh and Benedict McQuarrie carrying off first honors. John J. McCable as Jimy simply had to be funny. He couldn't have been otherwise, with the situations coming as they did.

The next attraction is the "Beauty Spot," and Frank Deshon, which comes to the Grand for an afternoon and night performance on Saturday.

The orchestra was in good form last night and their work was at all times enjoyable.

The Peterboro Business College

which opened for the fall term on Sept. 5th, is enjoying a splendid attendance, which promises to be the largest in the history of the school. 6d

LUXURIOUS NEW CARS FOR C.P.R. MONTREAL SERVICE

Another triumph in car building has been achieved by the C.P.R. and it marks a further advance in railroading.

The new compartment observation cars which have just been sent out from the Angus shops are intended for the service between Toronto and Montreal, and as evidence of the growing popularity of the service between the North Toronto station and Montreal, they are attached to the train leaving that station at 10.00 p.m. daily.

These new cars have seven compartments, a drawing room, an observation parlor and an observation platform. The entrance to the rooms is from aisles running along the sides of the cars, ensuring absolute privacy. There are two berths, the lower being made up from two double seats, and there are all toilet requirements in each compartment.

The cars are lighted with electricity, and in the warm weather are kept cool with electric fans.

These cars are models of luxury and comfort in which the C.P.R. standard of equipment excels. 2d

More new cars for the Street Railway Co. have arrived in the city. One is a sweeper.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH

It was something like three years ago that an ambitious bookkeeper complained to the writer of his inability to keep his eyes open the moment he applied them to books on an evening after work. Since boyhood he had contributed to the support of a family of seven, and now at the age of twenty-four he desired to take up shorthand and to carry a correspondence course or two. If by hook or by crook he did manage to work until eleven or twelve o'clock his mind would be dull and heavy next day. At one time he was so ill advised as to try drinking strong tea for supper. Tea kept his eyes open all night, but headaches began to manifest themselves, and sleeplessness and other symptoms of nervousness put in an appearance. The young man dropped the tea, and the headaches and nervousness disappeared almost immediately, but evening work was still impossible. The writer suggested to him that he discontinue his suppers, eating, at most an apple or other fresh fruit, or perhaps a small bowl of cereal flakes with the juice of a stewed fruit. He adopted the suggestion, adding to it one of his own devising—that he be careful at all meals to choose only the digestible foods—and before a year had elapsed his knowledge of shorthand had gained him a private secretariship to the president of his concern, and he is now a small stockholder. He had capitalized time.

An eminent political economist recently ventured the assertion that not more than one person in ten is healthy—meaning by "healthy" not "justso," but positively, vitally, actively, radiantly so. The other nine score of worry along, some in positive ill health, the others neither sick nor well, both classes a burden to themselves and to those who are obliged to live and work with them. And inasmuch as these persons are so preponderatingly in the majority, it is pertinent to ask, "can health come back?"

The answer is most emphatically, it can if you are willing to deny yourself accustomed luxuries. Self-denial—that is the price of getting well. It sounds a good deal easier than parting with good gold, but most people prefer contributing to the support of a physician to giving up one of their three or four daily meals, or a cup of tea. A drug trade journal recently descanted upon what it was pleased to call "the ivory-headed public." The burden of the editor's satire was this: "In their ability to letting in of information concerning matters of health, the heads of a remarkably large portion of the general public seem to be made of solid ivory, bone or wood. . . Patronise the restaurants and hotel dining rooms and note how many stuff their stomachs full of unmasticated food, making it go down with ice water, coffee, beer, or wine instead of the natural digestive fluids of the mouth." If these strictures seem severe try a little experiment. Select a dozen persons, who for financial reasons are in particular need of the mental efficiency that comes of vigorous health, and persuade them to adopt the suggestions contained in the following pages, and then observe how few of them persevere. When a week of proper eating fails to correct the results of a lifetime of indulgence they give up in despair and go back to the flesh-pots of the Nile with a suspicion that you are a crank.

HOT ELECTION CONTEST TO-DAY

Heavy Vote Will be Recorded in The City

AUTO INDUSTRY FOR LINDSAY

Proposition From the Ohio Automobile Company

Lindsay Warder—Yesterday a number of the business men of Lindsay met at the Hotel Benson to consider the proposition made by Mr. Schafer representative of the Ohio Automobile Co., in regards to building a plant in town for the assembling of automobiles. A capital of $150,000 would be required but all this would not be used in building as some would be needed to turn over for machinery as the automobile was done on a spot cash business.

Mr. McCombe stated that in conversation with Mr. Carlyle, of the Goodyear Tire Co., that that gentleman said his firm would invest a good substantial sum in the business. The automobile firm would supply the technical mechanics.

However, the proposition was left to a committee consisting of Messrs. Wm. Flavelle, Sutcliffe, Boxall, Carew, Madison Williams, and Mr. Holmes. Those present at the meeting were Mayor Beal, Madison Williams, Mr. Sutcliffe, Mr. Naylor, J. D. Flavelle, B. J. Gough, James Boxall, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Wilson, Wm. Flavelle, J. Carew and A. L. Mr. Brace has been secretary of the Victoria Y.M.C.A. for five years past, and was with the Canadian troops in South Africa in the capacity of chaplain. He expected to sail for China this fall as a missionary, but his departure has been postponed on account of the uprisings there.

Mr. Brace left this city for Victoria on Tuesday night, to attend the dedication of the new Victoria Y.M.C.A. building, after which he will return to Hamilton to take up his duties in connection with the convention.

This is the last batch of news from this hustling little town to be sent in by the present correspondent. No doubt Jermyn will find a new scribe bring its small doings before the great world. Hello! Indian River. Hello! I say what's doing back there, are you dead or just dying. We never hear from you at all. How is the ice cream parlor, and tailor shop. Get a scribe and let us hear from you.

And poor old Lang. Have the Sons of Rest died a natural death and has Eaton's and Simpson's store closed that we never hear from you at all. Brace up, we expect something big to happen in Lang yet.

O yes! and Mather's Corners, what about far famed Mather's Corners. We know that there must be something doing out there, but you have been dead to the world for a time. Perhaps the scribbler has strained her thumb, or peradventure she has gone on a journey or is indisposed, or has a love affair. We do not hear from Mather's Corners as we used to. After a calm there comes a storm. May it be a news storm from the Corners.

LEAFS WON LAST GAME; GIANTS INCREASE THEIR LEAD

Rube Marguard Allowed St. Louis Only Five Hits in First Game.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Dick Rudolph, who twirled the opening game of the season at the Island, performed the closing act yesterday, and, like his initial appearance, the Leafs got the big end of the stick, but it was only after a hard uphill fight and a couple of extra sessions that the Kelleyites landed the bacon by 9 to 8.

Bill O'Hara started to play the sun field, but after getting tangled up with a couple of bingles in the second that accounted for three runs, he was shifted over to the other corner, where he caused the fans to groan in the eleventh by misjudging Hardy's bingle and the crack went for a home run, thus putting the Royals in the lead. The Leafs came back strong in their half of the eleventh, and with only one down, scored the two runs needed to win.

WELLS OUTPOINTED CHAMPION ATTELL

New York Fight Fans Witnessed Clever 10 Round Go

Madison Square Garden, New York, Sept. 20.—With at least fifteen pounds in his favor, Matt Wells, England's lightweight champion outpointed Abe Attell, the American featherweight champion in a scientific ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden tonight. Wells was the stronger and faster from start to finish. He forced the issue incessantly, and gave a superb exhibition of ring skill. The Englishman showed the better generalship. He outboxed Attell, landing the greater number of clean blows.

JUNIOR RUGBY FOURTEEN HERE

West Ends Have Entered the Junior O.R.F.U. Series

There is to be some rugby for Peterborough this season after all. The West End Athletic Club has concluded arrangements for entering a team in the Junior O.R.F.U. series.

Though the team will be under the management of the W.E.A.C. it will be a Peterborough team, and the support of the general public is asked for. The team has a good chance to carry off the championship and the fans are likely to have the opportunity of seeing good rugby this fall.

After this week, practise nights will be arranged.

On Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock the following players are asked to be out in uniform — Corkery, Thompson, Johnston, Davidson, Smith, Giroux, Canniff, Gilbert, Craig, Lundy, Ecclestone, Turner, Hickey, Denlain, Elliott, Hogan, Connors, Kirn, Ackerman and any others who wish to get into the game.

An Important Step.

London, Sept. 21.—Sydney C. Buxton, president of the Board of Trade has taken an important step in an effort to assure permanent peace in the cotton trade, Great Britain's greatest industry. He has invited leading representatives of the employers and employes to form a permanent industrial board on lines advocated by Sir Charles Wright Macara, chairman of the committee of the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers' Associations, during the recent upheavals.

According to the plan the board would be composed of ten leading employers and ten prominent labor representatives with the newly knighted Sir George Ranken Askwith, chairman of the commercial, labor and statistical departments of the Board of Trade as chairman. These men would form a panel from which an equal number from both sides could be selected to deal with any disputes arising before work was actually stopped.

Bound to Stop the Fight.

New York, Sept. 21.—A London cable says:

Lord Mayor Strong yesterday threw all his influence against the holding of the proposed prize fight between Jack Johnson and Bombadier Wells on October 12. He announced he would make a request to Home Secretary Churchill to stop the contest. If that fails, declares the Lord Mayor, other steps will be taken. The Lord Mayor received a letter from the Bishop of London, which contained the following message: "I will heartily support any protest made against the proposed prize fight."

No Foundation For Charges.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 21.—The cases against John Robinson and Thomas Wilson, charged with perjury at the election registration, were adjourned in the Police Court yesterday morning. The evidence brought out showed that there was little ground for the charges.

In New Jersey it has been decided that the use of vehicles to carry voters to the polls is prohibited by the law no matter who furnishes the transportation.

BIG FAT PICKPOCKET

One of the Best-Known Operators in America Gathered In

A unique figure among pickpockets was picked up at Barnum and Bailey's in the person of Dillon King, who, from a casual observation would be thought one of the last persons to be engaged in such a living. The detectives who placed him in custody regard King as one of the most dangerous class, whose home is anywhere crowds gather. They say he is a recognized pickpocket who makes his living by no other means, and that accordingly for the public protection he was kept out of sight until after the Exhibition. King has a long list of aliases. He might be known as John Dillon, Pat Hill, John Bradey, George Dillon, John Howard, George Burton, George Carroll, John Wilbur, or as the plain Dillon King. King's appearance is the direct reverse of an imagined pickpocket. He lacks the thin, wiry form generally associated with such a character. On the contrary, he is tall, heavily built, with large hands which look as though they would wreck a pocket before they could pilfer it. He is an exceedingly well-groomed man, carefully dressed in a blue-black suit with a modest tie. The gaudy apparel, rings, etc., which generally give such a man away, are completely lacking. His manner is affable, he makes use of a pleasant smile, his face is guileless rather than severe. The man would weigh close upon 200 lbs., and he is six feet in height. His name first appears on the police record in September, 1889. Then he got 90 days in Minneapolis. Since that date there are twelve convictions registered against him, all for similar offences, and the penalties have ranged anywhere from a fine of $75 to a two-year term.

DOG WENT MAD

Attacked a Man and Also Many Animals

A dog in Halton county, believed to be mad, was killed recently and its head sent to Ottawa for examination. Evidence of rabies was found, and Mr. Stark, of the Department of Agriculture, has visited the townships of Eramosa and Nassagaweya. He found that the dog had run about 30 miles in two days, had bitten twelve pigs, sheep in two separate flocks, six dogs, and some cattle. Mr. Stark destroyed the bitten dogs, and by his advice the authorities of Eramosa township enforced a dog-muzzling by-law.

One man was bitten, Mr. Edward Pearen, and went for treatment. The dog also nipped Mr. John Leslie, but as his skin was not broken nor blood drawn, treatment was not necessary in his case. One of the bitten pigs went mad and was killed.

A SOUND SLEEPER

This Girl Goes Into Trances of Several Days' Duration

A young girl, Blanche David, was brought to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, from St. Henri car barns, apparently under the influence of a drug. She is 18 years of age, and lives with her parents in Montreal. Her mother states that she was not drugged, but in a trance, and that she has been subject to trances, from which it is impossible to awaken her, ever since the middle of January. The trances last from two or three days to a week. Between trances the girl enjoys perfect health. She has been treated unsuccessfully at every hospital in the city.

STAY OUT TOO LATE

London School Board Will Regulate the Boy Scouts

The Boy Scout movement was criticised by the London Board of Education because last year the boys were out nearly every night in the week until 11 o'clock and Dr. Teasdale and Chairman Weeks were of the opinion that this was objectionable.

It was suggested that one night a week would be plenty. This was the view of the other members of the board present, and the proper precautions will be taken to see that those attending school do not go out more than this number of nights per week.

They Like Canadian Cheese

That Canadian cheese is commanding great attention in the Old Country, and that the price for fall make is likely to be very high, as there is likely to be a scarcity, is the statement of G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario. Merchants there are extremely well pleased with the high quality of Canadian cheese.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR LOMER GOUIN
Premier of Quebec

Sir Lomer Gouin when he was appointed Premier of his native Province, in 1905, had an almost impossible task before him. He had just succeeded a strong and popular man, under circumstances which made many suspect his object,—the betterment of the people. They doubted his strength. Five years have come and gone and Sir Lomer is still Premier and those doubtful Thomases of five years ago are now his staunchest supporters,—he has convinced them and the rest of the world of his sincerity and worth. Two things in Sir Lomer's administration will always stand out as splendid examples of progressive work,—the conservation of the national resources, particularly the forests, and the education of the people. To bring about the first Sir Lomer had to fight hard against heavy odds, not only against the American exploiter but against many of his supporters who had options on the lands, and whose only object was to sell for a profit whatever the cost to the Province. In the better education of the people he had to face the difficulties of religion, which he met with a strength of mind that made even his opponents respect him. Sir Lomer is a good Catholic, but it is the State first with him, as many extremists have found to their cost.

SIR LOMER GOUIN,

Sir Lomer Gouin was born in the little village of Grondines Que. in 1861, graduating at Laval University in Law and was called to the Bar in 1884. As a lawyer he was successful but early in life he entered the political arena, where after a long fight he was returned to the Quebec Parliament for St. James, Montreal, in 1897. In 1900 he first tasted the sweets of office, taking the portfolio of Public Works. In 1905 he resigned but was soon called upon to form a Cabinet. Since then the destiny of this province has been in the hands of this strong man. He was knighted by the present King on the occasion of the Quebec Tercentenial in 1908.

HON. JAMES PITT. MABEE
Chairman of Railway Commission.

The most remarkable and certainly the most democartic court in Canada is the Board of Railway Commissioners. It was established in 1903 to take up all matters referring to railways, carrying companies, Telephone and Telegraph Companies and so on. Previous to this these matters were either referred to Parliamentary committees or the ordinary courts with the result that the business was slow, complicated and expensive. To day this is all changed. Complaints are attended to promptly and effectively and the Court is easy of access. This to a large extent is due to the personal of the Commission. When Judge Mabee was appointed to succeed the late Judge Killam as Chairman he had a hard man to follow. Judge Killam had made himself popular with the people and the Railway Companies respected his judgments — but if anything Chairman Mabee has enlarged the popularity of his Court. He brings to bear on his judgments sound sense and though always ready to listen will stand no nonsense from either one side or the other.

JUDGE MABEE,

Ju[illegible] was born in Ontario in 1[illegible]ating at Toronto University [illegible] was appointed Judge of the High Court of Justice, Ontario, 1905 and was appointed Chairman of the Railway Board in 1908.

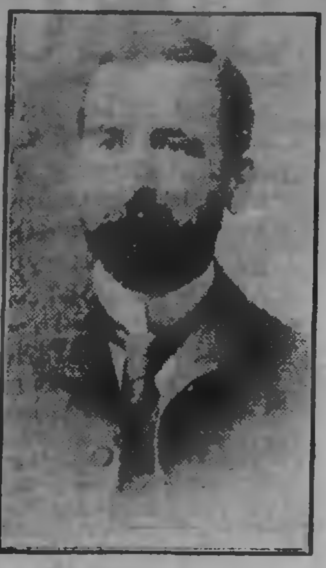
GEORGE H. PERLEY, M.P.

In the next Conservative Government George H. Perley will fill a prominent position, for four reasons: he is wealthy, he has great ability, splendid organizing powers and is a reformer of the best type. He is doing his best to raise the standard of public life in the Dominion, and has been a factor in Parliament taking a larger interest in the elimination of disease in the different communities.

Mr. Perley was born in New Hampshire. Educated in Ottawa and Harvard universities. Entered his father's business of lumbering where he acquired his business experience. He is now head of G. H. Perley & Co., Vice-President Hull Lumber Co. Ltd., Director Bank of Ottawa, etc. When this busy man has an hour to spare it is with his favourite golf. In philanthropy Mr. Perley has set a noble example to other rich men, giving his time and money and using his influence in many schemes for the eleviation of distress. This is the kind of man who is gradually making the life of Canada—especially in National affairs—pure.



GEORGE H. PERLEY,
Chief Conservative Whip.

SIR LOUIS JETTE, K.C.M.G.
Chief Justice of Quebec

Sir Louis Jette, who left the gubernatorial chair of Quebec province, after serving most acceptably two terms in the calm of the vice-regal office at Spencerwood, has done as much as any representative of his race to cement the bond of friendship — between English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians. He is now at his former post on the Bench of the Superior Court of Quebec, to which he was first raised thirty years ago. The son of a merchant, Sir Louis began to study law in Montreal when seventeen years of age and was admitted to the Bar at twenty-six. He became an able, skilful pleader. In 1878 he was appointed professor of civil law in Laval University where he had the degree of LL.D. conferred on him. He subsequently became Dean of the Faculty. He was one of the Alaskan Boundary Commissioners to represent Canada and along with Sir A. B. Aylesworth, declined to sign the award. In addition to his Canadian and British honors he holds honors from the French Government. In September, 1901, he was made a K.C.M.G. and the investiture was made by the King when Duke of York.

SIR LOUIS JETTE,
Chief Justice of Quebec

Sir Louis was offered a place in 1878 in the Cabinet of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, but declined the honor. He is one of the most cultured and genial of French-Canadians, being a member of several literary and scientific bodies. He has spent same time in journalism.

Cat Pursues Deer

A large Angora cat owned by E. J. Dowd in East Lee, Massachussetts, acts as a watch-dog and puts to flight all four-footed intruders. Early last spring three deer, including a large buck invaded the premises occupied by Spot the cat. The owner states that his doughty cat immediately singled out the buck and pursued him some two hundred yards, both disappearing over a hilltop. The cat has been taught to drive cows and to perform many other useful acts.

The modern Pharisee crosses his fingers and then talks about his utter unworthiness.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

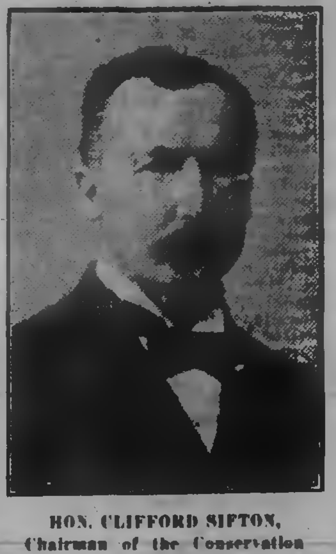
HON. CLIFFORD SIFTON
Chairman Conservation Commission

When the Federal Government decided to create a Conservation Commission in 1909 with great powers, and put Clifford Sifton at its head an epoch was marked that future generations will bless, for it meant that Canada had at last realized that something must be done and done quickly if she was to save her splendid water powers and forests from vandalism and destruction.

Since that date the Commission has done splendid work — conserving this forest, controlling that water fall, and advising the different provinces and municipalities as to the best methods of making the most, without destroying, of their local waters and forests.

Canada's water powers are greater than those of any other country in the world. Her known or estimated flow development is about twenty-six million horse power, but it is certain that this is but a fraction of her water power asset.

So far the computation has been dependent upon somewhat unreliable statistics, but the energy displayed by the Conservation Commission has had beneficial results. This important body has stirred to action some indifferent provincial authorities, and there is now the prospect that a complete table of waterpowers in the Dominion will be ready to place before the public, along with much valuable information relating thereto.



HON. CLIFFORD SIFTON,
Chairman of the Conservation Commission.

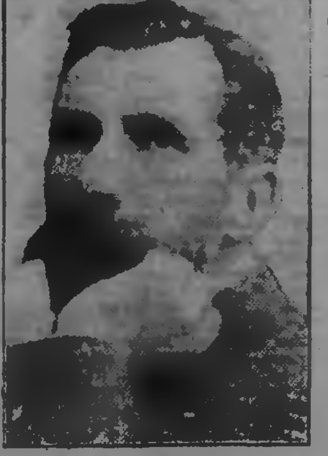
It may be said in passing that the provincial governments for the most part have been negligent in the matter, and it is only where the federal government has control and responsibility that accurate information has up till the present time been available.

It is calculated that the maintenance of one horse power per annum from steam power involves a consumption of 21.9 tons of coal On this basis the available water powers of Canada represent a combined energy, which, if it had to be maintained by steam force generated from coal, would involve a coal consumption of six hundred million tons per annum.

And the man who is at the head of this work? Clifford Sifton is one of the strong men of Canada. It was during his administration as minister of the Interior that Canada and its opportunities were first brought to the notice of the outside world with such beneficial results.

CLIVE PHILLIPS-WOLLEY
F. R. C. S.

It is said that one of the principal reasons of British Columbia being so British is the fact that Phillips-Wolley lives there The Captain is such a fine fellow—sufficiently so to warrent the rumour in its best sense, and he is popular everywhere. Coming out to Canada in 1884, he became vice-consul at Kirtch, inherited a large estate in England and took the additional name and arms of Wolley, retired from consular work and was called to the Bar in England, but never practised. As Vice-President of the Navy League Mr. Phillips-Wolley became a strong factor in making Canada realize her naval responsibilities, some of his articles being used extensively by the advocates of Naval reform not only in Canada but throughout the Empire. He is Captain 4th Battalion S. W. B Amongst his publications are Big Game Sport in Crimea and Caucasus, Songs of an English Esau, etc



CLIVE PHILLIPS-WOLLEY,

The emperor of Japan has written a Coronation poem and it is said to be not worse than Alfred Austin's.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

SIR JAMES WHITNEY,
Premier of Ontario

Sir James Whitney is probably the most learned man in Canada occupying a First minister's position He is LL.D. of Toronto and Queens Universities and D.C.L. Trinity University, surely something to be proud of. And as if scholarship was not sufficient Sir James must needs take an active interest in the defence of his country. He has taken part in the Fenian Troubles as a N.C.O.

Born in Ontario in 1843, he was educated at Cornwall Grammar School and after graduating at Toronto was called to the Bar in 1876, and created Q.C. 1890. He was first returned to the Ontario parliament in 1888 and chosen leader of the opposition 1896. In 1905 he formed his first Government assuming the position of Attorney-General in addition to that of Prime Minister. On his Government being re-elected Sir James relinquished the office of Attorney-General. He was created knight by the present king on the occasion of the Quebec Tercentenary.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY,
Premier of Ontario.

SIR GEORGE GARNEAU

When Sir George Garneau was knighted in 1908 at the time the King was in Quebec attending the Tercentenary it was a double honour— to the city and literature—for while Sir George was Mayor at that time, he represented a family, the members of which for many generations, have taken prominent parts in the public life of the Province, and at least one member is recognized as one of the great historians of French Canada. And Sir George himself — who is no mean litterateur, — in conjunction with Col. Wood, in bringing about the pageant which for a time focussed the eyes of the world on Canada did more than anything else to convince Britishers and even foreigners that Canada had a past of which it was proud. What the tercentenary meant in work probably only Sir George Garneau knows, but he must have been a proud man to see the consumation of his months of successful thought and planning.

SIR GEORGE GARNEAU,
Quebec.

COL. F. S. MEIGHEN

The election of Col. F. S. Meighen to the Presidency of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. — the position so long held by his late father, Rob't Meighen — brings out comparison and queries. The father whose name was known from coast to coast was a masterful man, with a reputation that would overshadow a son even of Col. Meighen's ability. But the father knew his son and knew his worth — so much so — that he was already contemplating resigning in favour of him when death overtook him.

For his present position Col. Meighen has served a long and arduous apprenticeship. When young fellows of Meighen position were taking life easy, he kept his nose to the grind stone — working and acquiring — and probably enjoying it all. Be that as it may, it will be hard to say who worked the hardest, Meighen father, or Meighen, son, and the same reputation for integrity and honour applied to the father applies equally, so to the son.

For many years — the Militia took up a good deal of his time,—he going through all the grades, to the command of his regiment.

CANADA'S SONS

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER

There is much speculation in political circles in regard to the position Geo. E. Foster will occupy should the Conservatives come into power. That he will occupy a prominent position goes without saying for he has stood the brunt of battle for thirteen long years. He is easily the best debator in the House of Commons, and in finance his consummate knowledge and ability to use that knowledge for the benefit of his party and the detriment of his political enemies — personal enemies he has none — have made him a power to be reckoned with. Born 64 years ago in New Brunswick, he was given a splendid education, attending the Universities of New Brunswick, Edinburgh and Heidelberg, where he won many honours and medals. He entered the teaching profession being appointed Professor of classics and ancient literature in 1871. After eight years of battling with the ancients he resigned to take up political life being elected to the Federal House of Commons in 1882. In 1885 he became a member of Sir John Macdonald's Government as Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Three years later he succeeded Sir Chas. Tupper, as Finance Minister, a position he held right through the different Conservative administrations until 1896 when he resigned with the Government. Outside his governmental positions Mr. Foster has held many important positions in various temperance organizations of Canada.

HON. GEORGE FOSTER.

Dr. J. A. MACDONALD
Newspaperman.

Dr. MacDonald has been called the unofficial member of the Government, which while not quite true is an indication of his influence in the great field of politics, though he would be the first to disclaim any ambition in that direction, believing truly that journalism, which he adorns so well, is the real field through which the people of Canada will be induced to take up their full responsibilities, as citizens. There is no doubt but that in a very short time, the Press of Canada will be the real leaders.—editors for some time have realized their responsibility and are gradually raising the general tone of their papers, and no one has done more to bring this about than Dr. MacDonald.

Dr. J. A. MACDONALD.

Educated for the Presbyterian Ministry, MacDonald graduated at Knox College Toronto and was ordained to the ministry of Knox Church St. Thomas Ont. in 1891. In 1896 he resigned his pastorial charge and removed to Toronto to become first editor of the Westminster, a religious monthly, subsequently a number of other church papers were acquired and consolidated under his editorship and issued weekly under the name of the Presbyterian For five years Dr. MacDonald was principal of the Presbyterian college for ladies, and in 1906 he was appointed by the Ontario Government to serve on the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto.

Since he became editor of the Toronto Globe he has not only infused new life into the great liberal organ, but has strengthened its position, both editorially and financially As a writer and speaker Dr. MacDonald is trenchant and convincing,—a man who knows his mind and knows how to express it without fear or favour. Outside his editorial work he has published two books and a number of fugitive articles on literary, social, political and religious subjects.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

HON. GEO. GRAHAM,
Minister of Railways

Geo. Graham as is well known is a practical newspaperman but it is not so well known that he started as a full blown proprietor and so at the outset of his career. George had some hard battles to fight, for running papers in Canada is no fun.

His first experience was in the little town of Morrisburg where his father bought out the local paper. His father had made only a small payment on the plant, but under the energetic guidance of the young proprietor, things began to move and in a few years the debt was cleared off and the property greatly improved. He was Reeve of Morrisburg for some time and a member of the County Council of Dundas. So closely did he apply himself to the duties of private and public business that his health, which has never been too robust, was undermined and he was forced to give up newspaper work for some time. He sold the Herald and intended, after being in the publishing business eleven years, taking a trip to the West with the object of locating there. The late Mr. Gorman was then at the helm in the Ottawa Free Press, but owing to illness had to give up his duties for some months. Mr. Graham was asked to take a position on the editorial staff of that paper and was leader writer for some months. Mr. Thomas Southworth, now Colonization Agent for the Province of Ontario, was the proprietor of the Brockville Recorder and his editor, Mr. John A. Mackenzie, having left to enter the service of the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Mr. Southworth had to look after both the business and editorial ends. He found these duties too exacting and offered Mr. Graham a position which he accepted. This was in 1893. At the beginning of the following year the business was organized into a joint stock company with George P. Graham as managing director. Mr. Southworth retired in 1895 to take the post which he now holds with the Ontario Government Mr. Graham was given entire charge of the Recorder and was both its business manager and editor up to the time that he was created Minister of Railways and Canals. On the platform, while not eloquent, Mr. Graham is a clear and ready speaker and is regarded as one of the best "stumpers" in his party. His grasp of detail is one of his strongest points. He can present the most abstruse problem in a businesslike and clear cut manner and is always listened to attentively. His arguments are concise. He does not travel all over the map to reach a climax, nail an argument, or drive home a truth. He is a indefatigable worker and it is not unusual for him to put in sixteen hours day in his department.

HON. GEORGE P. GRAHAM.

HON. ADAM BECK

No man has done more to raise the breed of horses in Canada than Hon. Adam Beck, who has spent freely of his money and time in encouraging farmers throughout the land to have the best stock, maintaining that it costs as much to keep a poor horse as a good one.

HON. ADAM BECK,
Toronto.

Mr. Beck who was born in Ontario, 1857, gained his experience in his father's iron foundry in Baden He commenced business on his own account in 1880 in the veneering and lumber box business. His plant is now the largest of its kind in Canada.

He first entered the Ontario house in 1902 and entered the Whitney Government without portfolio in 1906.

Mr. Beck was mayor of London [illegible]

'SHE BURNS GREEN.'
How the Phrase Came to Be a Classic Yell Among Prospectors.

Although the prospector is generally supposed to be associated with the search for precious metal his attention is by no means confined to that. A writer in the Los Angeles 'Times' tells of a group of valuable claims in the Silver Mountain mining district, which includes the whole of Black Mountain.

It was long considered worthless until an up-to-date prospector recognized it as 'cement rock', the principal ingredient from which Portland cement is made.

Another example is furnished by the discovery of borax in Death Valley, one of the most valuable strikes ever made in California. The discoverer, Aaron Winters, was at that time living in a lonely little shack on the Amargosa flats at the south end of the valley.

Thither, attracted by the light, came one night a vagrant prospector from Nevada. He had with him a sample of borax brought from a small deposit across the border. This Winters instantly recognized as being the same curious stuff which he had seen lying in great beds in Death Valley, but of which he had never known the name.

Adroitly questioned the wanderer explained to Winters the simple but little known test for borax. No sooner was their visitor safely gone than Winters and his wife, carrying food and water, a pick, a saucer and a bottle of alcohol, set out on foot northward into the valley. At night fall the next day they arrived at the first of the strange beds.

Without even waiting to moisten his parched throat Winters fell upon it with pick and bare hands till a little of the surface crust was removed. He scraped up a handful of the loose stuff, piled it in the saucer, moistened it with alcohol and struck a match. An instant later he hurled his hat in one direction, his pick in another, and seizing his wife, waltzed that astonished lady round the strange, flickering flame, whooping: 'She burns green, Rosie! She burns green!'

Winters realised a fortune from his discovery. Even to-day the man of the valley, lighting upon something new heralds his find with the classic yell, 'She burns green!'

Long Speeches.

M. Jaures is not at all pleased with the proposal before the French Chamber to limit the duration of speeches to ten minutes. All that really need be said on most matters could, if the speaker clearly grasped his subject, be spoken in ten minutes, but probably the Socialist leader is jealous of the latitude recently allowed the Austrian Deputy Kotlorsch, who spoke for three hours. But his record is beaten by an instance in England, when an opponent of O'Connell obstructed one of his bills by speaking for eight hours. Senator Summer at the time of the American war of secession, delivered an oration lasting eleven hours. At the Assembly at Bordeaux in 1871 the Mayor of Strasburg brought about his death from the exhaustion followed upon his speech.

THE LATE KING OF SIAM

The late King of Siam, whose full title was Somdet-Phra-Paramindmaha Chula - Longkorn-Chula - Chom-Klao, was one of the eighty-four sons of Maha-Morgkut. He had completed the fifty-eighth year of his life and the forty-third of his reign, the longest in the history of the nation. He was considered one of the broadest minded and most cultivated rulers of the far East Under the tuition of an English governess in the royal household he learned to speak English and French perfectly. He instituted numerous reforms in his Government, abolished slavery, lowered the taxes, opened up canals for irrigation and transportation, instituted a superb system of highways for the development of commerce, built telegraphs and hospitals, guaranteed religious liberty, reorganized the army and built a navy of twenty vessels. Though Siam is an autocracy, the king was democratic in his spirit and gathered about him a Cabinet Council of six royal princes and thirteen ministers of state.

If I Should Die To-night.
(Revised Version.)

If I should die to-night
And should you come to my cold corpse and say,
Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifeless clay—
If I should die to-night
And you should come in deepest grief and woe
And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe"—
I might arise in my large white cravat
And say, "What's that?"
If I should die to-night
And you should come to my cold corpse and kneel.
Clasping my bier to show the grief
you feel—
I say, if I should die to-night,
And you should come to me and there and then
Just even hint 'bout payin' me that ten
I might arise the while;
But I'd drop dead again.

Free Fare, Little Salary.

In some foreign countries a liberal allowance in the way of travelling expenses makes a meagre salary a respectable one. In Italy, for instance, the journalist, with barely one or two exceptions, works for a salary which we pampered ones in Canada would laugh at. But he has his compensations. He—and not only himself, but his wife and family, too—travels free on all the railways, whether the journey is on business or not. If he wishes to go to the theatre, and to take his friends, he has only to ask, and the requisite box or stalls are at his disposal—and that, however humble his professional rank may be. On the whole, the Canadian journalist prefers not to be paid in this kind.

Special Correspondence

Omemee, Sept. 20.—Mr. Percy Robinson, an old Omemee boy, who is now located in Toronto, has been spending a few days the guest of Mr. D. Cornell.

On Monday evening the many friends and admirers of Mr. Younger met him at the Commercial House and presented him with a handsome caddie-bag and entertained him to a bounteous repast. The event was occasioned by the fact that Mr. Younger, who has spent the most of the summer with friends here, was about to leave for New York, his permanent home. As he is a social favorite, his gentlemen friends wished to show their admiration of so jolly a fellow, and Mr. Robt. Johnston in a neat little speech, made the presentation. The recipient replied in terms of gratitude and felicitation.

The Misses Parsons have returned from a lengthy visit with friends at Toronto.

There was a large attendance at Col. Sam Hughes' meeting on Thursday night. The Salvation Army barracks was filled, almost half of the audience being ladies. Mr. Jas. T. Beatty, president of the local Conservative committee, was the capable and talented chairman. Besides the candidate speeches were delivered by Mr. Geo. McCartney and Dr. Mason, M.P.P. The order and attention was excellent and the meeting was another of the signal successes which seem to lionize Col. Sam and ensure for him a renewal of the people's pledges on the 21st inst.

Eaton, of Toronto; Mr. Franklin Ryker, tenor, of New York, and Mrs. Ryker, soprano, and organist, of New York City, and the choir of the church. The visiting artists more than justified the celebrity that preceded them, the congregations enjoying a feast of the best music. At the evening service Mr. Ryker was heard in the solo part of an anthem, and later in a solo, which demonstrated the compass, strength and superior tonal qualities of his voice. Mrs. J. C. Eaton was in splendid voice and very effectively interpreted a rather difficult selection of solo work. Mr. and Mrs. Ryker, Mrs. Eaton and Mr. R. J. Mulligan, choir conductor, scored a grand success in their unaccompanied quartette, "Abide With Me." Mrs. Ryker's organ number was sublime. Her shading, beauty of expression and ease of execution marked her as a performer of the premier class. Rev. R. Burns, the pastor, took his text from Proverbs, 18th chapter, verse 24, and his eloquent remarks on the subject of "Friendship" were educative and uplifting. The church was crowded to its capacity. The pastor expressed the gratitude of himself and his congregation to Mrs. Eaton and her friends for their splendid musical treat.

Every Other Treatment Failed But "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., Jan. 2nd, 1910.

"My wife was greatly distressed for three years with chronic Eczema on the hands, and the disease was so severe that it almost prevented her from using her hands. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, but none of them did any good. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves and she wore out three pairs without getting any benefit. As a last resort, I persuaded her to try "Fruit-a-tives", and the effect was marvellous. Not only did "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cure the Eczema, but the Asthma, which she suffered from, was also completely cured.

We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives". N. JOUBERT.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Eczema or Salt Rheum because "Fruit-a-tives" purifies the blood, corrects the Indigestion and Constipation, and tones up the Nervous System.

WARSAW ITEMS

Warsaw, Sept. 18.—A very pretty event took place at the home of Mr. James Clifford on Sept. 6th, when his eldest daughter, Maggie, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Archer, of Fenelon Falls. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream silk with overdress of white silk lace and trimmed with bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Sadie Clifford, was gowned in white silk. Both carried bouquets of bridal roses and white asters. The groomsman was Mr. Bert Naylor, of Lindsay, cousin of the groom. Their vows were pledged beneath an arch of evergreens and forget-me-nots, and white carnations. Rev. Mr. Brown, Presbyterian minister of Warsaw, officiated. After the ceremony they were conducted to the dining room, which was both pleasing to the eye and appetite, each corner being decorated with different colors; the centre was silver and gold. The bride and groom were seated under a white floral umbrella. The hall was decorated with ferns and violets. There were about eighty guests present. Among those from a distance were: Miss Archer and Mrs. Burgess, sisters of the groom, Fenelon Falls; Mr. Bert Naylor, Lindsay; Mr. R. and Miss C. Inglis, Walkerville; Miss S. Smith, Millersburg, Mich.; Miss V. McIntosh, Rosedale; Mr. Robert and Will, Miss Maud and Amonel Clifford, Peterborough; Mr. J. and Miss M. Sharp, Miss Anderson and Miss M. Swinton, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh, Mr. Jim and Miss Clara Kidd, Lakefield. The bride's presents were numerous and elegant. They left for Rochester and other points on their wedding trip and will reside in Fenelon Falls. The best wishes of their many friends go with them.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Browne, of Young's Point, paid a visit to Warsaw on Friday, Sept. 8th.

Mrs. Martha Hendren has been spending a week with friends in Lakefield.

Mr. Trentfield Sanders, of Cottesloe, who has been suffering with a broken leg, was very much worse on Friday evening.

Miss Sarah Smith, of Millersburg, Michigan, has returned to renew old acquaintances.

Mr Kerr had the audacity to paste his election advertisement over the Warsaw Orange Lodge's excursion bills. They intend to make it hot for him.

The Rev. Mr. Robson, former pastor of Warsaw Methodist church, is here to take part in the anniversary services of Bethel church on Sunday morning, Sept. 10th. They intend to have a tea on Tuesday evening.

At a meeting held at 3rd line school house, North Dummer, in the interests of Mr. Kerr, Mr. Willie Payne asked permission to say a few words. He spoke to advantage and asked Mr. Kerr several questions he was unable to answer except with slurs. The Conservatives drowned Kerr's cheering with cheers for Sexsmith and Willie Payne. All they gave to Laurier was pea soup.

DEATH OF MRS. FRANCES DELONG

Bethany Lady Passes Away Suddenly—Fleetwood News

Special Correspondence.

Fleetwood, Sept. 18.—It is our painful duty to have to record the death of Mrs. Francis Delong, of Bethany, at the age of 51 years, which sad event took place on Sunday morning, Sept. 10th, at two o'clock. Deceased had gone to bed in her usual good health. Her son Cecil heard a peculiar noise in her room and got up to investigate, only to find she was suffering great pain. He then ran down to the village, and doctors Brereton and Hamilton were with her in a very short time. They were, however, powerless to save her life and she passed away in less than half an hour. Her husband died some seventeen years ago, leaving her with a large family to support. She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, Cecil, Anson, and three daughters, Mrs. George Jones, of Cavan; Mrs. Douglass Graham, of Bethany, and Sybil, at home. Her maiden name was Frances Graham, and she was a daughter of the late James Graham. Her mother, formerly Margaret Morton, still survives and resides in Cavan. Three remaining sisters are Mrs. Wm. Peacock, of Emily; Mrs. John Wake, of Bethany; Mrs. John Nelson, of Manvers. One brother is Arthur, of Fleetwood. The funeral on Tuesday last was very largely attended by relatives and friends. The services at the house and grave were conducted by the Rev. Williams, of Bethany, who spoke very kindly of the qualities of the deceased. A wreath by the members of the family, an anchor, by Mrs. J. D. Brack, of Winnipeg; a spray, by Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, and several others were given as tokens of respect. The pall bearers were Messrs. S. B. Preston, W. A. Brown, T. J. Jackson, Joseph Jones, John Russell and Louis Staples. About two o'clock the funeral cortege made its way to Graham's cemetery for interment. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved members of the family in this, their hour of sorrow.

Mr John McKinley purchased a new Massey-Harris corn binder and he is getting all the corn he can cut. All seem well satisfied with the way their work is done. We think more corn will be planted in this part in the future.

Mr. Archie Staples who had the wisdom to buy a new Waterloo threshing outfit this season, is having great success, as no barn seems too large for him to empty in one day. Archie is an old hand and has not much to learn, and we predict for him a great and prosperous season's threshing.

All parties should turn out on Thursday and poll their votes for the Conservative candidates and show their loyalty as good Canadians. Do not vote otherwise or you will be playing into Uncle Sam's hands. See to it and do the proper thing. You will never regret it.

Chicago will spend 2000 on a hospital for the snakes, birds, monkeys, and other animals at its Lincoln Park Zoo.

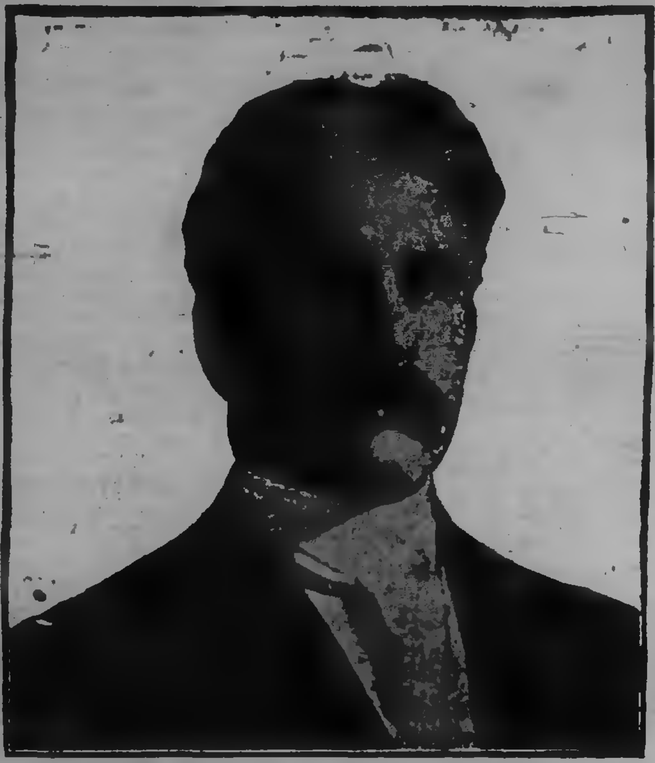
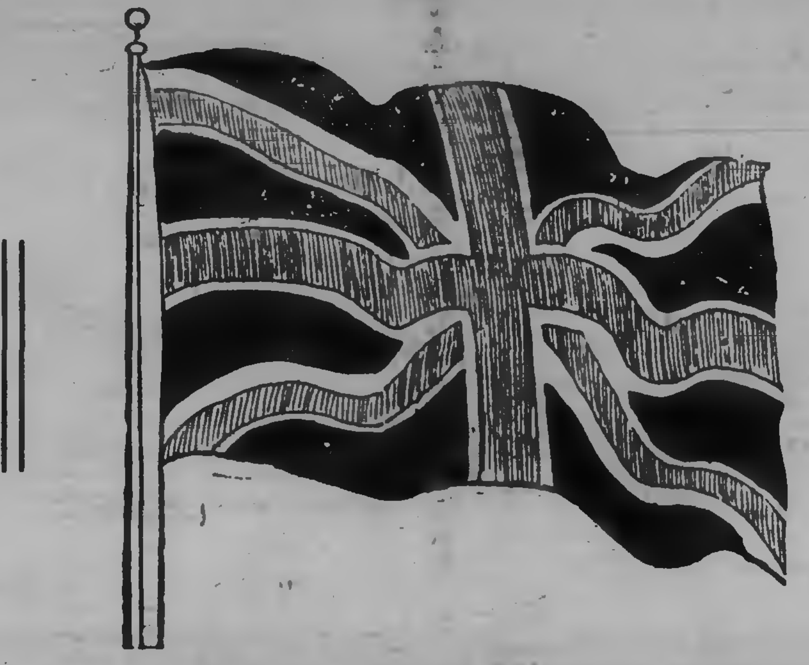
VICTORY FOR THE CONSERVATIVES IN WEST PETERBOROUGH---J. HAMPDEN BURNHAM WINS BY ABOUT 70 MAJORITY



MR. BORDEN, OUR NEW PREMIER.



"THE FLAG THEY CANNOT DOWN"

J. H. BURNHAM, M.A., MEMBER-ELECT.

EDITORIAL

The landslide that took place all over the country was reflected in West Peterborough, where Mr. Stratton was beaten handsomely for the first time in twenty-five years. Mr. Stratton worked tremendously for re-election. He spent money lavishly, used an organization that had been perfected through long years of political strife, used a big army of government employees, fought at every ditch — and was beaten. This fact is eloquent. To those who know what odds an opponent of Mr. Stratton had to face for election, the victory yesterday was most triumphant, the most spectacular in the history of the West Riding.

All credit is due to the Conservatives who so loyally worked for Mr. Burnham, to those Conservatives who have in past campaigns been found on election day under the Stratton banner, and who this time saw their way clear to return to the support of their own party; to those whose energy led to the spreading of the anti-reciprocity propaganda, such as Mr. Soden, Mr. Kendry, Dr. Morrison, and other men whose time was given to platform work, and, possibly, to the Review, which put up the best campaign it knew how, and of which its friends say that it was the finest campaign in twenty-five years of political strife in West Peterborough.

It was the reciprocity gospel which so aroused the people of Peterborough that they rose in arms, to drown the vote of the Liberal stalwarts and of the machine. It required great effort to do this, in witness of which fact Mr. Burnham has only about 70 majority in all, though winning in the city by 400 majority. 'Twas a glorious victory, and there need be no workers prouder in Canada, or more jubilant, than the Conservatives of this very riding. Such a victory comes but seldom, against such odds. All hail to the victors!

It might be possible to rub it into the Examiner, and Mr. Stratton. But the man who wins is a man who can afford to be magnanimous. Of Mr. Stratton we can say that he fought the fight to the last ditch, that he used every means in his power to stave off defeat; that he worked so hard personally, and his organization worked so hard with him, that had it not been for the will of the people, strongly expressed, he might again have succeeded. But the people will not be denied. The Examiner's campaign was not at all clean—it seldom is at election times. In many ways it over-reached itself, but the people at large knew just what to expect, and its remarkable contortions really had little effect. The regime of Mr. Stratton had run its natural course, and in supporting an unpopular policy it met its Waterloo.

The people generally voted much as they talked — and it was Burnham all the way. Mr. Burnham himself was much stronger, politically, than at his previous appearance, and the misfortune which befell him at that time greatly helped to assure his election at this time. Mr. Burnham has promised the people of Peterborough that he will live up to the high standard required of representatives of this riding, and as a supporter of Mr. Borden, Peterborough will again be on the winning side. The Grit machine here will probably die a natural death, and the invincible Stratton is no more, and the people shall rule.

It is unnecessary to say that the Review is immensely delighted and pleased at the success of the Conservative cause. It voices the opinion generally expressed today in asserting that it was largely the working man of this manufacturing city that did the great work with the ballots. The Review feels delighted that its campaign in the interests of Mr. Burnham had such successful results—anyone likes to see victory at the end of hard labor for months. It was a great day for Mr. Burnham for the Conservatives and the Review.

LANDSLIDE IN THE COUNTRY TERRIFIC

Details of the Voting in the Country---How the Ridings Went---Eight Ministers Among the Slain.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Government were overwhelmingly defeated in yesterday's elections.

According to the summary to-day Mr. Borden will have a majority of 43 on the elections already held. This includes the Nationalists of Quebec, but without them he will have a working majority.

Eight of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Ministers are defeated, and but four of them survived the battle of the ballots. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself was elected in two constituencies, Quebec East and Soulanges, but Hon. G. P. Graham, Hon. Mackenzie King, Hon. William Paterson, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. Sir Frederick Borden, Hon. William Templeman and Hon. Jacques Bureau were unable to hold up their end. Hon. Dr. Beland, the new Minister, was also defeated in Montmagny, although he was elected in Beauce.

"Mr Burnham acknowledges with pleasure the very strong support given to the Conservative party and to his own candidature by the Review, which certainly did yeoman service throughout the campaign."

LAURIER'S END; THE GREAT SWEEP

What the Montreal Gazette To-day Says

Montreal, Sept. 21 — Under the heading of "The End of Laurier," The Gazette will say to-morrow.

"As the result of yesterday's voting on the issue which he raised and pressed upon the country, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has just one thing to do. He must go to the governor-general, offer his resignation as prime minister, and advise that Mr. Borden be sent for to form a cabinet. The Liberal government is more than defeated. It is destroyed. Of its members, Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson, who went to Washington to make the reciprocity agreement, have lost their seats in the house of commons. So have Mr. Fisher, Mr. Graham, Mr. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Mr. Templeman and Sir Frederick Borden, as well as Mr. Bureau, the solicitor general: Mr. Beland, the postmaster general, was also defeated in Montmagny, and is saved only because in the second constituency in which he was a candidate he was returned by a majority smaller than he had three years ago. Mr. Pugsley, the most reckless corruptionist the country ever saw, in the matter of offering bribes of public works, has escaped by the skin of his teeth. There has not been such a condemnation of a governmental party since 1878. To it all sections contributed. The criminals who tried to set up the east against the west, and the country against the city, were cast out in the west as well as in the east by the country constituencies as well as by those of the city, by the workers as well as by those who employ workers. The opposition could hardly have wished for more. The government is beaten. It's party is demoralized.

BURNHAM AND SEXSMITH MEMBERS FOR PETERBORO'

City Gave Conservative Candidate Big Majority of 415 and He Made Gains in the County Although Beaten—Sexsmith Rolled up Strong Majority of 590.

Burnham for West Peterboro (68)
Sexsmith in East Peterboro (590)

Getting away to a magnificent start in the city, with a majority of 428, Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Conservative candidate, withstood some strong majorities for Mr. Stratton in the country, notably Ennismore, and according to the Review's summing-up to day at two o'clock, he was elected Dominion member for West Peterboro with a majority of 68.

At this time one polling place in Galway had not been heard from.

The total vote for Burnham in the city was 2236 with 1921 for Stratton. In the country the Liberal vote was heavy, but everything considered, Mr. Burnham made a splendid showing, he in fact making some gains over his first campaign. He had only 16 votes to the good in the city then, and Mr. Stratton's total majority was 333.

The total vote in the city in the election of 1908 was Burnham 1818, Stratton 1802, a total of 3620 votes. The polling yesterday shows, Burnham 2236, Stratton 1921, a total of 4157 votes. There were 537 votes more polled in the city than in the previous election.

Mr. Sexsmith in the east was returned with the big majority of 590, which is a bigger victory than in 1908 when his figures were 382.

The heavy task of securing returns from outside points last-night, was facilitated to a considerable degree by the commendable work of the local C.P.R. agent Mr. W. McIlroy, and his assistants, who gave the best service ever accorded the Review at an election. Mr. H. O. Fiske and his assistant Mr. Henderson, operated the lantern in a highly satisfactory manner and for all these services, the Review is pleased to acknowledge in this issue.

And the "Hello! Girls," at the Bell Telephone Company, although called upon to work overtime, responded bravely and were, as usual, right on the job, and the young ladies did their work well.

FRIDAY, SEPT 22, 1911.

THE VICTORY

The victory in the country at large was so tremendous it seems almost impossible to realize the glad news. The landslide was an avalanche, with seven cabinet ministers gone down in the rout. The Laurier cabinet is wrecked beyond repair. It is probable that after such a tremendous reversal of policy, Sir Wilfrid will retire, and we shall have a Conservative government again for many years.

This is as it should be. The country has prospered greatly under the Liberal regime. That was because it continued substantially the old Conservative policy, and directed plenty of energy towards assisting in developing the transportation facilities of the country. That Mr. Borden will, with statesmanlike hand, turn to the task of continuing to develop the country, with a policy of Canada for the Canadians in view, there of course is no doubt. He will have many great problems to face. He will have many dark holes to clean up. Messes of graft and chicanery must be wiped up, and a good clean government substituted.

That Mr. Borden will rise to the occasion those who know him best are assured. He has the largeness of vision, the straightness and power of character. He will not be the picturesque figure, perhaps, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was, but he will be a business head, a strong and commanding personality and influence in the direction of Canadian destiny.

Perhaps there could be no more striking tribute to the sterling quality of Canadian nationality than the great sweep. On a policy which involved Canadian destiny, which threatened to seduce us from the British connection and the motherland, Canada has pronounced in a manner so unmistakeable that even those who knew the progress of sentiment, in the great silent vote, were astonished. Probably Mr. Borden himself was as astonished as anyone at the magnificence of the sweep. He confidently expected victory, and victory came to him thrice over.

The moral of the election is simply this;—That no one can touch the old flag and be safe. Britain and the Union Jack for Canada, and John Bull instead of the United States. Laurier never made a greater miscalculation when he thought that a trade alliance with the United States, as against British connection, would be popular, either with the farmers of Canada or with the urban population.

The defeat of seven cabinet ministers shows the desperate straits to which they had sunk. All the arguments adduced in favor of reciprocity counted for naught. In fact, the switch in the middle of the campaign from the effort to show the farmer that he would get better prices in the United States, to the effort to prove that it would mean cheaper living for the consumer was fatal. It showed both farmer and city man the insincerity of the figures produced.

It showed them much that was hurtful to both or either, and they united to defeat it. They could not see where they would gain by making Canada a backyard to the United States, and incidentally it might be remarked that this election has shown Clifford Sifton to be the keenest judge of the trend of political events in Canada today.

The sweep of the Conservatives in the west where reciprocity was supposed to be so strong, is astonishing. No less is it strong in the Maritime provinces. In fact there were great Conservative gains in every province of the Dominion, bar none. The west did not want reciprocity, as against Canadianism. The east did not, the far east did not.

It is very satisfactory indeed that Mr Borden is entirely independent of the aid of the Quebec Nationalists. It might have been a difficult and dangerous position had Bourassa succeeded in his object—that of attaining the balance of power.

This is happily averted, and Mr. Borden will be free to carry out his program, just as he pleases. Ontario did magnificently, with a turn over amounting to nearly 25. Such a sweep is only equalled by the Whitney sweep over the Ross government. It was tremendous, and one recalls with some humor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's message to the Toronto Liberals, "We shall sweep the country." That was correct enough, except that the country refused to agree.

Perhaps nowhere in the Dominion was such a victory attained as in West Peterborough. The ending of the Stratton regime of 25 years was a herculean task, and only a big issue could have done it. Mr. Stratton came back once too often, as every man does who stays long enough at the game, and Peterborough can be now placed in the column where Conservatives have a chance. Mr. Stratton was going to wipe Mr. Burnham off the face of the earth when he heard that the latter had been nominated. But the people had something to say. The people shall rule.

ONTARIO AGRICULTURE

The English mail brings reports of an address which Mr. C. C. James Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario recently delivered in London. In endeavoring to stimulate the emigration of British farmers and farm hands to Ontario, he touched on the early history of the province, says the Toronto News. The first settlements, he pointed out, began nearly 130 years ago, when at the close of the war of American Independence 100,000 Loyalists left the United States to seek new homes in Upper Canada. They preferred to remain under the Royal Standard. They brought little with them beyond a love for British law and British institutions, but while they were able to develop an agricultural wealth very slowly, they laid the foundations of what is to-day one of the most loyal sections of the whole British Empire. At the close of the Continental war some thirty years later, in 1816, there began a trek of British colonists that sent a steady stream into Ontario for 50 years and more—English, Scottish, Irish—forming settlements which for many years maintained their identity, and reproduced the customs, manners, dress and language of the old lands.

Mr. James continued: "The production of timber in the pioneer days was followed by the growing of grain for export, then the production of beef, mutton, pork, and dairy products raised the status of agriculture; to be followed by a more recent expansion of the fruit industry. Now, through the great increase in manufacturing towns and cities, a new era is setting in, namely, the specializing of agriculture, the intensive production of finished crops for local markets. There are splendid opportunities in Ontario to-day for the man with a family who possesses a moderate capital, to take up small plots of ground adjacent to our growing cities and towns, to grow garden stuff and small fruits, and to raise poultry to supply the local market. If the small farmer or gardener can control the labor question within his own family, he is sure of a good living and even of making a good surplus. There are many sections of Ontario to-day occupied by men who are well-to-do, who started a few years ago as farm hands with little or no capital."

He added: "I can take you to a section lying west of Toronto which twenty years ago was in large farms worth $100 an acre; to-day it is practically all cut up into small plots of 20 acres, producing vegetables and small fruits, and it is worth $300 and more per acre. And what will be interesting to you, many of the owners came to Ontario as farm laborers with no capital. They are making money, they are living amid the most comfortable social conditions, they are educating their children, and some of the latter will probably be among the most successful citizens of Canada a few years hence."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Oh, let us be joyful.

Canada wants to leave well enough alone.

The noblest victory of them all was West Peterborough.

Where are there any Liberals around Peterborough, anyway?

West Peterborough just had to have a government candidate, and naturally it selected Burnham.

It requires all the moral courage we can summon to prevent us dropping into spring poetry.

The Examiner will now have a chance to be an opposition organ. Let us hope it is more successful than as a government organ.

As we said before, and as we say again when the people rise, they will not be denied. All hail to the sensible people of Canada.

Who said Stratton?
Who said reciprocity?
Who said Laurier?
And who said Taft?

The changes around the country will be immense. No turnover so important could have been made. Now for a long stretch of good clean government.

Fielding and Paterson, the Rip Van Winkles, who went to Washington, were snowed under. Serves them right. They should have known better.

The Borden government must start in to be economical. It cannot afford to repaint the name Bessie Butler, but it can make the name Bessie Burnham.

The victory of Hon. W. A. Buchanan, a former Peterborough boy, over C. A. Magrath in Medicine Hat is surprising. The American vote, which is strong there, must have gone solidly for reciprocity.

And Mr. Kerr was beaten by about 500 majority. We heard a lot about his excellent prospects, but that 500 majority was about what the Review prophesied, in big type. He put up a strong fight, but East Peterborough did not want reciprocity, and it did want Sexsmith.

John Herron, of Macleod, the Conservative candidate, who supported reciprocity "because the people wanted it" is swamped with 400 majority. John should have imitated his leader, Borden, in coming out straight and strong. He would at least have got people's respect.

Even the old swimming hole could not save J.R.S. Wasn't it a "beaut" of a campaign argument, anyway? And it was written by Mr. Gadsby, the Collier man, who says he gets $7,000 a year. His "stuff" was a little too rich for even Peterborough to stomach.

There is one highly delightful and most satisfactory thing about the election. Mr. Borden has got a substantial majority, over Liberals and Nationalists combined. He can afford to be independent of the French element if needful. He will neither be swung by Bourassa nor influenced by him. The campaign results are without a doubt disappointing to Bourassa, for though he succeeded in undoing Laurier in Quebec, he did not do as well as expected, and he has not got the balance of power in the Dominion as he fondly hoped. Canada is in no danger from Bourassaism, thank God!

One great drawback to the success of the election night returns is that the Examiner did not have the manliness to acknowledge Mr. Stratton's defeat, and that it did not give many of the results from the country. When will the Examiner see that the people have eyes, and ears, and understanding; that they see through paltry tricks; are not deceived by bluffs and misrepresentations! Any policy that is designed to draw the wool over the eyes of the people, even for the time, reacts on the perpetrator. Some of these days the Examiner will learn a few things!

MURDERED BY BROTHER

George Wilson Is Killed After Drinking Bout In Digby, N.S.

Harry Wilson Enters House of His Brother on Maiden Lane and After a Dispute Takes Up a Shotgun and Puts Charge Into Victim's Heart—Children Watch Tragedy — Mother Found Dazed In a Nearby Barn.

Halifax, Sept. 22.—A murder took place in a small house on Maiden lane, Digby, about three o'clock yesterday morning, when Harry Wilson shot and killed his brother George. About 2.30 o'clock Harry Wilson called at the house of Ralph Hooper and said that he wanted matches, that there was a stranger in his house whom he had knocked out, and that he wanted a light and someone to accompany him back to see fair play. He then had blood on his arm. James Buchanan, a boarder at Hooper's, accompanied him and when they arrived at Wilson's, a short distance away, a light was burning. His brother George was in the house and Harry's two children, aged two years and eleven months respectively. Everything appeared to be all right. His wife was absent. George said: "If I have done anything wrong, shoot," at the same time pointing towards his heart, and continuing: "Put it there."

Harry grabbed a loaded shotgun and placed the barrel close to his brother's heart and fired, death being instantaneous. The wound caused a terrible flow of blood.

Buchanan notified Chief of Police Bowles, who entered Wilson's house and found him standing with his youngest baby in his arms, and looking at the body. Bowles immediately handcuffed him and conveyed him to the jail. It appears that while Buchanan was gone, Wilson took his eldest child and the gun and rushed over to his father's house, breaking in through the back door and carrying the child and gun to his father's room, said: "I have shot George and have got to die myself. Take the child and keep it and if you will not lend me a revolver to shoot myself I will drown myself off the Long Wharf."

Search was made for Harry Wilson's wife, who was found at 8.30 yesterday morning in a half-dazed condition in a pile of straw in a neighboring barn. She was clad in a night dress and said she had run away from the house and thought she had been asleep in the straw. She said her husband and his brother had been drinking and that her husband had torn her night dress as she was leaving the bed.

IS READY TO SHOOT.

Spanish Premier Warns Rioters of His Determination.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—The men employed in the building trades of this city obeyed the strike order, and quit work yesterday. Thirty thousand men are involved.

The military holds the capital in a close grip, and acting under the authority of the Imperial decree suspending the constitutional guarantees, the Government is maintaining a firm attitude toward the labor leaders who, it is claimed, are being used by revolutionary agents to further a campaign of violence against the state.

The streets had their usual appearance yesterday except for the presence of soldiers doing picket duty, and the absence of cabs.

Despatches from the provinces reporting the general situation throughout the country are closely censored, but it appears that the prompt and fearless course adopted by the Government has headed off anything like a general suspension of industrial activity which might develop into a revolution. All suspected persons, including the Republican and Socialist leaders, are under constant surveillance. Many houses have been searched and arms seized, and the prisons are filled with political suspects and rioters. The King remains in the capital.

The Premier said last night that the Government would respect the right of the workingmen to strike so long as they pursued lawful methods, but made it clear that if employes of the public services quit work without having given legal notice, summary measures would be taken. The first sign of revolt would be, he said, the signal for the troops to use their arms without hesitation. He added:

"I am determined once for all to finish with these mutterings of revolution."

Despatches from Valencia, Ferrol, Corunna, Seville and Saragossa, describe those places as tranquil to-day.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

This year to date 110,000 British emigrants have left for Canada.

Father Bernard Vaughan is coming for another visit to Canada.

The large roller skating rink on Waterloo street, Brantford, was destroyed by fire which broke out about seven o'clock yesterday morning. Loss $15,000.

A battalion of troops which arrived at Jativa, Spain, from Madrid yesterday was received with volleys of stones from rioters. The troops fired on the mob, killing one townsman and wounding four others. The soldiers occupied the place.

The divers who were engaged yesterday in making an examination of the White Star liner Olympic, which was rammed by the British cruiser Hawke, report that the vessel suffered extensive injuries below the waterline.

Girl Run Over.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Elizabeth Stevenson, a three-year-old child, met death at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, when she was run over in front of her house, 34 Gallery square, by a team belonging to the Shedden Forwarding Co.

South African Defence.

London, Sept. 22.—Lord Methuen will remain commander-in-chief of South Africa until the Union Government has definitely adopted a scheme of defence. It is expected the plan for a small regular striking force and territorial army from the population will be initiated in February.

By Acton Seymour

"Ready-made ones, eh?"

"That's a part of the system, up here, but it has to be worked just right when the matter of Corran's properties are up. You've got to know your men. Corran's friends are pretty thick. You'll fall down unless you deal with me. I've been in it long enough to know how to operate and cover all tracks. And if tracks ain't covered, you'll have a tough gang on your backs. Corran's scheme has left an army of fools to back up his estate——" he flapped his hand at the window, outside of which the bands were playing. "But even fools can put the torch to timber lands that your company grabs. It's all got to be done right! I can do it right, and hide behind the law, for I've been getting ready."

"What's your price?"

"Half. Not lands. I can't use lands. But half the valuation in cash. The Great Trust will be getting practically the other fifty per cent. My scheme grabs the land for 'em — they don't have to buy."

George felt sick at heart. This buzzard was so promptly ready to tear at the dead man's possessions.

"Of course, this is no time to get down to details," went on Wiggin. "I'm just up here to tell you that I've got the thing in my hands." He stretched out his bony fingers, looked like talons. "Get your report in, and wake the big fellows up — for there are others, if the Great Trust Co. don't grab it."

"I'll attend to the matter in the right way," replied George grimly.

Wiggin made cautious examination of the corridor through the crack of the door before he ventured out. He left with promise to "show goods" to the Great Trust Co. as soon as the young man got the ear of his superiors and was ready to talk business.

George kept vigil for the most of that night. The tumult outside did not trouble him as much as the plot that Wiggin had exposed. It was plain why the old man had been so precipitate with a stranger — the Great Trust Co. had dealt with him before. Probably, the company was entirely ready to dealt with him again. It was the money of the Great Trust that George was carrying in his pocket at that time. His future prospects were in the keeping of the company. He was their employee.

On the other side was a girl that he barely knew. Perhaps, she would not listen to a stranger who came to her with words of warning against the old man who had been her father's intimate. Women did not usually understand business well enough to determine what dishonesty was.

He could not warn her without exposing the men who were powerful to help or harm him.

After he had breakfasted, finding a place at the table in company of the sleepy, sullen roisterers of the night before, he went and sat on the porch of the tavern, trying to straighten out a line of action for himself.

Romeo Bragg found him there.

"I ain't exactly what you might call sober, yet," acknowledged Mr. Bragg, "but I'm all over celebratin', and ready to start. And, judgin' from what you said to me yesterday, I figger you've got consid'able appetite for the trail. So, what say?"

It was a call to duty put straight. But Harry George was still floundering in his difficulties.

"I reckon you'll outfit like the rest of 'em, at the company store," pursued Bragg. "I'll go across with you and help pick out."

That summons bore in upon George the truth that he was meditating treachery to his employers. He had money that belonged to them — he was not ready to take more of their goods, not at that moment.

While he was hesitating, Clare Corran swept past on her black horse. She bowed to George proudly.

"Reckon Queen Clare is goin' cut to the grave," suggested Bragg. "Wa'n't much chance for her to mourn there, yesterday!"

"Bragg, I'm not ready to start today" blurted the young man. "I've got some business to attend to."

His guide stared at him a little while, but George's expression did not invite comment. So Bragg strolled away.

VII.

During the forenoon, the roisterers went straggling out of town. Bill Kyle took away his crew, after he had made some biting comments on the hustling qualities of certain foresters that he knew. Pennell did not retort. He found no profit in converse with Bill Kyle.

"I'll tell Fatty Niles to stop running," he said, by way of parting word. "And I reckon you can do the Great Trust as much good by sittin' on that porch as you can any other way."

As the day wore on, George was less inclined to seek the girl and expose what he had learned. It seemed a rather cowardly piece of tale bearing. Probably Wiggin had it in his power to convince her that this stranger, representing a land-grabbing corporation, was lying to her for his own ends. The plan of going to Wiggin and threatening to expose him unless he either gave up his plot or his trusteeship would appear to be only a futile bit of blackmail. George had nothing except his own unsupported word.

When night came, he was still undecided. He cursed himself as a decidedly worthless tool. He seemed to be of no use to himself or to others. With every [illegible] that passed, Niles and Smart were getting farther away from him, carrying his job with them.

His conscience suggested that he had a duty to perform in the interests of Clare Corran, but he could not make up his mind how to do it — he was not absolutely sure that he had made up his mind to do it, anyway. These reflections rendered him miserable — for he seemed to himself to be both cowardly and dishonest.

No young man, starting out on his life work, ever passed a more heartbreaking, courage-sapping day.

The next morning, he was even more disinclined to start on the trail of his woods mentors. Romeo Bragg ventured reproach when he was told to wait.

"You don't think, do ye, that you're goin' to set on that piazza and get into a trance and see where they are? The only way to catch them two men is to hiper!"

"I'm running my own business!" snapped George.

"No, you ain't," said Bragg, over his shoulder, as he departed. "You ain't even walkin' it!"

Jepson Wiggin passed him several times, on his way to and from the post office. But the young man made no signal that he wished to see him in private — and Wiggin was too wise to accost the Great Trust Co man in public. The old man was not worried. He winked at George slyly, evidently impressed by the fact that the agent was awaiting word from headquarters.

On the second day of his waiting an alert stranger arrived at the tavern in Corran-cache, coming in by the logging train.

He paid no atention to any of the porch loungers, among whom was George.

Obtrusively, he nailed up a circular advertising a certain make of crosscut saws, and then asked the landlord the way to Jepson Wiggin's, as though eager to sell saws. George still immersed in his bitter thoughts calling himself first fool and then knave, as he hesitated between his personal interests and the leaving of Clare Corran to her own fate, paid little attention to the business-like stranger.

The landlord came and sat by George, after the mail had been distributed and the loafers had gone. It was dull once more in Corran-cache and the landlord liked conversation. He pointed at an aged Indian, who had sat in stolid silence for some hours on the end of the porch platform.

"Know him?"

Harry shook his head.

"That's old Noel, the Bear. Guess how old he is!"

The young man did not venture.

"Probably over a hundred. My grandfather used to know him, and he was a man, then, Noel was. Says he goes off into the wilderness and catches a beaver every fall, and eats his tail, and that makes him live a long time. He was chief of his tribe when there was any tribe to be chief of. Lives over across the border somewhere. Don't see him round here very often. He ain't much of a feller to talk, but mebbe I can get something out of him. Know anything about Injuns?"

To be continued.

SOMETHING ABOUT YEAST

A Description of This Much-Needed Ingredient in Bread-Making

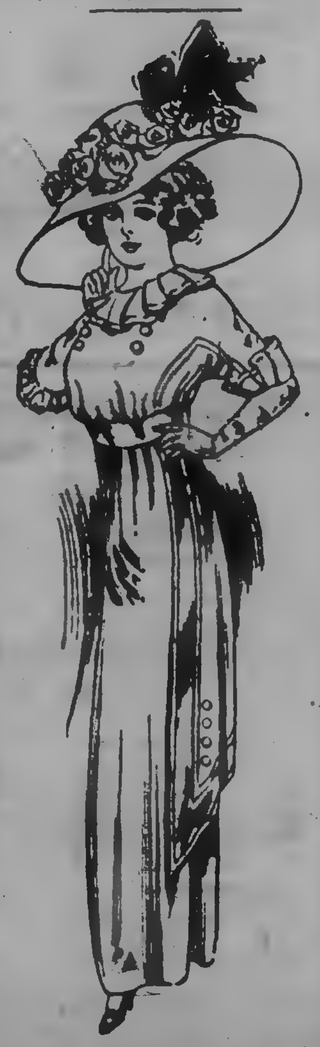
A writer in a recent issue of Pure Products, gives the following interesting information about yeast:—

"Yeast is a fungus, and belongs to the same family as the mushroom, for which most people have a distinct liking. The age-long use of yeast for bread-raising purposes proves that this fungus is capable of thoroughly agreeing with the human organism. In view of this fact it is somewhat surprising that immense amounts of beer yeast are annually allowed to go to waste from every brewery in the country.

There are several circumstances which have seemed to stand in the way of employing beer yeast in food production. The two principal ones are its dark color and its bitterness, due to the simultaneous use of hops in the brewing processes.

"These properties of beer yeast, however, may easily be removed. Beer yeast is not suitable for baking purposes because it grows in a cold medium and does not possess a great enough raising power for the purposes of the baker. There is no question about the nutritive value of yeast, since weight for weight, it is quite comparable in nutritive value to the best beer.

"For direct consumption in the fresh condition yeast must be put into a suitable form. According to the method of Kleinschmidt, compressed yeast which has been deprived of its bitter substance, may be melted with edible fats, such as butter, the result being a very tasty paste, which can be spread directly on bread. Dry yeast can be used in this same manner, and experience has already shown that the addition of yeast to certain sauces and salad dressings is attended with very favorable results. However, it is necessary that the question should receive a thorough study from experts on cooking."



CHARMING MIDSUMMER FROCK

Black striped white cotton voile was used in the making of this dainty frock. The tunic or over-dress is particularly pretty and extends from side to side around back only. Bias folds of cerise satin trim and run up to bodice under a girdle and on to kimona sleeve. The latter is finished with a turned frill of white lawn, edged with a narrow band of cerise satin, and matches the frilled collar. The buttons are black velvet.

QUITE UNEXPECTED

When he proposed marriage she asked him for time to think over it. "This is so unexpected," she said. He gave her the necessary time, and she finally decided that he fulfilled all the requirements of the situation.

Then they reached a point where they could discuss matters calmly.

"Of course," he said, jokingly, "it wasn't really expected at all."

"Oh, yes, it was," she replied.

"Absurd!" he exclaimed. "A girl always says that. She knows what is coming, because she is naturally an expert in such matters."

"I thought I was, but you fooled me," she insisted.

"And it was a complete surprise?"

"It was."

"I don't understand it," he commented.

"Well," she explained ingenuously, "you had overlooked so many splendid chances that I gave you for a proposal that I had begun to think nothing ever would give you nerve enough to speak out; so it really was unexpected."

"Oh," he said, and that was all. There didn't seem to be anything else to say.

Cider Without Apples

To every gallon of cold water put one pound of dark brown sugar, half an ounce of tartaric acid, and three tablespoonfuls of yeast. Shake all well together. If made in the evening it will be ready for use next morning.

Warwick township's tax rate for 1911 is seven mills on the dollar.

FOR THE MOTHER

What does a girl "owe" her mother?

To manifest an interest in whatever affects or amuses her.

To seek the mother's comfort and pleasure in all things before one's own.

Not to forget, though she may be old and wrinkled, she still loves pretty things.

Frequently to make her simple gifts, and be sure that they are appropriate and tasteful.

To remember she is still a girl at heart, so far as delicate little attentions are concerned.

To lift the many burdens from shoulders that have grown stooped, perhaps in waiting upon her girls and in working for them.

Never by word or deed to signify that the daughter's word and hers differ, or that one feels the mother is out-of-date.

To study her tastes and habits, her likes and dislikes, and cater to them in an unobtrusive way.

To bear patiently with all her peculiarities and infirmities, which, after all, may be the result of a life of care and toil.

To defer to her opinions, even if they do seem antiquated.

To do one's best in keeping the mother youthful in appearance, as well as in spirit, by helping with her costume and the little details of her toilet.

Not to shock her by turning into ridicule her religious prejudices, if they happen to be at variance with one's own advanced views.

To introduce to her one's friends and enlist her sympathies in one's projects, hopes, and plans, that once again she may revive her own youth.—Home Companion.

PRESERVE DONT'S

Paste These Up Near the Preserving Kettle For Reference

Don't make a mistake and wait until the special fruit is over, and then pay the highest prices for it.

Don't think overripe fruit makes good preserves or jellies.

Don't ever use anything but the best materials for good results.

Don't use what is called "A" or soft white sugar, or brown; use granulated white sugar for all preserves and jellies.

Don't use granulated sugar for spiced fruits; use light brown only.

Don't make spiced fruit too sweet; four pounds of light brown sugar to seven pounds of fruit is a good proportion.

Don't use cold sugar for jellies, measure the strained fruit juice; to each pint allow one pound of the best granulated sugar. Put it on a platter in the oven to heat and add it to the boiling liquid.

Don't put hot preserves in cold glasses or jars and not expect accidents; have the glasses or jars in scalding water, rinse well, then fill as quickly as possible.

Don't allow preserves to stand about after they are cold; put melted paraffin on, cover with lids, wash off every trace of stickiness, and put in a cool dark place for future use.

WEDDING BELLS

BRABASON—WOODS.

A very quiet wedding took place today at the home of the bride's mother, when Mr. John F. Brabason, Sunderland, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Beatrice Woods, daughter of Mrs. Wm. G. Woods, William street, north.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jas. Wallace in the presence of the friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The house was beautifully decorated with palms, asters and ferns, and made a pleasant back ground to the happy and animated scene.

The bride, who was given away by Mr Chas. Lithgow, looked very charming in a navy blue travelling suit with touch of tan and hat to match. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held by her friends. The happy couple left for Chicago and Detroit, and on their return will reside at Blackwater Jct. Their many friends join in wishing them many years of happy wedded life.

The visitors from outside points were as follows;—Miss Irene Munroe, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Tocher, Sunderland; Miss May Lyons, Toronto; Miss Martha Parker, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cowan, Cannington; Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Cannington; Mr. Ryerson Brabason, Sunderland; Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Lytle, Oakwood; Mr. and Mrs. Tait, and Miss Tait, Oakwood; Miss Myrt Brunker, Woodstock; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Perrin, Little Britain.—Lindsay Post.

ORDERS TO LAST FOR FOUR MONTHS

A contract for the construction of 25 large type of locomotives has been given by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to the Canadian Locomotive Company of Kingston, Ont. This announcement was made from Montreal to-day and with their present capacity this contract would occupy the company's entire attention for four or five months. Arrangements are being made however, to double the capacity of the company forthwith.

Orders are now being filled by the Canadian Locomotive Company at Kingston for locomotives for the following Canadian railways—The Canadian Pacific Railway, The Grand Trunk Pacific railway, The Canadian Northern railway, The Intercolonial railway and The Algoma Central railway.

The wear and tear upon locomotives is a serious item of expense to the Canadian railroads and necessitates constant orders for new engines. In addition to this there is of course a constantly increasing demand for locomotives to supply motive power for the new branch lines which are being built in all directions, especially in the West.

One of the most notable triumphs of modern corset making. Designed in harmony with the principles of anatomy, the Nemo makes not only for comeliness and style of appearance, but for health and comfort. CONSERVATIVES CELEBRATED BIG VICTORY FOR BURNHAM Procession and Jubilation—Addresses by Victorious Candidate and Workers at the Grand Opera House.

It was a big night for the workers and supporters of the successful candidate, Mr. J. H. Burnham, and short addresses were in order at the Grand opera house, where a big meeting was held after it was ascertained that Peterborough had undergone a change and had elected Mr. Burnham.

Sufficient reports, too, had been received to warrant the belief that Mr. R. L. Borden would be the next Premier of Canada. With the 57th band leading the way, the victorious candidate, and a number of his lieutenants, and thousands of wildly excited citizens, made up a procession, the like of which has not been seen in Peterborough for a long time.

It didn't take long for the opera house to become filled with people, and when Mr. Burnham appeared on the stage he received an uproarious ovation On a table and guarding a large Union Jack a bulldog quietly took in the proceedings.

Mr James Kendry acted as chairman. Thunderous applause greeted Mr. Burnham as he stepped forward to speak.

HE WAS SMILING.

The victorious candidate said that he wished to thank all those both Liberals and Conservatives, who had stood firmly by the effort made to free West Peterborough from the burden of tyranny, bossism and corruption that had so long rested upon the people's shoulders. But he was still more pleased that the Laurier government had been overthrown. Surely it was high time that the "lack of conscience" should be rebuked, and that the attempt to put Canada in the commercial and fiscal control of the U.S. should be ended, and ended forever. He would do his best to administer the affairs of West Peterborough at Ottawa impartially and properly. He was in favor of improving old as well as new Canada, and would do all he could to that end Every facility should be provided for the expansion of business and the accommodation of the people of West Peterborough. He thanked the ladies for the part they had taken. No one would rejoice more than they that Canada would now be able to breathe freely and to continue on her good old British way rejoicing. He thanked the Old Countrymen also for the interest they had taken in Canadian affairs. To his workers, throughout the riding he would have other opportunities of returning his thanks and acknowledging their inestimable services.

Mr. Kendry said that West Peterborough had at last elected one honest man. The Conservatives, he held, had fought hard and fairly. Not one cent had been spent. "We had to fight barrels of money," said the speaker. The Conservatives had been fighting for a long time, and he knew that Mr. Stratton would run till at last he was defeated. Mr. Kendry called the attention of the audience to the fact that the Examiner gave Mr. Stratton a majority of 61 on the bulletin sheet. He, however, wished to say that if it was possible for the ballot boxes to be altered, the Liberals were the ones to do the work.

He wished to thank the English friends. They had the courage to come out and say, "What we have we'll hold," and had supported the old flag. There was no doubt but that Mr. Borden would be the next Premier of Canada. Laurier's Ministers were being defeated. King, Paterson, Fielding and others had gone down to defeat.

CHEERED FOR SEXSMITH.

Great was the cheering when Mr. Kerdry announced that Mr. Sexsmith had carried East Peterborough by between 500 and 600 majority. East Peterborough had said no lawyers need apply.

R. J's. FINE ADDRESS.

It was without avail that Mr. R. J. Soden pleaded tiredness and a weak voice the audience wanted to hear him He acknowledged the kindness with which he had been received during the fight. "I tell you," he said, "you can always depend on R. J. Soden when they dare to lay hands on the old flag."

He referred in sincere words to the worth of Mr. Burnham as a man. "He was gold all through," said Mr Soden. "and he pans out a whole lot better than he looks in the sample." He was proud of Canadians for the stand they had taken for the flag and the mother country.

He urged that all Canadians put aside petty things and work together for the best interests of their country. They had at last slapped Taft in the face and said to him, "Mind your own business." And with the people coming from other countries the thought of each should be, "I'll make him a Canadian patriot."

Other short addresses were made, and some new returns given to the big meeting, and the hearty singing of the National Anthem brought the rejoicings in the opera house to a close.

TWO PERFORMANCES OF THE "BEAUTY SPOT" TO-MORROW

Pretty Faces, Catchy Music and Frank Desdon the Bass Comedian.

If you do not arrange to see the "Beauty Spot" on Saturday matinee or night you will miss a treat, for the "Beauty Spot" is a musical comedy that is full of tuneful melodies and funny sayings. Most of the songs are the kind that stay with you that you want to whistle or hum all day. Some of the favorites being the following numbers—

"Wading," "She Sells Sea Shells." "I'd Give All My Life For You." "Cupid the Dear," "The Boulevard Glide," "Creole Days," "Goo-Goo," "A Prince of Borneo," "Foolish Questions," "Cooee," "When Cupid Comes a Tapping" "My World is a Dream of You," "Dreaming," "Hurrah! Hurrah," "He Loved Her Tender," "In a Hammock."

There has been a large advance sale for both appearances already. Don't neglect to see the "Beauty Spot" on Saturday matinee and night at the Grand Opera House.

PAVEMENT IS MAKING TROUBLE

Hastings Star—We understand that the council has been served with a notice by D. O'Connell, Solicitor, of Peterboro, acting for the trustees of the Presbyterian church, that unless the council changes the grade of the sidewalk in front of the Presbyterian Church, and rectifies some other alleged difficulties in the work done there, by the 30th of this month, that a suit for damages will be instituted.

The trouble, we understand, arises out of the pavements being laid lower than was desired by some of the members of the congregation and on account of some of the roots of some of the trees being cut to allow the pavement to be laid.

Peel County fair was held at Brampton yesterday with 5,000 present.

Fire last night destroyed the National Casket Co. factory, at Orangeville.

Canned Music

During the late war with Spain, General Miles, at that time ostensibly the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, got himself into all sorts of trouble by saying that the troops were being served with embalmed meat, referring to the meat done up in cans and sold for the use of the Army, says Washingtonia. Of course he had in mind the age of the prepared article, as well as the chemicals used for preserving the meat. This was before the days of pure food laws, and at a time now when it is claimed the packers went upon the theory that any old thing was good enough to can, and that some chemical preservatives are actually beneficial to health.

"Canned Music" does not stand in this class. Some of the old songs may be old, in fact some of them are old, for they were written by such eminent composers as Handel, and Hayden, and Meyerbeer, and Gluck, but they are fresh and as young as when they were first given to the public. Those songs sung by the best singers, and the music accompanying them, rendered by the orchestras and bands of Europe and America, has been canned, and so perfectly has the work been done that when served up from the can they are almost equal to the best produced in the opera house.

Every evening hundreds of thousands of people listen to a delightful entertainment without the trouble of going to the opera house. They can have this entertainment when the opera houses are closed and the professional singers and musicians are taking their summer vacation. There was a time when eminent musicians as Sousa railed against this music, but now Sousa and his incomparable band are playing through the canned process to thousands who have never had an opportunity to hear the band any other way.

It is not alone the music of this high class that one can get from his can, but if he desires he can have that of the popular order, and the reproducing instruments are especially fine in rendering sacred music, and there are few church choirs that render as sympathetically and well the grand old hymns of Luther, Wesley, Watts, and others who have made their songs of praise so touchingly beautiful. The chants and songs of the early missionaries had more to do with civilization among the barbarous and savage nations than the priestly vestments, church ceremonies or eloquent sermons. Music is a great civilizer; not only a great civilizer, but a great refiner. The household wherein music is found is always more peaceful, more refined than is the one where music is never heard. Edison in his invention of the Phonograph was a greater benefactor to the human race than even Bell, who gave us the telephone. All styles of Edison Phonographs sold on easy payments. Prices from $19.50 up. Come in and hear them.

GOLF

Little things sometimes determine the results of championships. In 1909 Robert Gardiner won the national championship at golf because Chandler Egan unwisely ate a piece of hot apple pie between the morning and afternoon rounds. The betting was overwhelmingly in Egan's favor and his friends declare that Egan suffered so much from the effects of that bite of pie that it was due to it that he was beaten in the finals 4 to 2. Harold Hilton, the British amateur champion, defeated Frederick Herreshoff in the finals for the American title on the 37th hole, after Herreshoff had evened the match on the last hole. At no time was Herreshoff up in his match, and at one time he was six down, and to many the chase seemed hopeless. By superb golf the American squared the match on the 36th hole. Now comes the luck. On his second shot Hilton's ball hit a stone and bounded on the green. This bit of luck, for when a ball hits a foreign object the chances of it being lost or found in a more or less unplayable lie are ten to one, enabled him to win the extra hole and the championship.

HOCKEY

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Mr. Lol Solman, baseball magnate, lacrosse promoter and theatrical manager, has entered a new role and this winter will be manager and director of the new hockey arena, his appointment having been made at a meeting held in Montreal recently.

With Mr. Solman breaking into the hockey business, his Island pets, the Tecumsehs, will enter into the field of professional hockey, they having purchased the franchise held by Mr. O'Brien of Renfrew. A meeting was held yesterday, when officers were elected and a letter drafted to Secretary Quinn, of the National Hockey Association, seeking admittance into the association, and at the same time asking for copies of the constitution. Tecumsehs, who leave to-day after the Minto cup, will not be idle on their way to the coast, but will endeavor to land some western hockey stars, one a Winnipeg man, who has been recommended by McGregor.

With Tecumsehs breaking into the game, it will be a case of Torontos and Indians on the ice this winter, for Percy Quinn has already a franchise for a Toronto team. Both teams are out to get the best, and Toronto may rest assured of seeing some great hockey.

The officers of the new Tecumseh hockey club are: President and manager, Charlie Querrie; vice-president and secretary, E. A. Williams; executive, Fred Hamby, Peter Small and Robert Merritt.

The new arena, according to the contract, has to be completed by December 15th.

RETURNS IN BRIEF.

Where The Conservative Gains Were Piled Up.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—The lists of gains form a fair summary of the polling.

There are four elections still to be held, every one of which will undoubtedly favor the Conservatives; so that Mr. Borden's majority will be in the neighborhood of 50.

In the last House Sir Wilfrid Laurier had a majority of 44, without the Speaker.

The landslide was chiefly confined to Ontario, though every province contributed something towards the final result, except Manitoba and Alberta, which stand exactly as they were.

In Ontario there were 14 Liberals who came through safely, though this figure may be changed. Smyth, in East Algoma, was reported late as having gone down, though possibly the mining district may pull him through. There were 20 Conservative gains in Ontario and 5 Liberal gains.

The defeat of McGrath in Medicine Hat is particularly to be regretted, but in all probability a seat will be found for him. He was one of Mr. Borden's best men from the west and it was expected that he would win handily. The Conservatives, however, pulled through John Herron in MacLeod, where it was thought that he would be overcome.

British Columbia still incomplete, the figures not being in from Comox-Atlin, where Clements is expected to beat Duncan Ross.

Conservative Gains.

The seats won over from the Government are:

Ontario (20)—Brockville, South Huron, South Oxford, West Northumberland, Stormont, East Simcoe, North Bruce, South Grey, West Peterboro, Ottawa (2), Kingston, Brantford, Wentworth, Brant, North Perth, South Ontario, North York, North Middlesex.

Quebec (17) Conservatives and Nationalists — Yamaska, Maskinonge, Three Rivers, Berthier, Compton, Hochelaga, Montmorency, Joliette, Chambly-Vercheres, Dorchester, Nicolet, Quebec County, Montmagny, Rimouski, Brome, Labelle, Pontiac.

Saskatchewan (2) — Saskatoon, Prince Albert.

Manitoba (2)—Provencher, Brandon.

British Columbia (1)—Nanaimo.

Nova Scotia (4)—Queen's-Shelburne, King's, Hants, Lunenburg.

New Brunswick (2)—King's and Albert, Charlotte.

Prince Edward Island (2)—Queen's (2).

Liberal Gains.

The Government gains are:

Ontario (2)—Norfolk, East Algoma.

Quebec (4)—West Quebec, Soulanges, Drummond-Arthabaska, Sherbrooke.

Nova Scotia (1)—Halifax (one seat.)

Prince Edward Island (1)—King's.

Manitoba (2)—Lisgar, Dauphin.

Alberta (1)—Medicine Hat.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DENSE THRONG SAW BULLETINS

Service Given by Review Made Big Hit With Crowds

The Review bulletin service last night was appreciated by hundreds of citizens, who crowded along Hunter street and watched with eagerness for the reports as they were flashed on the screen. They did not mind the mud and the weather so great was their interest in the returns, and men and women elbowed for space on the road and sidewalk.

The Review had the C. P. R. wires leased and provided a most efficient service. When the results from the different constituencies came in they were flashed on the large screen erected opposite the Review office for the occasion, and pictures of Borden, Burnham and other prominent Conservative members and workers as well as views of the western mountains and typical western scenes helped to soothe the nerves of the anxious spectators. At 5.20 o'clock the first returns in the local fight began to come in and citizens commenced to arrive simultaneously, keeping up a continuous scramble to secure seats of vantage, everyone being eager to have their eyes on the bulletins.

The glorious results were received with tumultuous applause and cheers upon cheers resounded upon the flash of the Union Jack, members of the Royal family, the shining lights in the political world, etc., during the intervals, when the sheet said "Good Luck." "Good Night," it was an enthusiastic hand-shaking crowd that dispersed after a four hours entertainment.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to meet Dr. Symonds after the service.

A PREDICTION

On Saturday, September 16th, as on every other day for the last month, the Review predicted defeat for Laurier. This was not campaign poppycock but was based on information received from the various centres. But of course the Review did not, and no one else expected such a tremendous landslide. Such a sweep as took place was too good to be true.

Here are the words of the Review, as printed on Saturday, Sept. 16th, in big type on the front page:

"The indications are that J. R. will go down and out next Thursday along with the Laurier administration, for one is on a par with the other."

This was only one. It was hard work to vote down Mr. Stratton, but the confidence of those who knew how the workingman's vote was going was not mistaken.

PERSONAL

The Rev. Dr. Symonds, of Montreal, and the Rev. Canon Plumptre, of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, are visitors at St. Luke's rectory.

THEIR JOBS DID NOT SUIT EITHER

Immigrant Family Did Not Have Encouraging Start

A family of six, consisting of the parents and four children, three boys and one girl, the eldest of whom is a boy, aged thirteen called on the immigration officer last week, in a rather forlorn state, seeking aid. The family landed at Quebec on Sept. 8 where they were detained for a week.

Mr. Howson had not been previously informed of their coming as is usual. The husband said he was a carter, and he was accordingly placed with Mr. White of the White Cartage Company in that capacity. It was soon shown that he was not accustomed to horses and was more of a drivers helper. He is now with the Quaker Oats Company. The thirteen year old boy was taken by a farmer near Keene who offered to bring him up and keep him supplied with money in return for the boy helping on the farm. The boy came back however and is now at the Children's Home.

AMERICANS AMAZED AT THE CRUSHING DEFEAT OF THE PACT

Political Effect on Taft's Fortunes a Problem--The Trusts, Taft and Clark are Blamed.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Politicians of both parties are dumfounded at the defeat of the reciprocity bill in Canada. Misled by the optimistic reports from American newspapermen sent to "help across the border," official Washington never dreamed that there was serious opposition to the pact on the part of a majority of the Canadian people.

Every one is asking what the effect will be upon the political fortunes of President Taft, who, even his friends privately admit, was chiefly concerned about this phase of the question from the start.

A very significant remark was made yesterday by an official of the State Department, who had a great deal to do with negotiating the tariff treaty. He said: "Of course, we are sorry that Canada is not going to give reciprocity a trial, but so far as the effect upon Mr. Taft's political future is concerned, there is really nothing to fear. The President had to have something to give him standing as a fighting man before the country. Up to the negotiation of the treaty with Canada, his friends were saying: 'O, what's the use?' His advocacy of the agreement here and his success in forcing it through Congress has increased his chances of election. That is what he wanted and Canada's vote does not affect that at all."

But this is a friendly view of the situation. The insurgent Republicans who are the real low-tariff members of the party, are overjoyed at the prospect of further embarrassment to the President. They say he has failed again, and that is all the people of the United States will see in it. He has vetoed general tariff reduction and promised relief from the reciprocity bill which will not be forthcoming.

"If it was a bad thing for Canada, then it must have been a good thing for us," is the way some of the Democrats are talking. They will also have to defend their support of the bill in the elections a year from this fall.

The tone of the comment both by public men and the press is pretty much the same. The American and Canadian "trusts" are blamed for the defeat of the measure in Canada. Speaker Champ Clark, of the House of Representatives, is also blamed. His annexation speech made in Congress last winter gave the cue to the Opposition in Canada and furnished them with ammunition they were looking for. It is realized here that the explanation of the Speaker that he did not mean it seriously did not carry weight because it was known full well that he did mean it seriously when he said it, and that his attitude was similar to that of a vast number of American public men.

The Washington Post, a strong Taft organ, thinks it will not interfere with President Taft's political ambitions. It says: "Naturally, the insurgents will try to utilise the defeat of reciprocity to embarrass Taft, but the country is not likely to blame Mr. Taft for Canada's action. On the contrary, the presumption becomes stronger that as Canada does not approve of the pact, it must have proved a good thing for the United States if carried through. Possibly, the relations between Canada and the United States will not be improved by the rejection of reciprocity, but fair-minded Americans will not cherish resentment against the Canadians for their decision. The reciprocity arrangement would not have been worth a straw if it had not been a fair and free proposition, to be accepted or rejected by either country in the light of its own interests."

Clark Dodge Blame.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Speaker Champ Clark made the following statement here yesterday:

"My remarks about annexation did not do half as much to defeat reciprocity in Canada as did President Taft's speech in which he insisted on hurrying up agreeing to reciprocity in this country before Great Britain established her imperial policy of tariff with preferential rates for the colonies.

"He and I were both quoted by the anti-reciprocity crowd in Canada, he more than I, but the chances are that the quotations from his speeches and mine did not have half so much to do with defeating reciprocity as did the corruption funds sent from both this country and Great Britain into Canada.

Taft Is Sorry.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 23.—President Taft had a heart-to-heart talk here yesterday with the leaders of the different Republican factions in Illinois. He still was downcast by the defeat of the reciprocity agreement in Canada but his only reference to that subject was made earlier in the day, when he addressed the workingmen in a local manufacturing establishment where farming implements are made.

"I was sorry to hear that in Canada they do not care to have closer commercial relations with us," he said. "If reciprocity had been adopted we could have gotten our agricultural implements into Canada at a substantial decrease. But I guess we can get along."

THE TRENT CANAL WORK

Some of those employed on the construction work of the Trent Valley canal system, who foolishly seem to think that because the government has changed, all construction work must stop, should be assured that nothing of the kind will happen. The work of conserving the waters of the system will be proceeded with energetically. The reservoir dams under construction will be finished, the wharf at Peterborough will be completed, the dredging at Lindsay will be carried on, and between Young's Point and Lakefield the dredging will go on without a stop.

While the Borden Government has not yet taken office, Mr. Borden's policy will undoubtedly be to pursue the work of construction and conservation carried on in this district. He made a public utterance at Campbellford on the subject in August, when he said that, if returned, conservation work would be pushed with great celerity. All work in hand will go on as usual, to completion.

OFFICIALS FOR THE CUP GAMES

Trustee McBride Says They Must Be Western Men.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Premier McBride, who is the western trustee of the Minto Cup, wired President Murphy this morning that he would not agree to other than western officials for the cup games between Vancouver and the Tecumsehs. The N.L.U. champions are billed to arrive at Vancouver to-night, and it is likely that they will submit.

Concrete Wall Fell on Him.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 23.—Ed. McVegan is at the hospital in a serious condition last night, as the result of being crushed while working at the Electrical Development plant. A large portion of a concrete wall fell in upon him.

Steamer Rosedale Released.

Kingston, Sept. 23.—Steamer Rosedale, aground Lachine Lake, was released undamaged. The steamer Pellatt is still aground at Iroquois and in a dangerous position.

LAURIER GOES BACK TO THE CAPITAL; HAS NOTHING TO SAY

Mr. Borden Will Arrive in Ottawa on Sunday—Conservative Victory is Popular.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier returned to Ottawa Thursday night. His car was attached to the 10.50 train from Quebec. He was met at the depot by a few personal friends and immediately drove to his residence, accompanied by his private secretary.

The defeated Prime Minister made no statement, and, while he looks worn and fatigued, he is in good spirits.

Mr. Borden has wired that he may arrive in Ottawa on Sunday. If he comes at any other time, the Conservatives are arranging to tender him a demonstration in keeping with his victory. Personally Mr. Borden is a great favorite in Ottawa. He has always evinced a deep interest in its affairs, and is a very large property-owner.

The Conservative victory has become very popular in the capital, which has a penchant for being on the winning side, and the average man, especially Government employes, professes to have foreseen what was going to happen and to have voted accordingly.

The Cabinet Ministers will return early in the week and start to pack up, and while no appointments can be made constitutionally, following the Aberdeen precedent in 1896, there is considerable departmental routine which is likely to be disposed of. Then Sir Wilfrid will bow to the public demand, and tender the resignation of himself and Cabinet.

Thereupon Mr. Borden will be called upon to form his Ministry. This may happen possibly at the end of next week, but more probably the week after.

Public interest centres upon the probable selections for the Cabinet. Beyond a doubt, Mr. Borden will himself take the position that Sir Wilfrid Laurier filled as president of the Privy Council; though there are precedents for the Premier also being a Departmental Minister. Common report associates the name of Judge Doherty with the portfolio of Justice. Mr. Monk is talked of as Secretary of State and Messrs. Ames and Perley seem certain of Cabinet rank. For the position of Minister of Railways Mr. Crocket of York has support.

As to Ontario there is speculation regarding Hon. Geo. E. Foster. Claude Macdonell is spoken of as Minister of Labor. Major Sharpe or Col. Hughes as Minister of Militia, while other Cabinet material are W. B. Northrup, Haughton Lennox and Andrew Broder, Dr. Reid, T. E. Armstrong and T. W. Crothers.

The re-election of Cabinet Ministers will be but a formality and it is likely that the new Parliament will assemble the second week in November. The occasion will be of unprecedented brilliancy with the coming of the Duke of Connaught and the advent of a new Government.

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier relinquishes the leadership of the Opposition, as he is more than likely to do, an Ontario man is likely to be selected and Hugh Guthrie of Wellington is a very probable selection. He has the unique distinction of being the only Liberal who retained his normal majority.

May Head Opposition.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—"Under present circumstances," said Hon. Sydney Fisher at the Windsor Hotel last evening, "I think it is practically certain that the new Parliament will meet with Sir Wilfrid Laurer as leader of the Opposition. Of course, I cannot speak with authority, but that is my impression, and this will, of course, be decided later."

"What about the plans of the retiring Government?" he was asked.

"Under the present conditions we shall not try to hang on, but shall resign as quickly as can be managed," said Hon. Mr. Fisher. "But that is for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to say, not for me; and as to any discussion regarding the date of departure for Earl Grey, that must be subordinate to the interests of the Dominion. Public affairs here must be carried on, whether Lord Grey leaves or not. In any event the Duke of Connaught is not expected to arrive in Canada before Oct. 14th, and I do not imagine there is any doubt but that we shall be out before that time. As to whether Mr. Borden will have his Government ready by that time or not is, of course, his affair, but I have no doubt he will."

Mr. German's Offer.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—W. M. German, M.P. for Welland by acclamation, wired Mr. R. L. Borden early yesterday morning offering his seat in case the final returns for Halifax showed that the Conservative leader was defeated. The message is taken to indicate that Mr. German will support the Borden Administration.

PRINCIPALS IN NOTABLE WEDDING AND BRIDEGROOM'S VILLA.

BEECHWOOD

SNAP SHOT OF COLONEL AND MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR

Colonel John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeleine Talmage Force, who were married at Beechwood, Colonel Astor's villa at Newport, R. I., are now spending their honeymoon on board the Noma, Colonel Astor's yacht.

Colonel John Jacob Astor, head of his family in this country, is known as a soldier, globe trotter, author and inventor, and is equally prominent in the financial and social worlds, although his principal occupation is the administering of the large estate of the family. He was born in 1864, at Rhinebeck, N. Y., where he now has a large country home, his parents being William and Caroline Astor.

Miss Madeleine Talmage Force, one of the prettiest débutantes presented to society last season, is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Force, of New York, and will be twenty-one years old her next birthday.

Colonel Astor met his present wife at Bar Harbor in the summer of 1910 when she won a championship in a tennis tournament at that place. His yacht was in the harbor and he met her and her parents the first day he went ashore. They were frequently seen together and his attentions continued after the return to the city.

BRITAIN DELIGHTED AT THE RESULT OF THE ELECTIONS

Most Important Event Since the South African War, Say the Tariff Reformers

London, Sept. 23. The result of the Canadian election has put great heart in the tariff reform movement here, and has been received by the Unionist newspapers and Unionists generally with great enthusiasm.

Frederick E. Smyth, Unionist member of Parliament for Liverpool, says Canada's example will be of immense encouragement to the tariff reformers here and a corresponding rebuff to the free traders, while Lord Willoughby de Broke declares that he is delighted that Canada has not forgotten the old country.

Andrew Bonar Law, Unionist member of Parliament for the Dulwich Division of Camberwell, believes the result of the election will hasten the triumph of imperial preference. According to L. S. Amery, the journalist, the election is the most important decisive imperial event since the South African War. He declares Canada has given the lead, which England must follow.

William R. Peel, leader of the Municipal Reform party, says the Canadians defeated an American conspiracy to absorb their country, and that imperial reciprocity now is certain. Sir William Maxwell Aitken declares that time alone can make clear the far-reaching significance of the victory by which Canada set the seal of a new declaration of imperial faith and unity.

Viscount Ridley, former secretary to Lord Aberdeen, when he was Governor-General of Canada, said:

"The door bolted and barred by Premier Asquith has been flung open again by Canada. The tariff reformers will work with renewed vigor, and with certainty of success."

Among the more moderate of the tariff reform morning newspapers, the feeling of triumph is tempered by expressions of regret at the disappearance from political life of such a staunch imperialist as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the recognition that the victory is partly due to the Bourassa party. These papers declare they are glad that R. L. Borden has a majority large enough to render him independent of Mr. Bourassa's support.

The Daily Telegraph thinks it will be a long while before the statesmen of either the United States or Canada will propose another reciprocity conference. The Standard says it was a tempting bait offered by the Dominion and it would hardly have been strange had the electors succumbed to Washington's wooing.

JOY RIDERS HIT BRIDGE

One Man Is Killed And Six Others Injured.

Special to the Review.

Lockport, N.Y., Sept. 23.—Seven Buffalo men who were joy riding this morning struck the iron work on Burdick's bridge, in Erie county, and were thrown out. One man named Harris, was killed, and two others, Meahl and McCullough, had their legs broken. The other four occupants of the automobile received injuries of a less serious nature.

Brantford, Sept. 23.—Burglars broke into the Waterford post office last night and dynamited the safe. They secured three thousand dollars and made their escape.

Fifty Killed In Storm.

Naples, Sept. 23.—A hurricane of great violence and accompanied by a deluge of rain raged yesterday over the Vesuvian region, causing a heavy loss of life and enormous damage to property. It was estimated last night that fifty persons were killed.

Houses were razed by the wind, while others were inundated. Numerous boats in the Bay of Naples are missing, and are believed to have been sunk.

It is impossible as yet to estimate the total damage done by the storm, as telegraph and telephone wires are down, and roads are blocked. Several towns are in darkness owing to the electric lighting plants being compelled to shut down.

ARGENTINA LEADS WORLD

Special to the Review.

Camden, N.J., Sept. 23.—Argentina's super-dreadnought, "Morena," the biggest warship yet constructed, was launched here to-day. She will be mounted with 12 inch guns, and is built at a cost of eleven millions of dollars.

SWIMS ENGLISH CHANNEL AFTER 24-HOUR STRUGGLE.

WILLIAM BURGESS IN MID-CHANNEL.

T. W. Burgess, a Yorkshire man, after nine unsuccessful attempts, finally succeeded in swimming the English Channel from Dover to Cape Gris Nez. It took the plucky swimmer twenty-four hours to negotiate the narrow but dangerous span of water between the French and English coasts.

Numerous attempts have been made to swim the Channel since 1875, when Captain Matthew Webb swam from Dover to Calais in twenty-one hours and forty-five minutes, but no one has been able to duplicate Captain Webb's feat until Burgess accomplished it.

TURKEY SAYS "NO" TO ITALY

Holds Out Against Demands of Italy

Navy Ready to Enforce Demands in Tripoli

Paris, Sept. 23.—Advices received here from Rome say that the entire Italian naval force is ready, in case of emergency, for a conflict with Turkey if the Ottoman Government refuses to give consent for an Italian protectorate over Tripoli.

The Italian plan, according to these advices, embraces a bombardment of Tripoli and simultaneously a military expedition of 20,000 soldiers to block the Turkish coast along the Adriatic Sea, and to operate in Macedonia, Syria and Arabia with a view to protecting the numerous Italians living in those countries. This latter move, however, will be made only as an extreme measure.

While Italy is perfecting her plans all efforts are being made to induce Turkey to come to an amicable arrangement for insuring to Italy a preponderating influence over Tripoli, Italy even being willing to go to the extent of leaving Tripoli under the sovereignty of the sultan. It is understood that Germany and Austria are supporting this latter plan, and that France and Italy stand ready in case of its acceptance to indemnify Turkey.

The Italian squadron is rendezvousing at Tarante, and is under orders to be ready to start at a moment's notice. The commander of the squadron has instructions which are to be opened when his vessels are on the high seas.

It is believed that the seemingly belligerent attitude of Turkey is only a bluff to save her military honor, the advices from Rome say, and also at the same time to obtain a larger indemnity from Italy.

A squadron of torpedo-boat destroyers, which left Messina for Brindisi yesterday, was compelled after five hours in stormy weather to return to harbor owing to damages sustained by several of the vessels.

The Rome advices say the Italian fleet will be divided into five divisions and the Duke of Abruzzi will command one of these, composed of 22 destroyers, 28 torpedo boats, two cruisers and six submarines. The Rome despatch adds that Tarante has been proclaimed in a state of siege.

The Strike In Ireland.

Dublin, Sept. 23.—The first fruits of the declaration of a general strike of the railroads of Ireland by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants were not particularly promising from the standpoint of the union. Only about thirty of the local staff of the Great Northern Railway responded to the call and the local men of the Midland Great Western refused to quit.

The trains of the Great Northern system were being operated as usual yesterday. The strike on the Great Southern & Western Railway continues to be the mainstay of the general movement. Queenstown has been cut off from railway communication with the interior.

The fact that the executives of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants are Englishmen has not tended to make the strike order popular among Irishmen.

RUSSIANS TO BE SURE

Ask For Public Execution of the Assassin, Bogroff.

People Fear Secret Work By His Friends.

Special to the Review.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—Pressure is being brought to bear upon the government to bring about the public execution of the assassin of Stolypin, who has been condemned to death. Russian hangings are usually held inside the prisons, but the general opinion is that as Bogroff was a police agent, his powerful friends would smuggle him from the country and a false announcement of his execution would be given out.

LORD STRATHCONA SAILS FOR CANADA

His Successor To Be Appointed In Short Time.

Special to the Review.

London, Sept. 23.—Lord Strathcona sailed for Canada to-day via New York. It is expected that his successor as Lord High Commissioner in London will be appointed after his arrival in Montreal.

Jamaica's Plans.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 23.—Various proposals are before the Jamaican Government with the idea of preparing Jamaica for benefits that are believed likely to accrue through the opening of the Panama Canal. One of these is to make Kingston a coaling station and another contemplates the purchase of a floating drydock and the equipment of a repair plant for vessels. Before acting on the proposals, however, Sir Sydney Olivier, governor of Jamaica, will visit the canal zone next month and make a study of the canal situation and ascertain the benefits the colony is likely to get when the canal is ready for business.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause. Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it seizes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

LAURIER'S RETIREMENT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has said many times in the campaign that if he were defeated, he would retire. We suppose that this is so, and that he will retire. But Sir Wilfrid will retire without any stain, without anything to reflect on him personally. He retires because of a question of principle, in which the majority of the people of Canada heartily and strongly disagree with him. But this difference in view does not detract from the appreciation which the great majority of people show and feel for Sir Wilfrid's services to his country.

The life of a prime minister is a great strain. He surrenders all his waking moment to the service of the country. He is without personal leisure and without rest. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been unsparing of himself. He has always held before him a high ideal, and though perhaps mistaken in some of his views, and having to permit much graft that should have been prevented, he has carried out his policy of neverswerving from what he considered the best interest of Canada. He had a trying task to perform in holding down Quebec while at the same time trying to be just a little imperialistic. At the age of 70 years, Sir Wilfrid will go into private life with the respect and honor of all his countrymen who have fair minds; with the love and esteem of thousands of friends; and surely, with the gratitude of a country he has served so well.

"Rest is sweet," said Sir Wilfrid in the campaign, and after fifteen years of such strenuous life, it must be so. The Liberal party is now disorganized and demoralized. A new leader must be brought to the front. Whom shall it be? The campaign brought out George P. Graham as a strong man—as perhaps the strongest man of the cabinet. Will a seat be found for him? The retirement of Messrs. Fielding and Paterson is not so much regretted, for they were responsible for the reciprocity pact that was so intensely unpopular.

THE OUTLOOK

The next thing to excite public interest is the composition of Mr. Borden's cabinet. It will need a great deal of care and time, because Mr. Borden will determine on having a strong government without doubt. It looks as though Hon. Richard McBride, and Hon. Robert Rogers are certainties for the federal arena, and it is almost a certainty that George H. Perley, of Argenteuil will be a minister. It would not be surprising if one or more of the Ontario cabinet ministers were transplanted to Ottawa life, while Toronto will certainly be represented in the cabinet, perhaps by A.C. Macdonell of Toronto, as minister of labor.

It is certainly to be hoped that Mr Borden will recognize, as we believe he will, that the smashing blow to reciprocity does not indicate a desire by the people for a higher tariff, or that the people of Canada wish to endorse any movement that is not designed to widen trade relations within a right and proper channel. Mr. Borden has distinctly enunciated his view of the financial policy he considers best for the country, and this policy is a safe and a sound one for all. He said at Winnipeg, in enunciating his tariff policy, while in the western tour, "I believe in a policy which will preserve the fiscal autonomy of Canada and which will permit the production in this country of all useful articles that can be advantageously manufactured or produced by means of our natural resources, having due regard not only to the interest of the consumer but also to the welfare of our wageearning population. The labor necessary to convert our natural resources into commodities necessary for the use and convenience of the people should be as far as possible, performed in Canada and not in foreign countries, so that our workingmen and not those of other countries may find employment therein.

"The Liberal-Conservative party, if returned to power, will establish a permanent tariff commission of able independent, and representative men for the purpose of investigating and reporting on all matters connected with the tariff. No tariff should be so framed as to assist or permit, monopoly, exaction or oppression. Political or party expediency should not be permitted either to guide or impede those responsible for its provisions. In my conception the tariff should be based on principles of business, after a due investigation and ascertainment of facts. In other words it should be framed by methods and with principles which would apeal to common sense, reason and fairness."

Surely this is plain speaking. Need anyone be afraid, as some of the disappointed and sore Liberals are saying, that we return to a regime of High Tariff and the Big Interests? Such statements are pure poppycock.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

DOUGLAS FIR

It Could Replace in Many Instances White Pine for Manufacture

Wood-using industries in Canada reported to the Forestry Branch for 1910 the use of $542,000 worth of yellow pine and $69,500 worth of Douglas fir. From scientific investigation and experiment it has been ascertained that our native Douglas fir could in many instances replace yellow pine as at present used in Canada. Yellow pine is necessarily all imported from the United States, and if a species of native wood could be introduced to take the place of yellow pine, the change would be of great benefit in the development of Canadian industry. Douglas fir is a lighter wood than yellow pine and has a greater limit of elasticity: that is, stands more bending without taking a permanent set. Likewise compression perpendicular to grain is resisted equally by both species. In the Western States the uses of this wood are being rapidly extended, and its recently discovered qualities are introducing it for purposes in which previously only yellow pine was thought fitted. Douglas fir is a light and strong wood, easily worked. For railway cars and vehicles it is used throughout the United States, where its elasticity and durability recommend it for nearly all purposes except where a hardwood has to be used. Because of its beauty of grain and the attractive effects which may be obtained by staining, it is very popular for inside panel work, door and window frames, and cheap classes of furniture, particularly "mission" furniture. Furniture, car and vehicle manufacturers would benefit if Douglas fir was used to a greater extent in Canadian manufacture.

ANTWERP TO CANADA

A Deserted Wife in Belgium Located Her Husband in Montreal

Heinricus Van Rooy, of Antwerp, Belgium, after a dispute with his wife, which, he told the Montreal court, was trivial, decided to flee the country and go to America. A young widow, a friend of his whose husband had died only three days before, asked him to take her with him. He told the court that he did not wish to do this, but her coaxing and her beauty overcame his good resolutions, so he gave in to her request and brought her to Montreal. The couple were arrested and a charge of vagrancy was made against Van Rooy, and also a charge of non-support. He told the court that he was guilty, but was willing to make amends and be a law-abiding citizen, so he was discharged, both accusations being withdrawn by the wife, who after a hunt which led her through New York, Chicago, San Francisco and back to Montreal, where her husband was said by friends to be living, was only too willing to take him back and live with him once more.

When she discovered that her husband had left her Mrs. Van Rooy, feeling that she was in a measure to blame for his sudden departure, started out to find him and bring him back to live with her. She went first to New York, where she was unable to find any trace of him; then she went to Boston, where again her efforts proved fruitless. She later visited Chicago and San Francisco, also without results, but never losing hope or courage, she continued her search, as she felt certain her husband must be in America, where he often told her he wanted to go.

Friends who were better informed of his whereabouts than she was, told her that he believed the man she sought was living in Montreal. Through the agency of the detective bureau there she was finally able to locate him, and, angered at finding him with another woman, had him arrested. However, when she saw him again she was so overjoyed at the meeting, the police claim, that she was willing to forgive all past offences and begin life anew in the United States at Paterson, where the accused has secured a good position.

His liver is is sluggish—his stomach bad.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

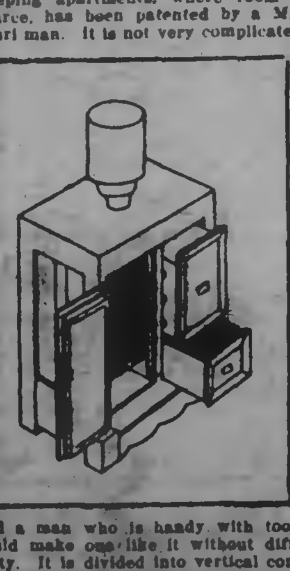
HANDY REFRIGERATOR

Little Fellow Useful in Small Families or Apartments

A small refrigerator that will hold everything a small family needs, and will be found specially useful in housekeeping apartments, where room is scarce, has been patented by a Missouri man. It is not very complicated and a man who is handy with tools could make one like it without difficulty. It is divided into vertical compartments and one side is devoted to trays of metal grating for holding the food. The other side has two drawers, the upper one twice as large as the lower one and designed to contain the ice. The lower drawer receives the melted water, which drips through the perforated bottom of the receptacle above it, and, in turn, has a perforated shelf across the middle. In one side of this drawer are two holes, one above the other and the lower one with a plug in it, so that the water may be maintained either above or below the shelf, according to what is to be kept thereon.



BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes, and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes, on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Despite sales of millions of bushels by holders realizing profits, the wheat market here whirled upward to-day again and again. Defeat of reciprocity formed the sole reason. After an exciting day, there was a nervous close, 2¼c to 3¼c higher than last night, and within ⅛c of the top figures reached. Oats, which would also have been subject to free competition from Canada, made a net advance of 1¾c to 2¼c. Corn rose ⅝c to 1c and provisions 2½c to 10c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ½d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d lower to ⅛d higher on corn. Antwerp closed unchanged on wheat; Buda Pest, ⅛c higher, and Berlin ⅝c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—There was considerable inquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, but as the prices bid were all from 3c to 4c per bushel out of line, no business was done. In sympathy with the break in prices for oats in the Winnipeg market an easier feeling prevailed here, but in the absence of any business prices were nominally unchanged. American No. 2 yellow corn was strong. The foreign demand for flour was quiet and bids for winter wheat 90 per cent.'s were 3d lower at 24s. The local trade is fairly good. A firm feeling prevails in mill feed under a good demand and small supplies. Cheese is strong at an advance of ⅛c to ¼c per lb., with a fair trade doing. Demand for butter is increasing. Chinese Conditions Better.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Conditions in West China are improving, according to a telegram received at the Methodist Mission rooms yesterday from Chungking. The message also reported the arrival of W. B. Albertson, R. E. Taylor and C. W. Baldorf from Chengtu.

Another message from Chunking, received late yesterday afternoon, reported the arrival from Chengtu of Rev. A. C. Hoffman and family and Miss Hall Speers. "Serious disturbances here; communication with Chengtu very uncertain; excitement abating; government efficient; all are well," read the message.

Mr. Shore feels very much relieved, as the responsibility of the missionaries in China during the recent riots worried him very much.

THE BACKWOODSMAN

By Acton Seymour

"No," admitted George.

"Well, that old fool is proud because he's an Injun. Ever hear anything funnier than that?"

Harry did not undertake to argue regarding pride of birth. But he looked on the old remnant of the great Abnaki race with interest. He knew history. He could appreciate what sentiments Noel, the Bear, descendant of chiefs, nourished in his bosom. The landlord addressed him with the patronizing familiarity he would have used toward a child.

"How do, Noel? Where from, where to, how be squaw?"

"How!" he returned gutturally, and resumed his position.

"No, you can't ever get anything out of 'em," went on the chatty landlord. "I asked him how squaw was. I meant the Injun girl they call the White Lily. Ever hear of her? Probably not. But in this country up here she's known, all right. I've seen handsome girls, but I've never laid eyes on a prettier one than she is. King of a great-grand-daughter of the old boy, there. The pride of the tribe, you know. Set up for a queen among 'em. Too bad she's got Injun in her. She'd make some feller a handsome wife if it wasn't for that. It's tough to think of her marryin' an Injun. Say, there's Blinn Wiggin got back. Been away somewhere into the woods, I cal'late, to let that stripe acrost his face get well."

George had not seen his foe since that bitter meeting at which their enmity began.

Young Wiggin advanced, swaggering.

The old Indian stood up, and seemed to be awaiting him.

For an instant, Wiggin hesitated. The appearance of old Noel did not please him, that was plain. Harry could see that his face changed. But he walked on. When he was about to pass the Indian, Noel raised his brown hand.

"I wait here. She wait there. You have not come."

"Oh, shut up!" snapped the young man.

"She wait. You have promised," insisted the Indian. "You go back with me."

Wiggin perceived that the others were listening or had overheard. He grew red and angry.

"I tell you to close your mouth," he commanded. "If you've got business with me, talk in private. I haven't got any time for you now."

But the old Indian stepped in front of him when he attempted to pass.

"I have wait. I have hunt long for you. She cannot wait longer. This is the time to talk. Do you come with me?"

"I've given you your warning. You keep out of my way!"

He thrust his arm against Noel to push him aside. The Indian clung to him. Wiggin, beside himself, cursed, leaped back, and struck the old man. Noel fell, and Wiggin came on. He glared at George, challenging him with his eyes. But Harry, shocked though he was by the brutal act, said nothing. Another public quarrel with this young fire eater was not to his taste. He had an account to settle with Blinn Wiggin, but he proposed to attend to it at a more fitting time.

The landlord was not restrained by such considerations.

"That was about as dirty a trick as I ever saw done," he declared. "You did take a man of your size the other day, but you struck him when he wasn't looking. Now, you hit a man a hundred years old. We'll ride you on a rail, Wiggin, if you keep this up." The Indian had struggled to his feet. "It's too bad, Noel. Did he hurt you much?"

"He hurt me here," replied Noel, drawing up his tall form and patting his breast. "For she wait. If I not bring him, she die of shame and sorrow."

"Say, what's the trouble here, anyway?" demanded the landlord. "Now, you needn't flare up at me, Wiggin. You tackle me, and I'll brain you with this chair. What are you battering that old man for?"

"None of your devilish business! If I've got any mail here, give it to me. That's all the busines I've got with you."

"There isnt any mail for you."

Wiggin turned to leave.

"I say you come," cried Noel, his voice breaking.

But Wiggin hastened down the street. Noel tried to follow, but he staggered, and the landlord ran after him and brought him back to the porch.

"It's too bad, old man," he said soothingly. "You're only an Injun, but doin that to you wa'n't right. You seemed to have business with him about some 'she.' What's the matter?" The landlord displayed the curiosity of the busy-body.

Noel drew himself up. He towered even above George's stalwart figure.

"My talk for him, not you," he said, with dignity. The wrinkles that marked his face were set into deep lines that made his visage grim. He turned, and walked away.

"I wouldn't want to have that Injun after me, even if he is a hundred years old," vouchsafed the landlord. "I'll tell you what it is, son, that deviler of a Wiggin has got mixed up with the White Lily. If he's done her dirt, there's trouble ahead for him, and some white folks I know of will be willing to help make it."

The return of the brisk stranger broke in on their conversation. He came with Jepson Wiggin at his heels. The old man was worried and haggard.

"I'd like to see you in private," the stranger informed George crisply. The young man led the way to his room, and the two followed.

When they were closeted, the stranger began without preamble.

"I'm from the main office of the Great Trust Co., Mr. George. You were sent up here on forestry work. You were supposed to be in the woods with our cruisers. Just what authority do you have to make talk with Mr. Jepson, here, on matters you know nothing about?"

"I had no authority," confessed Harry.

The old man began to curse, but the stranger snapped his finger at him, and ordered him to keep still.

"You deserve to be discharged, George, and I have full power to fire you. We make no allowances, understand? You've been here on a spree with the rest of these yahoos, when you——"

"I have been here doing no such thing," cried Harry indignantly.

"You've been loafing here, making talk about matters that you have no license to meddle with. Our company is not what you try to make it out. Jepson has told me how you tried to bribe him. I say, I ought to discharge you. But I'm going to favor you a little. I'm going to allow that you'd been drinking and didn't realize what you were talking about. You get into the woods, where you belong. You stay there, attending to your work, and we'll let the matter drop. Remember that I'm doing you a special favor. Make good, now, and I won't report you."

It was threat, promise, and bribe combined. The insolence of it stung the young man. It was perfectly plain to him that the Great Trust Co. and Wiggin were in collusion. The prompt visit of this stranger to the old man, and their equally prompt visit to squelch the man who had presumed to interfere with the plot, showed him all.

Had George been less indignant, he might have given up, there and then, his vague plans of helping Clare Corran. But his spirit rose under this contempt.

"You're not dealing with a ten-year-old in this matter," he blurted. "I know perfectly well what the scheme is, and you're talking big to the wrong man — let me tell you that!"

The stranger knew men. He understood that he had to do with no craven.

Attempt at Impersonation.

Chatham, Sept. 23.—Thomas Cooper of Detroit, charged with attempted impersonation in the McCoig-Stanworth election Wednesday, was arrested yesterday afternoon. The charge against Cooper is that he went into city polling division No. 9, where he attempted to impersonate a man named Johnston. He was almost instantly recognized by Conservative scrutineers, who demanded that he be made to take the oath. He refused to do so, and had to leave the poll without voting. Later his arrest was ordered.

Cooper was the man who came up here to give evidence for the prosecution in the case instituted by the Liberal executive against John Robinson.

Drink Sweet Milk after eating onions; it will purify the breath so that no odor will remain.

To Carry Butter to a picnic in hot weather pack it into a cup, and press a piece of ice in the centre to keep it cool.

When Washing Brushes of any kind add a little ammonia to the water. There is less danger of the bristles dropping out.

Do Not Leave Wooden Tubs Dry, or they will quickly crack and come apart. Keep a little water always standing in them.

Fingers Stained with Fresh Fruit, walnuts, etc., should be dipped in strong tea, rubbed with a nail brush, and then washed in warm water.

To Remove Fly Spots from mirrors and picture glasses, take a cloth and dip in a little pure paraffin, rub the spots well, then polish with a dry duster or chamois.

Always commence to cut a cucumber at the thick end; the thin end has a bitter taste. If the whole cucumber is not cut up, stand the cut end of the unused half in a basin of cold water.

Before Filling Salt Cellars, place the table salt in a slow oven to dry thoroughly. Allow it to get cold, and by doing so the salt will keep finely powdered instead of hardening into a solid mass.

To Make New Potatoes Scrape easily, put them to soak a little while with a small piece of common soda in the water. You will find them scrape and clean beautifully; also the fingers will not be soiled.

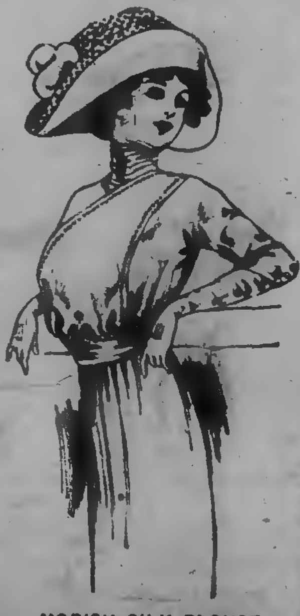
To Stop the Ravages of Moths, when they have made their appearance, wrap the article in thin cloths, then cover with wet Turkish towels and put them in the oven to steam. This will always rout moths.

Sometimes Oil Lamps throw a very dull light. Try placing a small lump of camphor in the oil vessel, and you will find that in a very short time the light will become quite bright. If you have no camphor at hand, a few drops of vinegar will answer the purpose.

If a Teaspoonful of Glycerine be added to every four pounds of any kind of jam or marmalade a quarter of an hour before boiling is completed it will be found to remove the foggy appearance, and make the preserve transparent and firmer than the usual home-made jams.

For Removing Grass Stains from flannel get some lump fuller's earth from the chemist, wet it, and place on the stain. Let it remain there for a couple of hours, and then rub lightly. If the first application does not remove the stain apply a second time, brushing off when perfectly dry.

To Take Out Rain Marks, iron the cloth on the right side with a moderately hot iron, placing a clean damp cloth between the material and the iron. The cloth must be kept damp in order to be a success. Treated in this way, the rain marks will not only disappear but the cloth will not spot again.



MODISH SILK BLOUSE

Our sketch above illustrates a delightful model for a silk bodice. It is without trimming of any sort save a narrow running of silk braid down each side of front, and around neck and sleeves.

This design would also work out well in voile or cashmere.

GOOD MANNERS

It is the greatest mistake to think that manners are only for society, and are to be set aside with our outdoor garments when we come home. If manners are meant to hide the unsightly side of human nature, to clothe the nakedness which shocks our highly-cultivated sense of what is fitting, it is surely at home that this primitive aspect is most likely to obtrude, and it is just as shocking when displayed at our own fireside as to the world at large. If parents taught the sons of the house to be polite to their sisters, and if they themselves were polite to each other, there would be fewer unhappy homes. Boys often think that manners are only meant for girls, but they would be none the worse or less manly for knowing how to behave; while it the greatest help to a girl when she goes out in the world to be able to feel at ease in society, to enter and leave a room gracefully, and to find the right thing to say when her mother's friends speak to her.

Mildew

If linen is mildewed, rub the spots with brown soap, then apply a paste of chalk-and-water, and put the article in the sun. After two or three applications the mildew will be bleached out; the article should then be washed thoroughly all over.

Deathly Cramps, Stomach was Bloated

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

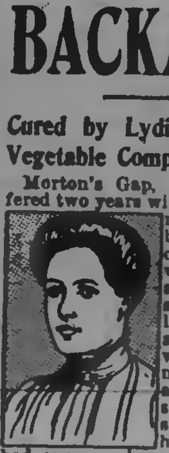
THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

"THE FRENCH MAID"

A New Comedy With Many Taking Features — Bright Tuneful Melodies

It is a pleasure to announce the coming on Wednesday next, Sept. 27, of the big musical comedy success, "The French Maid," to this city. The piece is an American adaptation of the clever Parisian hit, "Gabrille." The story deals first with a party of American tourists, who are summering at a seashore resort at the south of France.

The second act takes place in the famous "Jardin De Paris" roof garden, Paris. It is in this scene that possibly one of the greatest feats of the scenic artist has been accomplished. Electrical effects galore create such a beautiful eye picture that invariably this scene gets a round of applause when the curtain first arises on it.

The chorus, of which there is a large number, has been carefully selected with the idea in view of having not only pretty girls, but good singers as well as dancers. A great deal of the wardrobe used in the production of "The French Maid" is French make and some of the latest models of Parisian gowns are to be seen in it.

A cast of principals well known to the larger cities, in musical comedy, has been engaged for this season.

Mlle. Fanchette, of the original Paris production, will have her same title role in the American adaptation. Billy Hallman and Tony Murphy will be seen in two of the principal roles. Raymond Knox and George Herbert have two important parts. Edgar Robertson, Arthur Tillet, Eddie Nichols, Tommy Brewster and Edgar Loraine are well cast in some of the principal male roles.

Taken as a whole "The French Maid" is a big musical comedy of twenty-two musical numbers, full of pretty music, and the production will rank as one of the successes of the coming season, and is a good offering to inaugurate the season of 1911 with.

GATHERING OF THE CLAN AT KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Splendid Program for Scotch People and Their Friends Was Enjoyed by Large Attendance.

Scotch customs, Scotch witticisms, Scotch mannerisms, Scotch selections and Scotch people prevailed at Knox church last night when about three hundred laddies and lassies from the land of the heather with sixty of their Canadian friends sat down to a banquet prepared in true Scottish style. So great was the advance sale of tickets that the number had to be limited. Never in the history of Knox church has there been such a gathering of the clan.

THE SUPPER.

At 7.15 o'clock the guests sat down to tables arranged in the spacious banquet hall. The room was decorated with the famous Scotch plaid and heather. The table of honor at which there sat Rev. H. J. Keith, Mrs. Keith, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm McCathergs, and the members of the committee, was placed under an arch decorated with Scottish symbols and the whole scene presented a very pleasing effect. Before supper was commenced Mr. Roy took a flashlight of the gathering.

The menu consisted of Scotch dishes prepared by the Scotch wives of the community and it was enjoyed by Canadians as well as by the Scotch element.

THE PROGRAM.

The lengthy program called by Rev. H. J. Keith, chairman, was very interesting. The sound of the land of the heather touched the souls of the Scotchmen and they were watching the doorway for the appearance of bagpipes, so "homeake" was the gathering.

The talent was all local excepting Mr. J. A. McNeill, a soloist from Toronto, who came to the city for the occasion. Several of the numbers were encored and the entertainment lasted until nearly eleven o'clock.

During the intervals pictures of Scotch scenes were shown upon a sheet and as all haunts were recognized it was the signal for great applause.

Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray-st. Baptist church was present and spoke a few moments bringing a message of congratulation from his church. With his customary wit he kept the audience in good humor.

The following was the program:

Opening remarks—Rev. H. J. Keith.

Quartette—"March of the Cameron Men."

Solo—"Loch Lomond," Mrs. Lowrie.

Solo—"Hame," Mr. J. McNeill.
